Crocodile Chase

I have this dream at least once a month and it is set in different places each time. One month, it will be in hot nice weather out in the open and the next month, it will be in dark gloomy weather in a swamp. Sometimes I'm chased indoors, in public buildings or in houses. What am I being chased by, you ask? It's either a crocodile or an alligator. I have not been caught by him because I wake up before he has a chance to.

Thank You,
 Karen

Hi Karen,

As you may be aware of, chase dreams are quite common and often reflect a situation that you are afraid in confronting. The crocodile most likely symbolizes your hidden instincts, repressed anger and destructive feelings. Another way to view this dream may be your feelings toward some situation or perhaps even a relationship in which you feel suffocated or that is eating you up inside.

The varying surroundings and settings that your chase dreams take place is a clue to your state of mind and reflects what you may be really feeling in your waking life. Houses and buildings typically represents the Self. Consider the type of building and condition/part of the house to guide you which aspect of yourself may be neglected or in conflict. For example, the bedroom may indicate a neglected relationship or a relationship in jeopardy. Swamps represents some emotional turmoil and confusion that you may be feeling. Being chased in the wide open field in nice, pleasant weather suggests that you may be feeling happy at the time. But deep inside you still have not deal with some lingering problem/feeling that is continually chasing you even through what appears to be happy carefree times. It's a situation that will not go away and should be confronted.

 Steve

Spinning Van

What can you tell me about a dream I just had? My husband and I were in our van. I was driving. Suddenly it started spinning out of control. I could feel the spinning sensation and hear my husband's fear but couldn't do anything to correct it or stop it. I woke up before I saw the ending of the dream, but am left with the dizzying fear of spinning. My driving the van might not be significant in that I always drive when we go anywhere together. I'd be interested in your interpretation of this dream. Thank you!

Thank You,
 Marci

Hi Marci,

Generally, driving is symbolic of how you are navigating through life. The van is representative of how you are approaching a situation or your progress through life. And according to your dream, you may be going through a circumstance in which you feel is out of your control. The notion that your husband is in the van with you when your vehicle spins out of control suggests that the situation at hand may stem from your relationship with him. Did you have an argument or disagreement with him on the night of the dream? Are there broader issues that you feel you need to discuss with your husband?

Best Regards,
 Steve

Aries - Your May Monthly Forecast: As Uranus leaves Aries in May, the upheaval in your life will begin to ease. Of course, ease isn't the same as end! And at first it might be difficult to reconcile the difference this makes to your life. If all you've known for a while is the stop-start motion of a bus ride, it might be unnerving to experience a smooth cruise down the motorway. There will still be moments of disruption and inspiration that have the potential to change your direction, but they're likely to come to assist you, as you redefine your goals.

Taurus - Your May Monthly Forecast: As revolutionary Uranus prepares to enter your sign next month you can already feel the change building. You're awakening from a state of unconsciousness, with a hidden power you barely knew existed. It will help you to manifest many of the things you've long wanted but struggled to obtain. That doesn't mean there won't be opposition to your plans. But where previous progress has felt slow, each and every step forward you take this week is going to count and bring progress. It's time to put your best foot forward. You are heading towards a bright new future.

Gemini - Your May Monthly Forecast: An ethereal side of you awakens in May, which might lead you to question your level of involvement in institutions you previously regarded as sacrosanct. This will make space for a new, improved version of yourself. A faster, sleeker, more efficient Gemini is in beta mode and will soon be ready for download! But none of this comes without hard work... and, as anyone who's upgraded their operating system knows, it's rarely straightforward. But as we move into the new month, any gremlins will be easy to deal with.

Cancer - Your May Monthly Forecast: Uranus, planet of change and progress, turns its focus from your ambitions and your reputation, and concentrates on your alliances and your motivation. You may find your social circle is disrupted. But rather than being a breakdown in your support networks, it signals the dawning of new understanding about what you stand for. With Jupiter making a supportive link to Neptune, and Venus entering your sign, you'll possess the creativity and the emotional sensitivity to turn even the humblest chances into opportunities.

Leo - Your May Monthly Forecast: Uranus' change of signs signals a breakthrough that will widen the scope of your ambition. It suggests the emergence of an idea that will reveal your real potential. Taking place at the New Moon, it indicates that you're ready to turn something difficult into a part of your past. Mars moving opposite your sign suggests that you'll find the courage you need to deal with any challenges. With an inspiring outlook, you'll have a spring in your step and feel motivated and inspired by the strength at your disposal.

Virgo - Your May Monthly Forecast: As Uranus arrives in a new sign it awakens forces in you that have been hibernating. We often feel as if we're stabbing in the dark when we're looking for clarity and purpose. It's as if we manage to establish a rhythm, then someone (or something) forces us to re-evaluate. The month ahead contains plenty of surprises. But these change from stormy squalls to fair winds to fill your sails. New understandings will be fostered which develop into positive new ideas. You can translate these into real world successes.

Libra - Your May Monthly Forecast: As Uranus changes signs this month, much of what you've experienced as contrariness starts to make sense. Of course, some people will always be impetuous. But you're realising that a degree of unorthodoxy in your nearest and dearest livens things up. You'll find ways to combine your talents to deal with shared challenges. Your creativity and enthusiasm are highly valued. This month, don't sell yourself short, or question the value of all that you bring to the table... especially when success is so near.

Scorpio - Your May Monthly Forecast: As Uranus moves opposite your sign in May, what starts as a brilliant firework display will continue to light your way. Neptune's encouraging link to Jupiter indicates that the fire will stay under control and reveal the true potential in a situation that has felt impossible to move on from. As Mars forms a creative angle with Uranus and Neptune, it brings opportunities for success. The faith you have in yourself, and in a key partner, will enable you to take important steps towards the fulfilment of a long-held goal.

Sagittarius - Your May Monthly Forecast: The winds of change are blowing in your direction now. The revolution you've been waiting for is fast approaching. If you feel more inclined to take shelter rather than put up your sail it's because you've been waiting for so long that you've almost run out of faith. A lull in your creative energy has weakened your resolve. But recently your ruler Jupiter kick-started a process of transformation through its recent supportive link to Pluto and then Mars. That changed everything. This month it's time to set up the biggest sail you can muster and prepare to set forth on an adventure.

Capricorn - Your May Monthly Forecast: There are eight Star Wars films in the official story line, as well as a few spin-offs. But I'm still looking forward to future episodes. One day, probably far into the future, they'll finally decide they've made the definitive film and the series will end. Somewhere in your life, it's time to stop reinventing the wheel and create something new instead. As Uranus moves into a new home this month it brings a creative breakthrough. So, even when Mars causes a desire for stability, make sure that you embrace change.

Aquarius - Your May Monthly Forecast: Uranus, whose change of signs is the highlight of May, is your modern ruler. But with your traditional ruler, Saturn, placed in Capricorn, you may find that a desire to fit in is giving you less freedom to express your individuality. You just need to alter your approach to lay the building blocks for great success. The move of Mars into Aquarius will encourage you to look differently at what you have, and see potential for change. Be uniquely you this month, and you'll experience exceptional new perspectives.

Pisces - Your May Monthly Forecast: In May, Uranus begins a sojourn that will last for several years in the sector of the sky that governs your ideas and innovations. With both your rulers also forming a trine configuration, you're about to feel as if you're making progress. You're beginning a phase which brings the chance to overcome obstacles, reach out to new people and alter habits that have built up over a lifetime. If you've been thinking about a plan or a possibility... or even if suddenly, this month, you come up with one... run with it!
