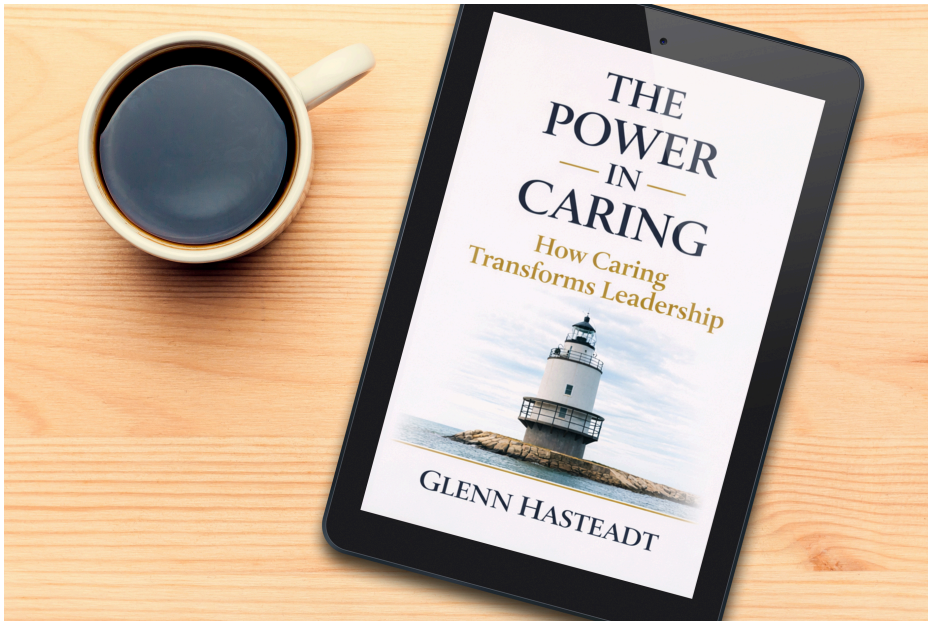
Helping leaders create team cultures where people thrive, do their best work, and achieve lasting success in a fun, supportive environment.

Short Bio

Glenn Hasteadt, CGCIO, is a servant-leadership speaker, facilitator, and author of The Power in Caring: How Caring Transforms Leadership. For more than two decades he has built cultures rooted in trust, emotional safety, and people-centered leadership across government, technology, and community organizations. As a strategic IT leader he led nationally recognized teams through crisis, transformation, and rapid change. His belief is simple: people do their best work when they feel cared for. Caring is not soft. It is catalytic.



About Glenn

Glenn teaches and practices caring leadership with high-performing teams. From that work he developed an easy-to-use methodology any leader can apply — not a theory to admire, but habits that change how a team communicates, sets expectations, and treats one another.

His sessions are practical, human, and story-driven. Audiences hear what it looks like when a team finally exhales: when people feel safe enough to speak honestly, collaborate freely, and bring their best ideas forward. He speaks to both new and current leaders, and he is especially at home with organizations that need culture change they can use on Monday morning.

PREMIER KEYNOTE

The Power in Caring: How Caring Impacts Leadership

Great team culture is not a poster. It is what leaders do, repeatedly, so people feel they belong and can contribute without judgment.

In this keynote, Glenn shows the practical steps leaders can take to build that culture on five practices:

- Great communication so people know what matters and feel heard
- Clear expectations so everyone knows what good looks like
- Trust that makes honest conversation possible
- Support that raises people up without lowering the standard
- Safety so teams can speak up, take smart risks, and do their best work

Built on years of leadership experience and the ideas in The Power in Caring, the session gives new and experienced leaders a clear, usable path to ongoing team success. Attendees leave with real habits, not a binder of theory, and an understanding of how caring becomes a strategic advantage for team performance and culture

WHO IT IS FOR

Leadership conferences, management retreats, operations leaders, new-leader programs, and culture or engagement events.

FORMAT

Typically a 45-60 minute keynote. Can be adapted as a breakout or a facilitated session. Confirm length and format when booking.

Also Available

- Servant Leadership from the Frontline. Practical examples of leading well in the real world, not another program built only on theory.
- Leading Through Crisis with Compassion. How caring leadership holds a team together through change, pressure, and crisis.

Why book Glenn?

- A practitioner who has led teams, not merely studied them
- A practical, proven methodology filled with real-world actions any leader can apply immediately.
- Delivered with passion and just enough audience participation to engage without distracting.
- Story-driven sessions aimed at immediate use that hold the audience's attention.
- Equally useful for new, emerging and seasoned leaders

RECOMMENDATION

I highly recommend Glenn Hasteadt as a keynote speaker. Glenn delivered an insightful and inspiring closing keynote at the 2026 GMIS Meets conference, providing the perfect conclusion to our event. His enthusiasm and professionalism were evident throughout the entire process, and his flexibility made him a pleasure to work with.

Most importantly, Glenn has a genuine ability to connect with an audience. His engaging presentation style, relatable insights, and positive energy kept attendees involved and left them with meaningful takeaways. Glenn was an outstanding addition to our program, and I would confidently recommend him to any organization looking for a dynamic, professional, and impactful speaker.
