It is travel time.. during the winter months, most Canadians travel to tropical places to find relief from the Canadian winters and to refresh and rejuvenate themselves. It is exciting to visit new places and try local cuisines but one has to be careful as food and water is the most frequent cause of infection in travelers. Some tips to avoid food and water related infections/diseases:

- avoid drinking water unless it is boiled or treated pack safe water for outings
- avoid ice or make sure it is made from purified water (freezing does not kill the organisms that cause diarrhea)
- choose sealed bottled/canned drinks
- wipe the area of a can or bottle that touches your mouth
- use treated/boiled water for brushing teeth and avoid getting untreated water in your mouth when showering
- breastfeed infants if possible used boiled water and sterile containers for formula
- avoid unpasteurized fruit juices, eggs and dairy products (also cheese and ice cream)
- avoid food from street vendors
- peel your own fruits and vegetables avoid raw vegetables and salads unless you can safely wash them yourself
- choose well cooked meats and vegetables that are still hot when served (do not eat raw meat, fish or shellfish)
- avoid cold cuts, watermelon, puddings and dishes containing raw or undercooked eggs
- avoid most foods served at room temperature dry food items are safer
- high sugar content in certain moist foods such as syrups, jellies, jams, honey inhibit the growth of bacteria

Remember: Boil it, cook it, peel it or leave it!
