HOW TO USE THIS CALENDAR

1 Keep it where you will see it every night.
Beside the bed, on the fridge, in a kitchen drawer. The point is that your eyes land on it before the day is over.

2 At each new moon, write the month's word in that day's square.
Small, in ink. The word is printed at the top of every month, beside the symbol.

3 Each night, do the small thing on the month's page.
Then say the word once under your breath, and cross off the day.

4 At each full moon, circle the word.
Circle it once, all the way around.

5 On the last night of the month, draw a line under the whole month.
Say the word one last time and turn the page.

Missed a night? Cross off two the next night. The count matters more than the hour.

Moon times in this calendar are US Central Time. If you live somewhere else, a moon may fall a day earlier or later where you are. Go by your own sky. Print single-sided if you can. This calendar is meant to be written on.

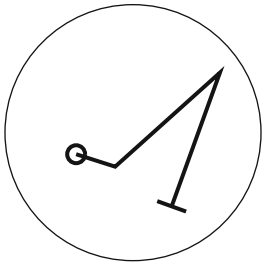
LOOK BACK AT WHAT YOU DID



Every night, you crossed off a day.

Every new moon, you wrote a word.

Every full moon, you circled it.

You did one small thing, said one word under your breath, and drew a sigil without ever asking what it was for.

THAT IS A SPELL.

A word, an act, and a count kept against the moon. People have cast it for as long as there have been calendars: marking the day, naming the want, and keeping the tally.

If you are reading this page first, turn back to January. The calendar is already working.

WHEN YOU WANT IT MADE FOR YOU

This calendar works for anyone. These work for you: your chart, your name, your life.
