125 Years of Conservation, Education and Recreation

From camping under the stars to hiking through back country trails, Ontario parks have been offering people across Ontario a great way to stay healthy and experience our province for 125 years.

In 1893, Algonquin Provincial Park became the very first provincial park in Ontario. This year, Ontario Parks is celebrating the 125th anniversary of our provincial park system with events, music, art and more.

Visit one of our provincial parks to discover something new. With a variety of trails for hiking, waterways for canoeing, and countless other outdoor activities - Ontario Parks has something for everyone.

From the Group of Seven to Indigenous artists - and even modern-day creatives - the landscapes of Ontario Parks continue to inspire the creation of outstanding works of art. A brand-new art-based program designed to connect people with nature through hands-on art activities, will be offered in parks across the province. The public will be invited to give back, learn, and participate in stewardship programs to help protect the incredible amount of biodiversity found in provincial parks, bioblitz events, invasive species removal, and wildlife monitoring. Events and activities will be happening all year at parks across the province, so be sure to check out the Ontario Parks website for all the newest information.

Ontario's plan to create fairness and opportunity during this period of rapid economic change includes a higher minimum wage and better working conditions, free tuition for hundreds of thousands of students, easier access to affordable child care, and free prescription drugs for everyone under 25 through the biggest expansion of medicare in a generation.

"Ontario has a world-class parks system, and this anniversary allows us to celebrate the fantastic opportunities right in our backyard. Our parks offer something for everyone so check out what is happening at your local park or venture to one farther away for an exciting new adventure."

— Kathryn McGarry, Minister of Natural Resources and Forestry

"In the Zone" Traffic Blitz Around Schools

The DRPS will be conducting its annual traffic safety blitz around neighbourhood schools in Durham Region as students return to class after the holidays.

The Durham Regional Police Traffic Services Branch, in conjunction with officers from all divisions, will conduct a zero tolerance traffic enforcement campaign targeting school and community safety zones during the week of January 8-12, 2018.

Last year, more than 1,000 traffic tickets were issued during this blitz, which included 562 tickets for speeding.

The goal of this annual "In the Zone" enforcement campaign is to ensure high officer visibility and proactive enforcement in and around school zones during the first week back to school.

The DRPS would like to thank local school officials and members of the public for supporting this traffic initiative.
