Q and A

Joshiah: Well, now. Well, it is indeed once again a pleasure to be invited back again into your vibrational level and before we begin we would remind you that there exists for each of you that opportunity to be involved in that silent communication, that opportunity for you to alter your consciousness and to enter into a meditative state and in that altered state of consciousness have the opportunity to have a telepathic interaction with other entities or indeed with that spark of consciousness that you might refer to as your higher self or that entity that is responsible for the creation of this reality that you experience. And as always, that choice to be involved in that type of communication is absolutely yours entirely.

Now. This reality, once again, that you are experiencing is your creation. And so many in your awake consciousness state [have the] desire to have that understanding, not only of the creation of this reality, but indeed of a process that allows you to have the capacity to consciously influence and create the reality. The irony of it is that you employ that process constantly on a day-to-day basis. The reality that you experience, once again, is a reflection of the belief that you hold. And the beliefs are all combined into what we refer to as belief systems. You have your societal belief systems, and your human consciousness belief systems, and your individual belief systems.

The human consciousness belief systems are the belief systems that you as entities entering into this vibrational level agree to participate in and to validate and to sustain. Belief systems that give you what your scientists might refer to as your laws of physics, those particular realities that you in your awake consciousness state believe are absolutely beyond your capacity to alter. That you can't exist without them. That they're just things that are set in stone, if you wish, that are real. That you can't change.

And then you have your societal belief systems that you as individuals can observe throughout various areas of your Earth system, where various societies have different belief systems that allow them to function as a society. Belief systems that may vary from one area of your earth system to another to a great extent, but nonetheless allow that society to function within the capacity of that belief system and to have some type of structure and to have some type of organization. It's possible to exist within a societal belief system and to alter your various aspects and your take, if you wish, on those societal belief systems, but nonetheless they exist and do influence the existence within that society.

And then you have your individual belief systems, the ones that are the easiest, if you wish, for you to control and to alter. The ones that are within your capacity to have the easiest influence on from the so-called awake consciousness state. Individual belief systems that allow you to experience your day-to-day interactions with other individuals, other entities, and indeed with that spark of consciousness that you refer to as your higher self or that subconsciousness or whatever terminology you wish to refer to as that so-called spirit that exists within you. It's important that you understand that it exists within you. It's not something that's separated. It's not something that's lost that you have to find, it's what you truly are and you can't be separated from it.

And so, you have those individual belief systems that are the ones that are for all intents and purposes the ones that most individuals are the most interested in having the ability and the capacity to influence and to change. And once again, the irony of it is that you employ the methods on a day-to-day basis. Absolutely. You're simply not quite aware of it. Many times in your awake consciousness state that reality that you're experiencing, once again, is a reflection of the beliefs that you hold, and you have the capacity not only to influence those individual beliefs but indeed to change them, to alter them. Absolutely.

The reality that you experience is a combination of various aspects of your so-called interactions in your day-to-day activities and your thought process. You see, your thoughts and your feelings influence the choices and decisions that you make that are indeed many times reflected in your attitudes and your attitudes are a reflection of the beliefs that you hold. Spontaneous attitudes. The ones that occur without your taking a conscious thought to think about, "Well, I have to hold a certain attitude." But rather the spontaneous attitudes that are relevant and exist when you are interacting in a day-to-day activity and spontaneously have an attitude. Many times one which you are not quite aware of or leaves you rather shocked and you think, “Well, I’m not supposed to have that attitude,” and so you consciously attempt to change it. That does not necessarily alter the belief system.

And so, as a result of those attitudes and of those choices and decisions and those thoughts and feelings you develop desires of what it is that you like to bring into your reality and then you use your imagination and indeed whether or not you achieve that so-called desire that you believe that you hold at a conscious level is reflected upon what it is that you expect to achieve, what it is that you have as an expectation for the reality that you will experience. And the expectation is based upon the belief that you hold.

If you don’t believe that it’s within your capacity to alter, if you don’t believe that it’s within your capacity to control your reality, if you don’t believe that you’re in control, then once again, the reality that you experience is a reflection of the belief that you hold and it validates the belief.

And so, how do you change these realities? Well, many times we’ve been asked that question, we hesitate to give absolute steps that one should take because, you see, the steps that you take to alter your reality are not nearly as important as what you believe is within your capacity to control and to alter. The method or the technique that you use is not nearly as important as your belief in the method or the technique that you use for it’s the belief that’s reflected in your reality.

We’ve used an analogy many times that it’s like coming down upon a shore, and lined up along that shore a huge array of various vessels that can take you out across the water. And out upon that water there’s a fog bank and you have absolutely no concept of how far it is on this journey that you’re about to embark on. And so, many individuals run up and down the shore and they keep on checking out the vessels to see if they’re well equipped, to see if they have all of the provisions that are necessary for a long journey or there may be unforeseen obstacles and you want to make sure that you’ve got everything that you need.

And so, they check out this vessel and then they see another vessel down the shore away and so they think they may go check out that vessel and they check out the other vessels and individuals can spend all of their existence running up and down the shore checking out the various vessels, and ready to begin their journey, to accept the responsibility for this reality. They want to make sure that they’re not going to get lost.

And then you have other individuals who come down upon the shore and simply accept the first vessel that they come upon and they believe that it has the ability to achieve that which they desire and they embark upon their journey in the vessel and they achieve success.

You see, once again, the irony of it is that the vessel is not nearly as important as your belief in the abilities of that vessel. And the irony of it is that this journey that you are so hesitant to embark upon is one that has absolutely no possibility for failure. You can’t get lost. You can’t have a difficult time. The irony of it is that you don’t even really need a vessel. You could walk across the water if you wish.

And so, what’s important is not the method or the technique that you employ, but your belief. What do you believe? Can you achieve what it is that you desire?

Now. You believe in time and space. You believe that there’s got to be a progression. And it makes it more real. It makes it more acceptable in your awake consciousness state. There’s nothing wrong with that. It’s a choice that you put in place to exist within the limitations of a belief system. It’s a choice that you put in place, that you would be involved in a reality where time and space are real when you’re in your awake consciousness state and you can’t exist without them. You can’t exist outside of that so-called belief system in time and space and still be in your so-called awake consciousness state.

And so, if you choose a method or a technique that involves time and space, involves some type of an evolution in where you can see a progress then it becomes more real. It fits within your belief system. It’s more acceptable. And so, put in place, if you wish, belief systems and choices and decisions, choose methods or techniques that may involve that passage of time. There’s nothing wrong with that. Indeed, your chances for success are enhanced because you believe, because you believe that time and space are real and if it’s a method or the technique that validates that belief in time and space and gives you some type of evolution where you can measure your progression, then indeed it becomes more real, and it’s more acceptable, and it validates a belief. And if it validates the belief, then indeed it’s something that you can have because your reality, once again, is simply a validation of your belief systems.

And so, this reality that you’re experiencing, once again, you utilize methods continuously, on a continual basis. And those methods are, once again, what it is that you are thinking and feeling that are influencing your choices and your decisions, that influence your belief systems and your attitudes and that are based upon desires and as a result of a desire you utilize your imagination to see what that would be like to bring it into your reality and then—what do you expect?

You see, you can utilize all of the methods or the techniques and it really makes no difference if you don’t have the expectation that it’s within your capacity to achieve. If you believe that you’re not worthy then indeed you will validate that belief system, regardless of all of the other belief systems and methods or techniques that you might choose.

And so, the method or the technique that we would suggest may be beneficial, but not necessarily something that you have to employ, is that you begin to take steps to become the type of person that you feel, that you believe would have the capacity to have that expectation to bring into your reality that which you desire. And you do that by becoming the person, the image that you believe is important, that you would like to present to others. It's important that it's for you. Because you're not doing things in order to impress others. Absolutely not. You may impress others, but it's important first that you do it for yourself. You have to like who you are. It's important that you like who you are for if you don't like who you are then it becomes very difficult, in fact becomes impossible for you to love yourself consciously. And yet, the reality is that you create this reality from a position of absolute unconditional love. It's not that you don't have the ability to love consciously, to have self love in an awake conscious state. Absolutely not. It's rather that you choose not to. It's a choice. Your choice.

And so, if you begin to build upon that image that you would like to present to others, then you begin to like who you are and you do that by choosing principles. And we've suggested many times that you simply make a list of principles and don't worry about which ones are important to begin with. Absolutely not. Just make a list of principles and then choose the ones that are important to you at this time. And they may change. It's nothing wrong with changing your principles. If you apply one and you begin to have that principle become an interaction that you express continuously to others. Absolutely not wrong or inconceivable that you would alter that principle as being the most important one because you've begun to apply it and you accept it and it's become part of your character and so you can put another principle up as being the most important. But you make a list of principles and you list out the ones that are the most important and so on and so forth. And you apply your principles when you create the opportunity to apply the principles.

You see, that's the irony of it is, you create the opportunity, you put in place the contracts and the agreements that are expressed and experienced in your day-to-day interactions with others that give you that opportunity to apply your principles. It's your choice. It's your reality. But nonetheless, once again, if you do it from a conscious state and you do it over a period of time it validates your belief in this reality and it makes it more real and it makes it more acceptable. And so, you put in place those principles and you apply them and you apply them and you begin to like who you are. You begin to strengthen your character. And as you strengthen your character not only do you begin to like who you are but others will begin to like who you are as well.

The irony of it is that as long as you apply the principles that you believe are important and you begin to like who you are, for who you are, others will like you as well. That's the key. It's not that you have to do this to impress others. Absolutely not. You do it for yourself. You do it so you like who you are. And when you like who you are then you begin to have that expectation to achieve that which you desire. You begin to believe that it's within your capacity to have that deserve-ability. You begin to have that expectation, the key element to consciously creating your reality.

And as you apply the principles and you strengthen the character, you begin to like who you are, then you begin as well to have the capacity to love yourself consciously, to bring that love that exists at the level of your consciousness from which you create this reality from a so-called subconscious state into a conscious state so that you can experience it, so that you can experience the joy, so that you can experience the understanding that you are the creator of this reality that you're experiencing.

Now. When individuals are in this process of applying the principles to strengthen their character, particularly individuals who believe that they are not deserving, who don't like who they are, when you create the reality and interaction with another individual and you fail to apply the principle, that individual who has that low self-esteem, if you wish, has a tendency to dwell upon that instance when you didn't apply the principle. You see, you might have been involved in ten instance when you applied principles and then on that very last one you failed to apply the principle. And so, one begins to dwell upon that lack of ability to apply the principles. You begin to feel that it's not possible and you begin to make the choices and the decisions that alter the belief system and to validate that it can't be. "I'm not worthy." And so, you dwell on that negative one percent of your application, instead of concentrating on all of the times when you were successful at applying your principles.

It doesn't matter what endeavor you're involved in [in] your awake consciousness state, if you achieve ninety percent success rate you are considered to be very, very successful. And yet, when individuals become involved in this applying of the principles they have a tendency to dwell on the negativity, on the times when they weren't successful. They have a tendency to reinforce, if you wish, that belief system that they don't have deserve-ability, to reinforce that it's, that they don't like who they are.

And there's nothing wrong with that. You see, the irony of it is, is that this is not a right or wrong concept. It simply takes away your capacity to have the ability to consciously create your reality. That's not a wrong. You don't have to be an individual who looks at that and says, "Well, I'm not a very successful at this." You can have it if you want. It's not [a] right or wrong, if that's what you desire. You can have that, not only can, but do. But if you wish to alter that you can have that as well.

You see, that's the irony. This spark of consciousness that you are creates whatever it is that you desire and it does so without judgment as to what's right or wrong. So, if you don't wish to have the capacity to control your reality there's nothing wrong with that. You make that choice. You will nonetheless control the reality. It simply will be a reality that seems to be beyond your capacity to control when you're in your awake consciousness state. Seems. It's an illusion. It's an entirely illusionary reality. Not insignificant. It's important as well that you understand that illusionary does not mean insignificant, but rather illusionary means that it's within your capacity to alter.

And so, if you apply the principles and if you're successful in applying the principles at a rate that allows you to be what, for all intents and purposes, is successful, then you begin to like who you are, and when you begin to like who you are, you take on a whole different attitude toward your creation process, toward your expectation, towards being able to explain quite specifically what it is that you desire. And to have the imagination to fulfill that desire. And then with the liking of yourself the expectation that it's within your capacity, that you are deserving of the reality that you desire.

And once again, the irony of it is that you do it on a continual basis. This is not something that you're not at some level of your consciousness participating in at every instance of your entire existence in this vibrational level. The key to consciously having the ability to influence your reality is to consciously like who you are, to consciously believe that you're deserving, to consciously have that expectation, and then you can have it. Absolutely. The only limitation to your creation process is your imagination. Guaranteed.

Now. If you have any questions we would be willing to attempt to answer them for you.

Questioner: Okay, (inaudible) given this, I guess, controlling, negative entities, people ... very selfish, that's very difficult dealing with, but my belief ... that they are controlling and negative ... but I don't know how to explain it ...

Joshiah: We've suggested many times that individuals that are involved in any interaction are involved in an interaction as a result of agreements, if you wish. At some level of the consciousness both individuals agree. There is absolutely no situation where one is being controlled by another except that that other gives permission and allows the controlling to exist.

You see, as we've suggested many times, when two individuals are involved in what your society might refer to as an abusive situation or a controlling situation many times it's the one that seems to be abused or the one that seems to be under the other's control who is actually in control. When one chooses to end that interaction, if you wish, that relationship, that controlling relationship or that abusive situation, when one chooses to no longer be a victim then the abusive situation ends. It's really that simple. It's that simple, and yet we understand as well that there are many belief systems that are involved and while it's that simple, to reach the simplicity of that understanding can be quite complicated.

Once again, if one begins to put in place the types of principles and to apply the principles to strengthen the character to be the individual that they wish to be then one begins to like who they are consciously and one begins to love who they are consciously and at some level it may not be a conscious decision, but at some level of your consciousness and the other individual's consciousness who are involved in that so-called abusive or controlling situation the agreement is made that the controlling and the abuse stops. That it changes.

When we began this interaction and this channeling we suggested to many, many individuals many, many times that should you choose to accept the responsibility for the reality, and should you choose to accept this ability and this capacity to consciously create your reality, one should do so with the awareness that the relationships that they are involved in may change. The relationships, be they what you might refer to as a desirable or an undesirable relationship may change. Because as one changes, as one changes their belief systems, as one changes their belief in themselves, as one changes this concept of self love and brings it into a conscious state many times those relationship change at many levels of your consciousness. The agreements change. They alter their agreement to participate in certain types of relationships, once again, be they desirable or [an] undesirable, it doesn't really matter. They go in different directions, if you wish, and they change. And many individuals who are involved in what you might refer to as a desirable situation have no desire to end that relationship and so they have no desire to change. They have no desire to accept some different belief system and to alter their reality. They're quite happy, if you wish, in their present situation, and there are [other] individuals who is not that way at all.

We've suggested many times that if you don't like your reality, alter your belief systems and you will alter your reality. If you do like your reality, reinforce your belief systems and you will strengthen the reality, you will perpetuate the reality.

And so, when one's involved in any type of relationship it's important to understand that there is an agreement at some level of consciousness to be involved in that participation and that relationship. And if you don't like it, you can change it. Absolutely. And while that may seem very simple we understand, once again, that there can be complicated steps in getting there, steps which involve one's belief systems, that may have been chosen to be involved in certain interactions and relationships at other levels of consciousness that you refer to as between incarnational choices and beliefs, but nonetheless, your choices, and other individuals choices to be involved in certain interactions.

And those choices can be experienced throughout an entire incarnational period. Absolutely. And the belief systems can be responsible for all types of interactions that can seem to be negative interactions, negative relationships. Accept the responsibility, while as difficult as that may seem. Until one accepts the responsibility one cannot change. You see, if you don't believe you're in control, if you believe that there is other entities that are in control then you will create the reality to validate the belief. It's really that simple. It's that simple, and yet, because of the simplicity, "It just can't seem to be that easy, and so there must be a whole bunch of other things that are involved."

And so, you bring in belief systems, belief systems that, when an individual is born they don't have that choice. You see, in your so-called awake consciousness state you believe that an individual is born and that they are born into a family and that it's simply by chance, that they are born into a situation, and it may be an abusive situation, and as a result of that abusive situation they've had no self esteem, they have had no self love, they have had no strengthening of their character, they don't like who they are. And so, they go through this entire incarnational period experiencing interactions with other individuals where they indeed seem to be victims.

The irony of it is that they can end an interaction with one individual where they are, so-called, a victim, but if they don't choose their belief they will immediately enter into other relationships where they will perpetuate that belief system, they will validate the belief system that they are not worthy. They will enter into other relationships with other individuals where they are, once again, the victim. Because that's what they choose.

As difficult as that is to grasp in your awake consciousness state, until you grasp it, until you understand that every individual is responsible for the reality that they experience, then you can't change it, you can't change it consciously because you hold a belief system that one's not worthy or you hold a belief system that one doesn't have the capacity to influence their reality. And once again, as simple as it may seem, it's within each individual's capacity to alter their reality, they have but to alter their belief system. And if there's difficulty in expecting that one has the ability to alter their belief systems then it's because one does not have that self-image, that self-respect. They don't like who they are consciously.

You see, at some level of your consciousness every individual likes who they are. Every individual creates this reality from a position of absolute unconditional love. And whether in your awake consciousness state you believe that it's a desirable or an undesirable situation has absolutely no affect upon that spark of consciousness that you are. The spark of consciousness that you are creates whatever it is that you desire to validate the belief that you hold and it does so joyously without judgment as to whether it's right or wrong. It does so that you have the capacity to experience emotions and feelings that you cannot experience in any other vibrational level. It's really that simple.

And the only negative emotion or feeling is one that in your awake consciousness state you believe is negative. The only negative emotional feeling is one that is not expressed, it's not experienced and dealt with. One can experience love and if one suppresses it, it [can] become a negative emotion. It can allow one to experience all types of so-called negative feelings and emotions and depression.

It's important that one understands what various elements of your reality are. When you begin to choose your principles, it's important that you understand what they are. When you begin to choose principles such as integrity, understand what integrity is to you. What does it mean? What do the principles mean? And apply them accordingly. You see, we would suggest that integrity is when you do the right thing spontaneously. If you have to think about it, if you have to think, "Well, is this right or wrong?" then you've not acted spontaneously. It doesn't mean that you haven't done it right, it just means that it hasn't been a spontaneous reaction, and therefore, if it hasn't been a spontaneous reaction then you haven't done it with integrity. And you don't look at it and say, "Well, I had to think about that so I guess I don't have integrity." Once again, you don't dwell upon the negative. You look at it, and at the times when you do act spontaneously then you rejoice and that's the time that you dwell upon so that you can bring it back into your reality again and again and again.

And you can become the person that you wish to be. Consciously. Not something that someone else wishes you to be. Not doing something because you think that's what someone else might like to see in you. Absolutely not. You do it because that's what you wish to be, so that can like who you are consciously. And when you begin to like who you are consciously you begin to love yourself consciously. And you see, you can't love others any more than you love yourself.

You will find that individuals who seem to be individuals who do things entirely for themselves are also individuals, if you watch closely, do much more for others. Because you can only give that which you have. And if you don't like who you are, you have difficulty in liking others. And if you don't love yourself, you have difficulty in loving others.

And once again, it's important to understand that what you experience in your awake consciousness state is an illusion. Everyone creates this reality from a position of absolute unconditional love. It exists within each and every individual. Every entity is a spark of consciousness, no more and no less than any other spark of consciousness that exists throughout all of creation. It's important to understand that. It's important to understand that no one is less than anyone else, and no one is more than anyone else. You are all equal. And it doesn't seem to matter what type of terminology we attempt to give as an explanation, it all falls short because it's based upon your concept of time and space that there's this more or less concept, and it's not that way at all.

You see, if we suggest that you're a piece of the One, then right away one holds this concept, "Oh, well, there's this huge one and I'm but a minute piece," and it's not that way at all. There's no more and no less. To say that you are a spark of consciousness, many look at that and say, "Oh, well, there's this huge inferno and we are but a spark." Not that way at all. You are all that is. No more, no less than any other entity that exists throughout all of creations. And it's important to understand that. To get a grasp of that consciously. And if you're having difficulty doing it consciously, then it can be quite beneficial for one to learn to alter one's consciousness and to go withinside.

Ironically, all of the answers that all the individuals seek are withinside. We can give you suggestions of possibilities that allow you to take various steps, but ultimately, the steps in that journey must lead withinside. You will not find the answers written in a book. You will not find them by listening to someone such as us attempting to give you all of the information, but rather, to go withinside. It's why we suggest over and over and over again that when we have these interactions that it's much more beneficial for one to alter their consciousness and to have that silent communication, that telepathic interaction, to go withinside for there are where the true answers lie. And we would give you suggestions.

And so, if you go withinside you can get glimpses of understanding of who you are. You can get glimpses of the understanding of the illusionary reality that you exist in in this vibrational level. You can get glimpses of the limitlessness of who and what you truly are, you can get glimpses of existing in the now without the limitations of time and space. And if you do that while entering into that altered state of consciousness with the intent of retaining those memories of those interactions and of those understandings, you can bring back into your consciousness glimpses of the understanding of who and what you truly are and you can truly begin to like who you are and to begin to understand the limitlessness of your ability to influence your reality.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Yes, thank you.

Questioner: Is there a difference between a thought and a belief? Are beliefs like, are thoughts like little beliefs?

Joshiah: Many individuals in your so-called awake consciousness state have this temptation to separate thoughts from feelings. And we would suggest that you can't do that. You can't have a thought without a feeling or a feeling without a thought. Thoughts and feelings are intertwined in interaction. But beliefs indeed can be influenced by thoughts, and thoughts are indeed influenced by beliefs, but they are not the same.

You see, in your awake consciousness state many individuals have various thoughts and feelings that they experience as a result of an interaction with other individuals or a day-to-day activity that they are involved in. And yet, as a result of that interaction or that day-to-day activity they can experience a feeling that is seemingly not related to what they thought their belief was. And many times, once again, as we've suggested you have a spontaneous reaction, and that spontaneous reaction give you a spontaneous attitude and some individuals look at that and don't like it. They look at it and say, "Well, I'm not supposed to have that attitude, that's not a good attitude," and so they suppress it and they don't pay attention to it. And as a result of that suppression they miss out on the opportunity to get a grasp, a glimpse of an understanding of what the belief and the belief system was that was responsible for that thought and feeling.

And so, thoughts and feelings are interacted and similar, but are not belief systems, and can be influenced by belief systems, absolutely. As your belief systems can be influenced by thoughts. But they are absolutely separate.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Yes, thank you.

Questioner: I actually have a quick question that you may have answered a long time ago when Rick asked it, but is the, is the earth's magnetic grid or system or field—magnetic field, I guess it is—is that a physical correlation to the [Earth's] electromagnetic veil? Even though I know it's like the magnetic type of energy, is that, is the magnetic core, or the magnetic [spheric field] somehow correlated [with that]?

Joshiah: The electromagnetic type of energy that we refer to it's an energy that exists in each and every atom of your entire universe, including your so-called atmosphere. You see, this entire universe is illusionary, including the energy that exists within your so-called grid system of your gravitational system of your Earth.

It becomes very difficult to give an explanation and we continuously use “an electromagnetic type of energy” because it’s a type, it’s not an accurate explanation, but it’s as close as we can give that you can get a grasp of an understanding based upon one’s understanding of physics and one’s understanding of electromagnetic type of energy or electromagnetic energy.

And so, the energy that exists, the magnetic energy that exists in your so-called Earth system indeed is a reflection of your beliefs. It’s something that is within your capacity to alter, not only within your capacity to alter, but you do alter it. You alter it, and as a result of that alteration, many times you alter the physical existence upon your earth system. You alter it. That’s what’s important to understand. The electromagnetic type of energy which is your veil exists within each and every atom, once again, of your entire universe, and is a different type of energy. It is not the same energy that’s involved in your magnetic system that surrounds your Earth, which is, once again, simply a reflection of the belief that you hold.

The electromagnetic type of energy, the veil, if you wish, is part of who and what you are. You, as an individual and as each individual and entity in your entire vibrational level, exist within each and every atom of the entire universe. Now, that’s a difficult concept to grasp if you look at it from your so-called belief in time and space. It’s not so difficult to grasp if you look at it from the aspect and the concept that it’s your creation. That it’s only real because you believe in your awake consciousness state that it’s real, that it’s actually an illusion. And as an illusion it’s within your control and you exist throughout the entire illusion, not just part of it.

You see, if you were to see something existing within front of you and you knew that it was absolutely within your capacity to alter it, if someone gave you something and you could completely alter that small atom, then you would look at that and say, “Well, I can turn this into anything that I wish,” then you would understand that that’s an illusion and that it’s within your capacity to alter that illusion. Well, we’re suggesting that the entire universe is like that. It’s within your capacity to alter, not only within your capacity to alter, but you do alter on a continual basis. You just don’t believe in your awake consciousness state that you can do so. And so, when you ask questions such as, “Is certain parts of the elements part of your so-called veil or electromagnetic energy?” absolutely part of, but not entirely it, because you see, that electromagnetic energy, once again, exists within each and every atom. As do you. As difficult as that is to grasp.

And so, the magnetic energy that surrounds your Earth system is not the energy that’s the electromagnetic type of energy that’s part of who and what you truly are, that you put in place to sustain the illusion to make it real.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Yes, it makes more sense to me because I was thinking about the sunspots that, or the sun ... yeah, I guess it’s the sun’s solar flares which would be us on a, in our mass consciousness, that would be creating those solar flares to ... when they come, they spin the magnetic field of the Earth and that, I was just thinking of them culminating around 2012, that the magnetic field would be thinner and I wondered if that was sort of correlating to thinning the veil, but that’s us sending the solar flares, that’s us thinning the magnetic field. I mean that’s us doing all of that. So I just, I didn’t see how the magnetic field could be the entire veil because there was other parts to it, so that, that makes sense. Thank you.

Questioner: Anybody else?

(No further questions.)

Joshiah: Well, now. If there are no more questions, we would like to, once again, express to each of you our gratitude for you offering us this opportunity to enter into and to share with each of you in your vibrational level. For, once again, for us it is indeed a learning experience. It’s an opportunity for us to experience an intense range of emotions and feelings that is not possible to experience at our level of existence, in our vibrational level. It is important that you understand that our existence has no more importance or significance than does yours. Absolutely not.

You, for lack of a better reference, are at what we refer to as the leading edge of creation. You are not individuals who are put upon some Earth system so that you must somehow progress. Absolutely not. If there are lessons that you believe that you must learn, it’s important that you understand that those are the lessons you choose to make a reality that allows you to experience these intense range of emotions and feelings. Nothing more. No other entity. You don’t have to go through any type of progression, you don’t have any lessons to learn unless you choose. Absolutely not. You’re here by choice. You exist in a level of creation that is equal to all other levels of creation throughout all of the vibrational levels. Absolutely guaranteed. You are all that is. There’s nothing that you have to do to achieve some type of enlightenment or advancement. Absolutely not.

You absolutely cannot fail to come to the understanding of who and what you truly are and at that point, should you choose, you can leave this vibrational level. Guaranteed. It’s really that simple. It’s not difficult at all. It’s not something you have to worry about, “Am I doing it right or wrong?” Just like who you are. Begin to love yourself consciously and you will be able to consciously create and experience that which you desire to experience in this particular incarnational period in your awake consciousness state.

Now. Once again, should you choose to interact with us you have but to express the intent and we would welcome that opportunity to interact and to share with each of you and to offer you our unconditional love and our absolute unending support. And we would bid, once again, each of you farewell with love and with peace. ✨
