This history is written to tell the reader what no student ever learned in any high school anywhere—ironically, it is the information and history about the most essential, core beliefs held by nearly every individual.

After a somewhat elementary physics and biology introduction and then a somewhat typical high school-like beginning history lesson, the reader can expect to learn what is forbidden to be taught.

Rather than offering a handful of missing jig-saw pieces, the entire history of the world that is necessary will be set forth with those "forbidden" pieces already in place.

This history book is modified from a script for The History of the World: Part I.
