

A GUIDE FOR WOMEN

STUCK, EXHAUSTED & STILL IN PAIN?

If you've tried everything and nothing seems to work, discover why—and how subconscious healing, including hypnosis, can help you finally feel relief, reconnect, and start living again

BY LOTUS CHEONG

HI, I'M LOTUS

I'm a mother.

For a long time I carried my life without complaint, always there for everyone, always the one people could depend on. I held everything together until it became too much, and I found myself wanting to walk away from the life I had built because it no longer felt sustainable.

That was when I found Quantum Healing Hypnosis Technique (QHHT), and it changed everything for me.

Through hypnosis, I was able to shift out of constant fight or flight and into a place where I no longer feared what was ahead. I didn't change my life overnight, but I began to experience it in a completely different way.

This guide will help you understand the 3 key factors that have likely led to this place in your life, and 4 principles that will help you get unstuck.

After reading this guide, you'll know whether this working together is the right solution for you,especially if you feel stuck or at a crossroads and have tried "everything else" and nothing worked.

Lotus Cheong

LET'S DO IT!

01 THE FEELING YOU HAVEN'T BEEN ABLE TO EXPLAIN

Are you exhausted? Even after a good night's rest? There comes a moment in a woman's life that is not marked by a single event, but by a quiet realization that settles gently beneath the surface of everything she has built. On the outside, your life appears full and functioning, shaped by years of responsibility, care, and accomplishment, yet within you there is a subtle sense that something essential has drifted out of reach.

You have done what was expected of you and often more than what was asked, holding together the many layers of your world with competence and resilience, and still there is a quiet question that lingers in the background of your days. It is not loud enough to disrupt your life, yet it is persistent enough that it cannot be ignored.

There is a feeling that you are moving through the motions of a life that looks right, while something deeper within you waits to be felt, heard, and remembered. You may not have the language for it yet, but you know that the way you have been living no longer reflects the fullness of who you are becoming.

You may find yourself thinking more than you used to, turning decisions over in your mind, searching for clarity that once came more easily, while a quiet distance forms between you and the certainty you once trusted. What used to feel natural can now feel effortful, and what once felt fulfilling may now feel incomplete in a way that is difficult to explain.

This moment is not a sign that something has gone wrong, but rather an indication that something within you is ready to change in a way that cannot be addressed at the surface level.

02 THE SUBTLE WAYS THIS HAS BEEN UNFOLDING

What you are experiencing may be difficult to name, yet it shows up in quiet and familiar ways throughout your days. It is not always dramatic or obvious, which is why it can go unspoken for so long, but it is present in the spaces where ease used to live.

You may notice that you are doing everything you need to do, moving through your responsibilities with the same capability you have always had, yet something within you feels slightly removed from it all. There can be a sense that you are participating in your life rather than fully inhabiting it, as though you are present in form but not fully connected in feeling.

Decisions that once felt simple may now require more thought, more processing, and more time, not because you are incapable, but because your internal sense of clarity feels less accessible. You may find yourself second-guessing choices that you would have once trusted, or looking outside of yourself for confirmation in ways that feel unfamiliar.

“I HAVE LOST MY DRIVE”

There can also be a quiet dulling of desire, where what you once wanted or worked toward no longer carries the same energy. It is not that you have lost your drive, but rather that the connection to what feels meaningful has shifted, leaving you unsure of what you truly want now.

“DOING MORE WON’T FIX THIS”

Even rest can feel incomplete, as though your body pauses but your system does not fully settle. You may give yourself time to slow down, yet still carry an underlying tension that does not fully release, creating a sense of ongoing fatigue that is not resolved by sleep alone.

At times, there may be a subtle emotional distance, where joy feels quieter, reactions feel muted, and experiences do not land with the same depth they once did. You continue to move through your life with care and intention, yet something within you is asking for a deeper level of connection that has not yet been restored.

This is often described as feeling stuck, yet what is truly present is not a lack of movement, but a lack of alignment. You are still moving, still doing, still showing up, and yet the connection between who you are and how you are living has begun to loosen.

This is not a failure of effort or ability. It is a signal that something within you is ready to be reconnected in a way that goes beyond simply doing more or trying harder.

03 HOW THIS QUIETLY TOOK SHAPE

What you are experiencing did not arrive all at once, and it is not the result of something you did wrong. It has been forming quietly over time, shaped by the way you have learned to move through your life, respond to what was needed, and become who you needed to be in order to hold everything together.

You have adapted in ways that allowed you to be capable, reliable, and strong, meeting the expectations placed upon you while often anticipating what was needed before it was even asked. These ways of being were not accidental, and they served you well, allowing you to build a life that is full, structured, and functioning.

At the same time, this outward orientation required something of you. As your attention moved toward responsibilities, relationships, and outcomes, your inner signals became quieter, not because they disappeared, but because they were no longer the primary guide for how you made decisions. Over time, it became natural to think your way through life rather than feel your way through it, to analyze rather than sense, to respond rather than pause.

Your nervous system adapted to this rhythm, becoming accustomed to a steady state of doing, organizing, and maintaining. You keep busy, all the time. This state can feel productive and even necessary, yet it leaves little space for stillness, for listening, or for the deeper awareness that arises when there is room to notice what is happening within you.

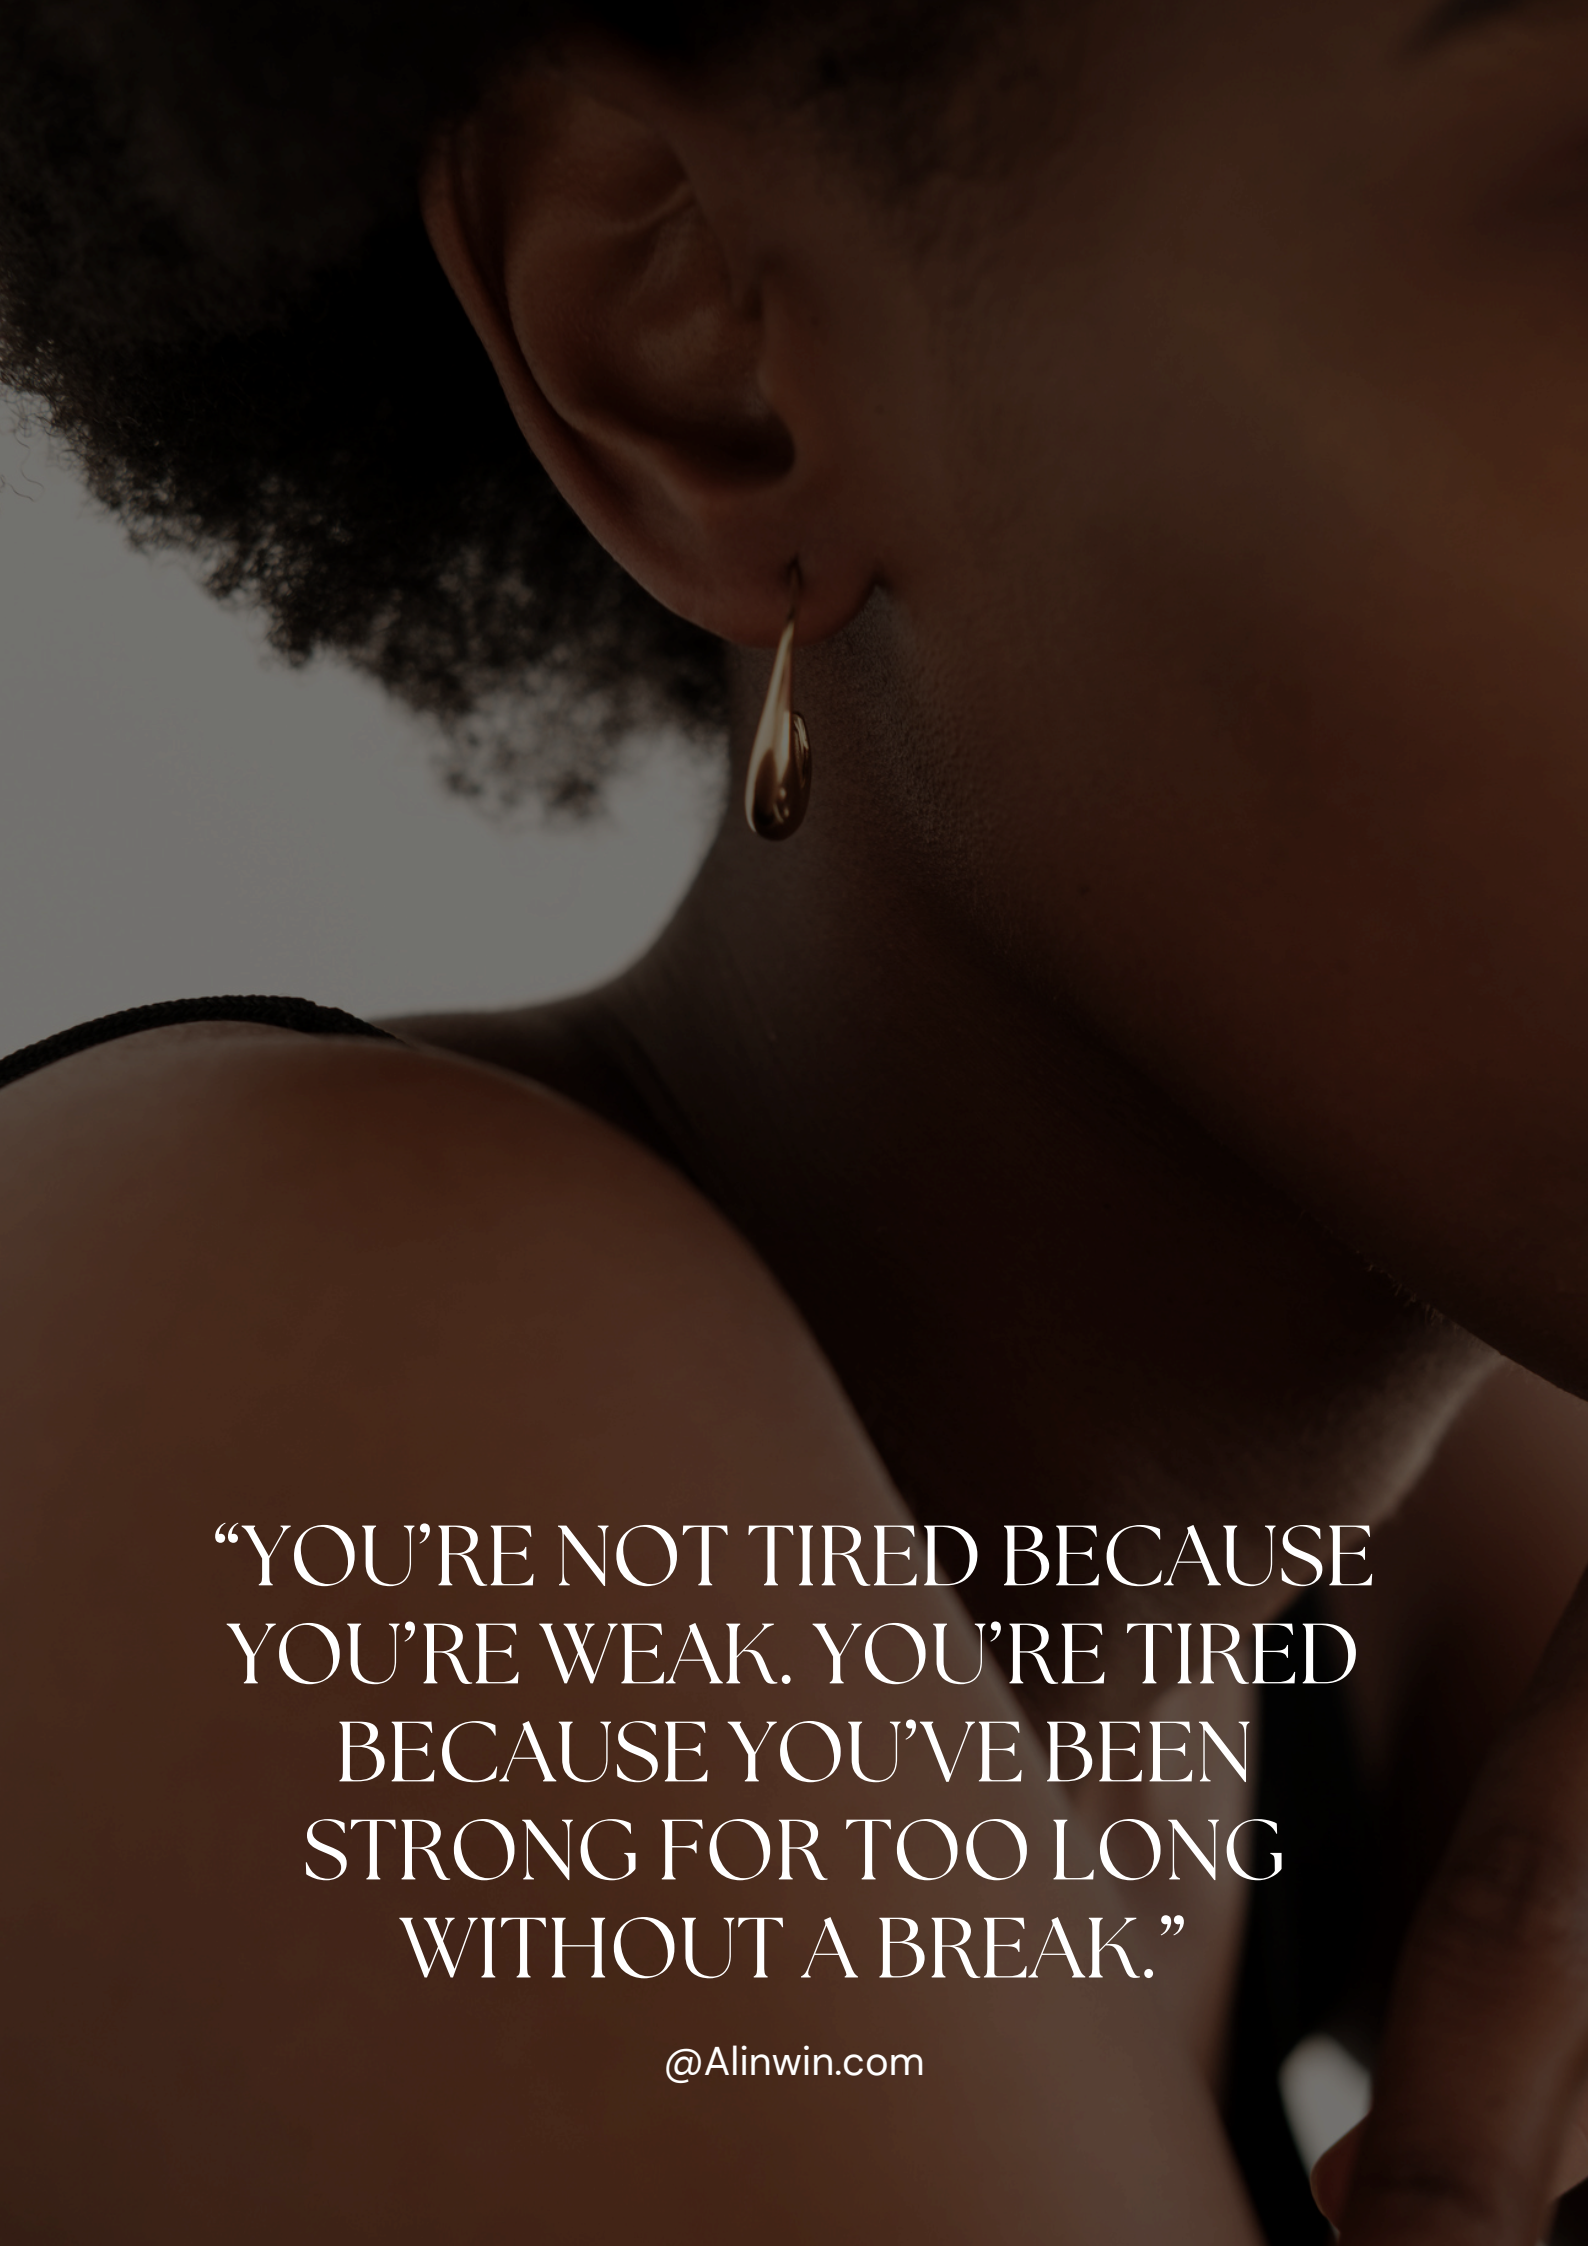
“I FEEL SO STUCK”

Beneath all of this, your subconscious has been learning and reinforcing patterns based on what has been repeated. It has been organizing your experiences into familiar pathways, shaping how you respond, what you expect, and what feels safe. These patterns continue to operate even when your conscious awareness begins to shift, creating a sense that part of you is ready for something different while another part continues to hold you in place.

This is not a conflict that needs to be forced into resolution, but a process that asks to be understood.

The part of you that has learned to function in this way is not working against you, and it is not something to be removed. It is a part of your system that has been maintaining stability, even if that stability no longer reflects the direction you are moving toward.

As you begin to notice this more clearly, you may sense that what feels like being stuck is not a lack of movement, but a moment where your internal patterns have not yet caught up with who you are becoming.



“YOU’RE NOT TIRED BECAUSE YOU’RE WEAK. YOU’RE TIRED BECAUSE YOU’VE BEEN STRONG FOR TOO LONG WITHOUT A BREAK.”
@Alinwin.com

04 WHY YOU KEEP FINDING YOURSELF IN THE SAME PLACE

At some point, you may have begun looking for ways to shift what you are feeling, reaching for tools that are widely offered and often recommended. You may have explored mindset work, personal development practices, or conversations that helped you understand yourself more clearly, and in many ways, these efforts have brought you insight and awareness.

You may have also opened yourself to deeper experiences, including plant medicine journeys such as psilocybin or ayahuasca, where you were able to access profound states of insight, emotion, and expanded awareness that revealed parts of yourself you had not previously seen. You may have journaled, reflected, and integrated what you could, carrying those moments of clarity with you as you returned to your daily life, and even with all of this, you may sense that something has not fully anchored in the way you expected it to.

You may now understand your patterns better than you once did. You may be able to see where they began, how they formed, and even why they continue. You may have learned how to reframe your thoughts, how to approach situations differently, and how to move through certain experiences with more intention.

And still, something has not fully shifted. You may feel can be a quiet frustration in this, a sense that you know what needs to change, yet the change does not seem to hold in the way you expect it to. You may find that you return to familiar responses, even when you are aware of them, or that the clarity you feel in one moment becomes less accessible in another.

“REAL CHANGE HAPPENS WHEN DEEPER LAYERS ARE ENGAGED”

This does not mean that what you have done has not been valuable. It means that much of what you have been working with has been happening at the level of the conscious mind, where understanding lives, but where deeper patterns are not always rewritten.

The subconscious mind operates differently. It holds the patterns that have been repeated, the responses that have been reinforced, and the ways of being that have become familiar over time. These patterns do not shift simply because they are understood. They shift when they are experienced and updated at the level where they were originally formed.

This is why effort alone can feel insufficient, and why willpower can create change for a period of time without sustaining it. It is not a reflection of your ability or commitment. It is a reflection of where the work has been taking place.

As you begin to see this more clearly, there can be a sense of relief, because the experience of being stuck is no longer something you need to push against. It becomes something you can approach differently, with an understanding that real change involves engaging the deeper layers of your system in a way that feels supportive rather than forceful.

05 THE SUBCONSCIOUS LAYER SHAPING YOUR REALITY

Beneath everything you are experiencing, there is a part of you quietly organizing your patterns, responses, and way of being. This part is the subconscious, and it influences how you think, feel, and act in ways that are often automatic.

It learns through repetition and lived experience, holding onto what feels safe and familiar rather than what feels expansive. Over time, these patterns shape your identity and guide your decisions without conscious effort.

When your awareness begins to change, your subconscious does not immediately update. It continues to guide you toward what it knows, even when that no longer reflects what you want.

Your Subconscious holds:

- the patterns you fall back into, even when a part of you knows this is not what you want anymore
- the decisions that feel unclear or overthought
- the ways you respond automatically in moments that matter
- the identity you have been living from, even as something within you begins to change
- the feeling of being stuck, even when a part of you is ready for something more

Change becomes about working with your system in a way that feels natural and aligned.

06 WHERE TRUE CHANGE BEGINS

As you move through your life, you may begin to sense that something within you has already changed, even if your outer life has not yet caught up. You feel pulled toward something more, yet much of your life still operates from the version of you shaped by years of responsibility and expectation. This creates a quiet tension, where one part of you is expanding while another remains rooted in what is familiar.

This is the space you have been living in. You are no longer fully aligned with who you were, yet not fully anchored in who you are becoming. This is not failure. It is transition.

"QHHT SUBCONSCIOUS WORK CREATES ALIGNMENT"

Your subconscious continues to guide you toward what it knows, even as another part of you is ready for something different. This can feel like being pulled in two directions, where clarity comes and goes.

What begins to shift this is not effort, but access. Access to the deeper layer where your patterns and identity are formed.

Through hypnosis, you are able to enter a receptive state where these patterns can be experienced and updated at their root.
As this happens, your system begins to align, and movement forward starts to feel natural rather than forced.

07 THE SHIFT INTO ALIGNMENT

After Hypnosis, the Shift happens. As this shift begins, it often feels subtle, as though something within you has softened rather than something new being added. Your thoughts may feel quieter, decisions clearer, and your experience of life more steady and grounded.

You may begin to feel more present in your body and less caught in the patterns that once guided your responses. Desire becomes easier to access, not as something you search for, but as something that arises naturally from within you. There is a growing sense of steadiness, where you feel less pulled in different directions and more anchored in yourself.

As this integrates, you begin to move through your life with more clarity and ease. Things feel different, even if your circumstances remain the same. You may notice yourself responding in new ways, as though you are becoming familiar with a version of yourself you have not fully lived before.

“WILL THIS WORK FOR ME?”

QHHT is for you if:

- you feel stuck in patterns you understand but have not been able to change
- you have done personal development work and are ready for something deeper
- you overthink decisions that once felt clear
- you feel disconnected from what you truly want
- you sense that you are in between versions of yourself
- you are ready for change that feels natural and lasting
- you are open to exploring yourself beyond the surface level

If this feels steady and true for you, then I’d love to chat!

HAPPY CUSTOMERS

Our session was nothing short of phenomenal and deeply, deeply validating, awakening truths that Lotus mirrored for me. Her guidance through my subconscious was strong and empathetic; she met my spirit with gentle insistence and grace. I emerged with clarity and decisiveness. I highly, highly recommend Lotus. - Gwendoline V.

Lotus is empathetic and she really is an expert in guiding you through this hypnosis. At no time did I feel out of control or manipulated. I actually felt that I tapped into a side of myself that I knew existed but could not reach. So, I would recommend this for all who seek to expand their life experience. - Adrienne E.

I had an incredible QHHT session with Lotus. I connected with my Higher Self, received healing, and got answers to all my questions. Lotus is intuitive, grounded, and truly gifted — a diamond in the rough. Highly recommend for anyone seeking spiritual, emotional, or physical transformation. - Karolina G.

A SIMPLE NEXT STEP

Does this guide resonate with you - and where you are now?

As you come to the end of this guide, you may notice a sense of clarity, not because everything has been answered, but because what you have been feeling now makes more sense. If something in you feels ready, even in a quiet and steady way, the next step is simply to explore this further.

When we work together through deep hypnosis work, you are able to access the subconscious patterns that have been holding you in place and begin to shift them in a way that feels natural and aligned with who you are becoming.

If this resonates with you, take a simple next step.

Schedule a free 15-minute consultation to see if this is for you. Call 503 - 683-1295 or email me at hilotus@alinwin.com

Book Now

CHECK OUT: ALINWIN.COM