Q and A

Joshiah: ... for your inviting us back into your vibrational level and, once again, express our greetings to each of you. And we would remind you that there exists within this sacred space that you have created that opportunity for you to be involved in that telepathic exchange of information, that telepathic interaction with other individuals that are with us on this afternoon, should you so choose to be involved. As always, the choice is yours. And as always, once again, you would find it very easy to shift your consciousness and to enter into that altered state of consciousness, that meditative state. You have but to close your eyes and express the intent and that opportunity exists for each of you.

Now. Our comments this afternoon undoubtedly will be misinterpreted and challenged by many. (Chuckles) That should come as no surprise. Well, you see, we have been consistent in that there are but three belief systems that you bring into this vibrational level that you cannot alter. You can create illusions that seem to alter and you can create illusions that give you the impression in your conscious state that you have altered but you cannot, within your subconsciousness, alter the three basic truths. You are a Piece of the One, if you wish, a spark of consciousness, no more and no less than any other spark of consciousness that exists not only within your vibrational level but in all of the vibrational levels throughout all of creation. You are equal to each and every other spark of consciousness. You create your own reality and, you absolutely cannot fail.

You see, each one of those beliefs, each one of those statements fly in the face of every religion that is organized within this vibrational level that you exist in on this Earth system. Every religion, every organized religion says that there is a superior being. We are suggesting that there is no such thing; that you are that One; that you are an equal Piece of the One. There is no superior being. We are suggesting that you created this reality and every organized religion will suggest that there is a superior being that created this reality and then put you here. We suggest that you absolutely cannot fail and every organized religion will suggest that if you don't follow their rules and regulations then you will fail. And so it should come as no surprise that when we put it in that context, when we give that direct explanation, that people then put together the pieces of the puzzle to figure that out, that they will become agitated.

We haven't been concerned about agitating people but rather presenting the three simple truths, that you are the Piece of the One that you search for, it exists withinside each and every one of you. You are so much more than what you perceive. If you could grasp that concept and bring it into your consciousness, you could get a glimpse of the unlimited possibilities that exist, not through some religion, not through some method of following rules and regulations, but rather exist withinside each and every one of you. It is your right. It is who and what you are. It is not something you can lose. It is not something you have to gain. It exists, absolutely, withinside each and every individual existing within your vibrational level. You create this reality.

You see, there is no right or wrong other than that which you judge yourselves. You create your reality absolutely, based upon the beliefs that you hold. The reality that you experience is a reflection of your beliefs. If you desire to believe that there is a superior being that creates your reality, you can have that. It is not right or wrong. It is a choice and a belief system and you can have that. We have never suggested that you can't have it, that this is right and this is wrong. Absolutely not. Right or wrong is a human consciousness concept and it does not exist outside of your vibrational level. And you can have whatever you desire and if you desire to believe that there is a superior being that has the capacity to create your reality then you shall create a reality to support the belief. You shall create the reality to support the belief. Not the superior being. The superior being is your creation through your belief.

You create your reality absolutely and it is not right or wrong. It is your creation based upon your beliefs, based upon your desires, based upon your choices. But it is yours. It is your belief. And you see, when you accept the responsibility for that belief then you begin to get glimpses into the magnitude of the possibilities that are available to you to create. That is the beauty of accepting the responsibility and not laying it on some other individual, or individuals—for those who would believe that they have the guides and angels that create for them. The downfall of believing that you create it all is that you also then have to accept the responsibility and there is no comfort zone for those areas of creation that you are less than satisfied with. But nonetheless, when you weigh the two it seems that accepting the responsibility allows you then to create whatever it is that you desire and to change those less than desirable realities.

Every religion also suggests that you can fail. It suggests that if you don't follow the rules, if you don't do it this way or that way then you are not going to get to heaven. Well, once again, you can hold that belief. There is not right or wrong. It allows you to experience certain realities and creations within your conscious state that give you the opportunities to experience the emotions and feelings that are associated with those particular interactions and those creations. And you can have that if that is what you desire. There is nothing wrong with it. It is not a right or wrong concept. It is not that you are going in the wrong direction. Absolutely not. But rather when you believe that you can fail then you, once again, put the responsibility for your success or failure into some other entity's hands, into some other entity's possibility of creation. And yet it is your creation. It is your creation. If it is your creation then you cannot fail. You absolutely guaranteed cannot fail. This is not a right or wrong concept. This is not something, "Well, if I don't do it all this way then I am not going to make it to heaven."

We absolutely guarantee you that even if you do make it to heaven you won't stay there, because you will believe and begin to understand that that is a creation and an illusion, a creation of your own doings that will be very difficult for you to sustain in that altered state of consciousness and you will go beyond that. But nonetheless, you can have it if you desire. It is not a right or wrong concept. And yet each one of the three basic beliefs that we suggest to you fly in the face of every religion that exists in your vibrational level. You are that Piece of the One. That suggests that there is not a superior being. You create your reality. And that suggests that there is not an entity or entities that are creating for you. And you absolutely cannot fail. That suggests that it doesn't matter whether you do what is right or wrong according to the religions. You absolutely cannot fail to come to the understanding of who and what you truly are.

So, all of the religions may be offended by our statements, and yet all religions ultimately are based upon those basic belief systems. They simply become distorted. They become distorted when people begin to put in rules and regulations; when people lose sight of the fact that the spirituality that they search for can never be lost in the first place; when people choose to erect that magnetic type of energy, that veil that we refer [to] that limits their conscious understanding of who and what they truly are. Then come the religions, many times distorted. Religions distorted teachings of individuals who glimpsed the concept of who and what they truly are and attempted to express that which they perceived to others and others, having difficulty in accomplishing that same perception, altered the message. And in doing so, put the messenger on a pedestal and called him a god. And that individual that was the messenger would be the first to suggest to each of you that what they discovered exists withinside each of you and you have the capacity to discover that as well. And that is the message they have come to give and that is the message that we continue to attempt to express to each of you.

We are not suggesting that one way is right or wrong. You can have whatever you desire. However, if you desire to have the capacity to consciously create your reality it would be very difficult should you continue to believe that there are others who create it for you. Should you choose to enter into this new age and new energy where you shall have the capacity to glimpse withinside of you the capacity of who and what you truly are, it will be very difficult if you continue to believe that there are entities or another entity that is so superior to you and that you could never be that. When you can put in the back of your consciousness that understanding that you absolutely cannot fail, it becomes very difficult to do in this new age and new energy if you believe that you can fail if you don't follow the rules.

And so, we are not suggesting that one is right or wrong. We are not suggesting that you should or shouldn't do anything. That is entirely your choice. We are simply suggesting that it would be very difficult for the two to overlap. It is very difficult for you to remain in the old energy and experience the conscious creation capacity that is available in the new energy. The two are just not compatible. You hold altering and conflicting belief systems and one will cancel out the other, and you will experience the perception of failure based upon the beliefs that you hold and the choices that you make and the reality that you create, absolutely.

Now. If you have any questions for us we would be willing to attempt to answer them for you.

Questioner: I was wondering, out of curiosity, when you talk to us here in this concept reality, it has to be probably more difficult than we can imagine, but are you daydreaming to do that?

Joshiah: (Laughs) Hmm, interesting question. We do not enter into that altered state of consciousness that you refer to as daydreaming. You see, you exist in a rather unique vibrational level that we have explained many times where you have that capacity to alter your consciousness. You believe that when you are in this state that you are [in] the most awareness state that you can be in and yet it is exactly the opposite. And in your altered states of consciousness you are more aware of what is real than what you are in this state of consciousness. And so, when you consider it to be daydreaming you are actually in a state of awareness that is much more accurate to what is real than what you experience in your conscious state. We exist within that understanding of who and what we truly are. We haven't chosen to enter into a vibrational level that limits that understanding.

Now. Many times it is very difficult to give an explanation based upon an understanding that we have our vibrational level and our creation process which is similar to yours but, as well, based upon your choices to limit other individuals to have the capacity to interfere in your creation process, we are limited by that which we can perceive through, hmmm, a step-down of feelings and emotions, of ideas, if you wish, that we attempt to transfer through the use of a vocabulary, which in itself is very limiting. To receive back that particular concept and have the ability to respond is indeed, once again, very difficult.

Many times you have found that our response comes without the question being asked. Many times that is easier. It is easier to get an overall perception of the feeling that you have as opposed to the use of a vocabulary to attempt to formulate that idea into words and then have those words transferred through our friend, then back again into feelings and then reverse the process. And so many times, when we can perceive intuitively what the question is, the answer can be given, and given much more accurately, without you asking the question consciously.

Many times you will ask a question of us—and you in particular (name)(chuckles)—and we would give you an answer and you would feel that you did not receive the answer and yet you would listen to it again and again and then you would think, “Yes, I think that is what I really wanted to know.” And so the answer is based not necessarily upon the vocabulary that you expressed, but rather in the feelings and the emotions that you carried within. And the answer seemingly did not relate to the question that you expressed through the vocabulary and yet it answered that which you truly desired to hear. A very difficult concept to give an explanation for but nonetheless one that we attempt to participate in as much as possible.

But we are not necessarily in a state of daydream. Absolutely not. We are quite aware of what is occurring and we have focused our concentration into that attempt to accurately have our feelings and emotions transferred into your vibrational level and then receive the messages back and forth. A very difficult accomplishment and many times not nearly as accurate as what we would like.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: I have a question about the choir that I hear and I remember consciously hearing it twice. I know at the time, each time I was also shifted somewhat—I could tell I was in a different state of consciousness. And it, the feelings that go along when I hear that choir are just incredibly beautiful feelings. It is hard to describe them here but I feel so good when I hear that music. And I am just wondering if you have any idea to reflect back to me—if I am giving it out somewhere—of where exactly that is on the, I guess, the vibrational scale. What am I hearing when I am hearing that choir?

Joshiah: We are not aware of that particular instance that you refer to, however, we can perhaps give you a general perception of that which you are experiencing.

To alter one's consciousness and to enter into what you might refer to as a meditative state or an altered state of consciousness—it does not matter what terminology you use—when you alter your consciousness you have within you the capacity to perceive other realities that you are interacting in and experiencing. They may seem to be rather foreign and rather removed many times, but nonetheless realities that you are experiencing and interacting in and indeed responsible for the creation of.

Now. When we suggest, “responsible for the creation of,” we ask you to understand that when you are involved in the creation process of this vibrational level it is human consciousness consensus to create this reality. You are involved in and responsible for the creation of all that you perceive but so is every other individual involved in and responsible for the creation [of] all that they perceive. And so, when you are involved in an activity where there are other individuals involved, it is a consensus to create that reality and you all agree to create it as you are perceiving it. As you are perceiving it.

It is vital to understand that not all may perceive it in the same manner depending upon what it is that they believe and what it is that they desire to perceive. And so, when you experience these realities in your altered state of consciousness they are your creations or a creation that you are involved in with the consensus of others, but nonetheless your creation. And your perception of that creation is yours based upon your beliefs.

And many times in that altered state of consciousness you can experience realities that you create in so-called between incarnational states or in the dream states, realities that are much more real and much more influential, if you wish, upon your so-called inner self, your so-called subconsciousness, than the realities that you experience in your conscious state. And they can invoke in you feelings and emotions of gratitude and feelings and emotions of wonderment and of joy. That particular activity is available to each of you. And as you practice, because of your belief, once again, (chuckles) in a linear time frame and in space, as you practice in this particular incarnational period you shall enhance and increase your capacity to enter into that altered state of consciousness and to have those types of experiences, if that is what you desire, glimpses into other realities that you are involved in and participating in the creation of.

And you have within you the capacity to choose those particular instances in those creations that give you those feelings of joy, those feelings of absolute peace, if you wish, those feelings and emotions of love.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: I also had another one regarding your vibrational level where you are creating. If you are totally aware that you are creating everything that you experience and perceive, then are you ever able to surprise yourself or have the experience of surprise?

Joshiah: (Chuckles) It is difficult to give you an accurate explanation because of the limitations that you place upon your creation. We have used the analogy many times of you entering into a theater and you, as you sit in that theater, you view someone's portrayal of some type of production upon the screen and you know that that is an absolute illusion. Not only that, you know before you enter into that theater what you [are] about to experience but you choose to not have that knowledge brought forth into your conscious state so that you can be surprised.

When you sit in the theater you see that illusion and you understand that that is an illusion and yet you become engrossed in the illusion. You can experience all types of emotions and feelings. They don't last like they do in your real world (chuckles), but nonetheless you have that opportunity to duplicate those emotions and those feelings. And you realize that they are illusion. You know somewhere within your subconsciousness that you have the capacity to understand what is going to be portrayed upon that screen before you actually see it, and yet you don't use that particular attribute because you wish to be surprised, because it allows you to experience the feelings and the emotions even though you understand that they are illusionary, they are not real. That is as close an analogy as we can come to giving you a description of what it is that we experience. And yet the realities that we create in our vibrational level are as real as the realities that you experience in your conscious state.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Anything that a person can see is an illusion, regardless of the vibrational level. When you look inward to see the sea of consciousness that you are a spark of and that we are a spark of, do you see anything or is it more an intuition or a knowing?

Joshiah: (Chuckles) Again, it becomes a difficult concept to give an explanation to through the limitation and the use of the vocabulary. For you see, you believe to see something is to physically "see." And we do not physically see and yet we perceive as accurately as you perceive. A very difficult concept for you to get a grasp of, absolutely.

When you are in an altered state of consciousness and you are in a dream state, you perceive certain particular events and yet you understand absolutely that you don't see them. You understand absolutely that it is a perception, it is not a sight. And yet you use your so-called memories of activities in your conscious states to put those particular activities from your dream states into some type of perspective that you can understand and get a grasp of in your conscious state. And so it is when you come back into your conscious state that you suggest, "Well, I saw this and I saw that." But when you are in that altered state of consciousness you don't really see at all, and yet you perceive so much more than you can with sight.

You can also get a glimpse of the understanding of the now in that altered state of consciousness, in your dream states or in your meditative states. When you are in that state you don't simply see a pinpoint, a limited view, as you do when you are in your conscious state. You see, when you are in your conscious state you perceive various surroundings by your senses and one of those is your sense of sight, and that is a very limited sense. There are many other senses that assist you in perceiving and many of them are much more versatile and give you a much broader range than your sight.

And so it is not just what you see but it is what you perceive. And when you are in your altered state of consciousness, in your meditative state or your dream state, you perceive all around you. There is no behind or beside that you can't see. You can see it all, if you wish to use that analogy of seeing. And so we do not see such as you see in your conscious state, but rather perceive more as you would in your meditative states or in your dream state. A difficult concept, once again, to give you an explanation for but that is as accurate as we can come up with a description that you can grasp.

Does that answer your question?

(End of questions and we thank Joshiah and the others.)

We would like to thank each of you and we would like to, once again, express our gratitude for your offering us this opportunity to experience your vibrational level. And we would, once again, suggest that we are not separated by time or space but rather by a vibrational level. And should you express the intent, we would be with you always and we would welcome the opportunity to interact with each of you and to offer to you our unending support and our unconditional love.

Until the next time you invite us back into your vibrational level we would bid each of you farewell, with love and with peace. ❁
