Joshiah: Now. It is indeed a pleasure to be invited back into your vibrational level. We would like to express our greetings to each of you and [extend] our gratitude to you once again [for] offering us this opportunity to enter into and to share with each of you your vibrational level.

Now. Once again, before we begin we would suggest that there exists for each of you the opportunity to be involved in what we refer to as a silent communication. The opportunity for you to be involved in a telepathic interaction, if you wish, or a telepathic exchange of information with other entities that would be with us on this afternoon, or indeed that portion that you refer to as your higher self or that inner consciousness that exists within each of you.

And many times the information that you receive in that altered state of consciousness through that telepathic interaction with that silent communication is much more accurate, much more pertinent to your individual needs and desires than is the information that we express through our friend Elias (the channel).

And you will find, once again, that as a result of the energy that you have created in this sacred space that it's quite easy for you to alter your consciousness, to enter into that meditative state, if that's what you wish to refer to it as, and you will find that should you close your eyes and express the intent that you can have that experience, you can have that interaction, that communication. And, once again, many times you don't realize or recognize that there has been that transference of information, but nonetheless we assure you that that interaction absolutely does occur. And, once again, many times in a sense that that interaction are experienced when you are involved in some day to day activity and you get an intuitive suggestion, a spark of consciousness, if you wish, that appears and assists you in the creation or in the interaction that you're involved in at that time.

So there's always that choice (inaudible) should you choose to be involved in that silent communication and that telepathic interaction. Absolutely.

Now. Once again, this reality that you exist in is an illusionary reality. It's your creation and it's your illusion, and it doesn't mean, once again, that it doesn't have significance. We're not suggesting for an instant that it's not an important and significant creation that you're involved in. Absolutely not. But nonetheless, it's an illusion. And in this illusionary reality that you experience in your so-called awake consciousness state we continuously refer to your beliefs in time and space. Time and space are illusionary, they only exist in your awake consciousness state, and yet, in this limited consciousness it becomes very difficult to give you any type of an explanation of your creation process without a reference to time and space. For you see, to suggest that time and space don't exist indeed is to suggest that the basic laws of physics that you exist by in your awake consciousness state do not exist. They exist in an illusionary capacity, they're not real. They're your creation. They're what you believe in, and if you hold the belief then you create the reality to validate and to support the belief. It's really that simple.

But nonetheless, you believe in time and space, you believe that it exists. You believe that there's a beginning and an end and that you're somewhere in the middle. And so then we're forced to give you some type of explanation of this creation process that you're involved in and we refer to time and space, but they don't really exist.

We've used the analogy that it's like we're being involved in a creation process where you're sitting in a complex that involves many theaters in the same particular building, if you wish. Now, you had the opportunity to be involved in any type of creation, or any type of production that you choose. And so you go into a certain theater, and you're involved in that creation. And you watch a play that's being performed upon the stage, one that you're involved in, it's your creation, it's your production and you understand, from some level of your consciousness, that what you're experiencing from that stage is illusionary, and yet it can invoke all types of emotions and feelings. And then when the play reaches the end of a certain portion of the act then you come back into the main portion of the theater and you meet in the lobby and you all put together all of the contracts and agreements in order to script, if you wish, for the next act in the play. And then you go back into the theaters, and you perceive that play being portrayed once again upon the screen or upon the stage, whichever analogy you choose that gives you a better understanding. And once that particular act is completed, then you run back out into the lobby and you put in place again all of the agreements and the contracts, and you rewrite the script, and you go back.

Now. For years, once again, you've believed in time and space, even in an expression of light and energy. Yet it occurs simultaneously. It's in the now, if you wish. There's not even an explanation within your vocabulary that can give you a concept of the kind of creation that you are truly involved in. For you believe to that extent in time and space that it doesn't matter what type of terminology you attempt to apply, it still refers to that belief in time and space: the now is an inference that you're, once again, somewhere between that beginning and that end and you're at the now (inaudible) occurring simultaneously and [again] you're forced to your belief that there's a beginning and an end and that there are several events that are occurring between that beginning and that end and they're all occurring at the same time. And yet time does not exist other than what you experience in your awakened consciousness state.

And so you believe, indeed, that there is a progression and [there's] somewhere in the middle. And then you're involved in this creation process and are an entity where you're involved in participating in all of the plays that are being portrayed in the various theaters. You still, in order to get a grasp of that you (inaudible) a passage of time. And it doesn't really occur that way.

Now. To maintain that image of these (inaudible) energy, and take it one step farther, you believe, if you believe in reincarnation—and it really doesn't matter whether you do or not—but if you believe in reincarnation then you [will] believe that you have existed in this so-called vibrational level, in this Earth's atmosphere, many times. And it's always been in the past. For you see, you don't believe that the future has occurred; it's always in the past. And these past incarnations, that these past lives. Well, once again, time and space are illusions and there is no past. The past only exists in your awake consciousness state. (inaudible), once again, refer to our analogy of the theaters. Not only are the plays occurring and you're involved in a particular production, and the scriptwriting, if you wish, for the play that's in one theater that you're involved in, indeed, all of the scripts and all of the plays that you are involved in in various theaters, all at the same time. And when you meet back in that lobby that we referred to and all of the portions of who and what you truly are meet and assemble and interact with each other—not [only] with each other but indeed with all of the other entities which exist within your vibrational level—and you put in place the agreements and the contracts, not only, once again, for this particular incarnational period which you believe is the one while you are in your awake consciousness state but all of the incarnational periods that you are involved in. They're illusory. They're not real. Doesn't mean they're not significant. Doesn't mean that you don't create certain realities that allow you to have these intense emotions and feelings, absolutely not. We're not saying that it's not important; we're not saying it's not significant; we're saying it's an illusion.

You see, in your awake conscious state [if you've] said something, it's an illusion, and you believe well, if it's an illusion then it's not real. [They had] these individuals who performed what you would refer to as illusory tricks, and by putting in that term, "illusory," it infers that it's not real, and that's not what we're inferring at all. We're inferring that it's an illusion that you experience in your awake consciousness state. It's a significant illusion, absolutely, but it's an illusion nonetheless. Time and space are illusory. Without this involvement in this illusory reality in your awake consciousness state where you believe that this is all that there really is. The irony of it is that that spark of consciousness that you are, that inner spark of who and what you truly are is experiencing a multitude of other realities, and the particular part of your consciousness that is awake and experiencing that awake consciousness state in those other realities believes that that's all there really is as well. And it occurs simultaneously. And (inaudible) a very difficult concept to grasp in your awake consciousness state but nonetheless, time and space are illusions and only exist in this awake consciousness state and in your other awake consciousness states that you're involved in (inaudible) in this particular vibrational level.

You believe that there's a past, and you believe in this awake consciousness state that the past has been set in stone, it's already occurred and that's how it is. [Yes,] it makes it real, it makes it more beyond your control, it makes it more intense. But it's an illusion, and that past is occurring at the same time, if you wish, as this particular reality that you create [and are] experiencing in this incarnational period. And as well, the other incarnational periods that you refer to as your future are occurring as well.

And you believe, once again, in time and space and that this past is set in stone. You believe that that's how it is. You can look at your so-called history and you can look past upon particular events that have occurred and you can use those particular events as being absolutes, that are indeed affecting the reality that you experience in this incarnational period. We would suggest to you that the reality that you experience in this incarnational period is being affected by the beliefs that you hold, not only beliefs that you hold as individuals, but beliefs that you hold as a society and as a human consciousness, but nonetheless as beliefs that you hold, not by the past. The past is illusory; it doesn't exist. The future is illusory; it doesn't exist.

Have you ever noticed that when you're involved in this incarnational period and you look at your so-called history, where individuals have predictions of what is about to occur in a particular incarnational period, that when they look at those predictions the majority of those predictions are predictions for very undesirable realities? There's always this undesirable reality that's about to occur, and, indeed, when there's an event that occurs in this particular incarnational period there are all types of individuals who will pull out the history books and point at particular predictions and say, "Look at that where they said that this is the event that is about to occur, and here it is, it's occurred, and it validates that prediction." It's an illusion. The reality that you experience is a reflection of the beliefs that you hold, and if you believe that there are these predictions that are being made in your so-called past, that are about to occur, then you can have that, absolutely. There's no right or wrong. You can have whatever it is that you desire based upon the beliefs that you hold.

The irony of it is that you are the individuals who are making the prediction in the past and putting it down in your history books so that you can see it in this particular incarnational period so that you can validate it and you can create that reality and you can point to it and say, "Look at that. It's beyond our control. It's set. Someone knew, a long time ago, that this is what was going to occur." That someone was you, holding a belief system that you put in place to create a reality to validate the belief that you hold.

It's absolutely impossible for any individual, not only in this incarnational period but in any incarnational period, to predict your future. Because, you see, the future doesn't exist. It's an illusion. Time and space don't exist other than what you believe in your awake consciousness state. In your altered states of consciousness they don't exist. It's all your—back into our analogy, and you're into those theaters and you're existing in this incarnational period and then this incarnational period and in this incarnational period, all at the same time, and you run back out into your lobby and you assemble all of your, all of your particular elements of your higher consciousness or whatever it is that you choose to believe that you are, and you assemble all of the pieces, if you wish, of what you are in the lobby, and you decide, "Hmmm. I think we're going to have a catastrophe. Okay. Well, I'll go back into this theater and I'll write it down. Then, when you go into this theater over here you can experience it, and then we can all run back into the lobby afterwards and we can all get together and say, "Wow! Look at that! Look at the emotions and feelings and the intensity that we created."

You see, that's why you do it. You didn't do this for any other reason than to experience the intensity of the emotions and feelings that are possible for you to experience in your awake consciousness state. That's why you're here, that's why you chose to come here, and that's why you choose to remain here, [that you] could believe that you are under the influence of some other entities, to give away your power. There's nothing wrong with that, if that's what you desire to do you can have that, absolutely. This is not a right or wrong process, but when you do that and you give away that power you're not really giving it away. Absolutely not. You see, (inaudible) are individual. It's only in your awake consciousness state that you believe that you've given it away. But you haven't, not really. You choose to create [through default,] if that's the terminology you wish to apply. Or you choose to create in your own [version] of reality, where you even believe more that you're not in control, that you're under the influence of other creations. It's not that way at all. Absolutely not, you create it all.

You create it all. You create alone as individuals, and as a society, and as a human consciousness. Absolutely. You create it all. And so if you wish to believe that you're not in control you can have that, [it's not] right or wrong. It's a choice that you can make, absolutely. And you can make it even if you wish in your so-called subconsciousness so that it is even more real, so that you can [have it] and it becomes something that's really beyond your control. Ah, then it's much more enjoyable if it's beyond your control. And if it's a disaster, that's even better yet. "Wow, look at that! I've really—not [been] in control." And if it's a disaster that's been predicted and you put that prediction in place and you put that prediction in place in your subconsciousness in this illusory reality of time and space in some other incarnation, then, "Wow, look at that. It's really beyond our control."

You can have that if you wish. There's no right or wrong. Absolutely not. (inaudible) understand that this reality that you exist in is an illusory reality. Whatever you believe you will create, and the right or wrong is only a human consciousness concept or judgment. It does not exist. And that level of your consciousness that creates the reality that you experience in your awake consciousness state, that spark of consciousness that you are creates whatever it is that you desire. And it does so from a position of absolute and unconditional love and without judging whether it's right or wrong. Right or wrong is a human awake consciousness concept.

It's really that simple. You can make it more (inaudible) but you go to all lengths to make it more complicated, but it's really not more complicated. You create the reality that you experience in your awake consciousness state. You are a spark of consciousness that you would refer to as the god or the creator, or whatever it is that you wish to use for terminology to give a description of that entity that creates your reality. And you absolutely cannot fail to come to that understanding at some level of your consciousness. It's really that simple. The rest is illusory.

The rest is illusory and you can go to all lengths to make it appear to be beyond your concept. You can go to all lengths to appear to make it be beyond your control. But it's not really. It's entirely within your control. The reality that you experience is a reflection of the beliefs that you hold. If you believe that you're not in control, then you'll create the reality to support that belief. If you believe that you're not worthy, then you will create the reality to support that belief. If you believe that there are predictions that are going to occur and that your Earth system is going to go through all types of catastrophes, then you can create that as well. It's not right or wrong. Absolutely not.

When there's an experience occurring, a reality creation, that would, [when you look at it] from your conscious state, you believe that it's disastrous, well, first of all, it's only disastrous to those that are involved in the creation process. If you're not involved in that, if you don't believe that, if you exist in the other side of your Earth system and you haven't heard about that occurring, then it's not something that's affecting you in your awake consciousness state. At some level of your consciousness you're aware of it, absolutely, but at some level of your consciousness you also are aware of the understanding that it's illusionary. And so it doesn't affect you like it does in your awake consciousness state. And for those individuals who go through that so-called catastrophe they may believe that there's going to be this prediction come true, [that] it is reality, this Earth that you exist on is somehow going to be destroyed. And so to them it is destroyed, absolutely. It ends; this incarnational period ends, and then they go through all types of experiences in their altered states of consciousness that you refer to as the between incarnational states, or the death state, or whatever level of consciousness that you [may] wish describe that as being, but nonetheless, the reality that you experience even in those altered states of consciousness is a reflection of the belief that you hold that when you are in that altered state of consciousness, in that, so-called, the death state or that between incarnational period, it becomes much more difficult to sustain the illusion because you understand that it's your creation and it's a reflection of the belief that you hold.

You also begin to get a grasp of the concept that time and space are illusionary, and when you look back upon this creation process you begin to understand that it's illusionary and you can make that choice if you wish to return to an awake consciousness state or to leave this vibrational level, the choice is yours, absolutely. But when that particular experience, if you wish, that you believe is about to occur and this incarnational period actually occurs it occurs to each individual in a different manner, based upon the beliefs that they hold. For some it may be an absolute end, if you wish, to this incarnational period. They die, in other words. The catastrophe validates their belief that it's come to an end. But for others it may not come to an end. The irony of it is that for all that it comes to an end, they enter into that altered state of consciousness and they begin to [get a] grasp of the concept that it's illusionary. It doesn't affect them as much as it does for those who continue to exist in that particular incarnational period, who continue to perpetuate the illusion, who continue to experience the intense emotions and feelings, because that's what you came here for.

For those who terminate, the intensity of the emotions and feelings begins to fade. It is much more difficult to have an intensity in emotions and feelings when you understand that it's an illusion and it's your creation. And then, again, to go back to our theater analogy, when you enter into the theater and you see a projection upon the screen, you understand that it's an illusion, you understand that it's someone else's projection, even though it can invoke emotions and feelings that can be quite intense while you're participating in that production that's being portrayed. But nonetheless, when you leave the theater, you understand that it was an illusion, it was a trick of light, if you wish. The emotions and feelings lose their intensity.

Now. Similarly, when you terminate, if you wish, this incarnational period, and you leave the theater, this theater that you're participating in in your awake consciousness state, you begin to realize, "Oh, that was an illusion." The emotions and feelings that you're experiencing in the other creations that you're involved in in that altered state of consciousness do not have the same intensity. [You] have a difficulty in sustaining and maintaining the intensity of the emotions and feelings when you understand that it's your creation and that it's illusionary. To get a full grasp of that in your awake consciousness state is very, very difficult. Very difficult.

But in your altered state of consciousness, in your dream states, in your meditative states, in your between incarnational states, you get glimpses of what it is to exist without time and space. You get glimpses of what it is to understand that you create the reality that you're experiencing. And as a result of the understanding of that intensity, the intensity of the emotions and feelings are lessened. They don't have that same impact because you know it's an illusion.

And so when you're in this awake consciousness state you maintain it for that particular reason of experiencing the intensity of the emotions and feelings that you experience as a result of the realities that you're creating. And the realities that you're creating and experiencing are a reflection of the beliefs that you hold. And if you believe that you're going to be involved in some type of catastrophe, you can have that. It's no right or wrong. It's not really all that bad. It's not really the end, because you can't die. You can alter your consciousness, but you can't die. You can't lose. We've suggested many, many times that you create this reality, you are the god that you search for, and you absolutely cannot fail to come to the understanding of who and what you truly are. It's really that simple. The rest is illusory. The rest is your creation and that creation is a reflection of the beliefs that you hold, either in your awake consciousness state or in your various levels of consciousness. But nonetheless, the reality that you experience is an illusory reality. It doesn't mean it doesn't have significance, but it does mean that you can change it. And it does mean that you can change it in whatever direction you desire. You have but to alter your beliefs. For the reality you experience is a reflection of the belief you hold. It's really that simple.

Now. We would break for a moment or two, and if you have any questions, we would be willing to attempt to answer them for you. And we would remind you that we are not separated by time or space, but rather by a vibrational level, and should you choose to interact with us you have but to express the intent and we would welcome that opportunity to interact and to share with each of you, and we offer to each of you as well our absolute and unconditional love and our unending support. And we would bid each of you farewell, with love and with peace. ✿
