

JOSHIAH

www.joshiah.com

Caveat: This document is a direct transcription from the original recording. Although it has been checked for obvious errors, it has not been finally edited. Editorial comments are in parentheses; probable wording is in square brackets.

October 7, 2007

Q and A

Joshiah: Well, now. Well, it is indeed a pleasure to be invited back into your vibrational level, and we would, once again, remind you that there exists that opportunity for you to be involved in that silent communication. And you would find that should you make the choice to close your eyes and express the intent that it's quite easy for you to alter your consciousness and to enter into what you refer to as a meditative state, and in that altered state of consciousness have that opportunity to be involved in that silent communication or that telepathic interaction and exchange of information.

And so, we would encourage you to participate and to take that opportunity to experience that interaction that, once again, as always, the choice is yours, absolutely.

Now. We continuously suggest that this vibrational level that you exist in is an illusionary reality. And for many that becomes a very difficult concept to grasp, to get an understanding of what an illusionary reality is (inaudible) to, what a real reality is. It's illusionary in the effect that it's within your capacity to alter it. And not only within your capacity to alter it, but that you do alter it, continuously. And there are many aspects of your reality in your awake consciousness state that you experience that individuals would accept that, absolutely, it's illusionary, it's within their capacity to alter. Illusionary, from the aspect that you understand that it's a reflection, if you wish, of certain choices and decisions that you have made. Illusionary, in various aspects of your creation process, such as illusionary in terms of one individual's capacity to experience all types of abundance whereas another individual may have difficulty in that type of creation or that type of experience.

And so, various aspects of that reality and of that type of creation of a reality one can accept as being responsible for and therefore illusionary. And when it's real, it's like that's beyond your capacity to control; like that's a reality that's influenced not only by your choices and decisions but indeed by other entities' choices and decisions [and] (inaudible) some that have the belief that even entities outside of your vibrational level influence and create the reality that you experience. And many times that reality comes in terms of what you refer to as being some type of solid form, if you wish, that you believe is real. How can you influence that?

And so, when we refer to real vs. illusionary we're referring to your entire universe. Not just certain aspects of creation that you experience in your day-to-day activities. Not just certain aspects of emotional type of experiences, interactions with other entities, relationships, but your entire vibrational level is an illusionary reality.

And that in itself seems contradictory. How can it be a reality if it's an illusionary reality? Illusionary, from the aspect that it's your creation and reflection of the beliefs that you hold, entirely, and real in terms of your belief in your so-called awake consciousness state that you can't alter much of it. The belief that this universe that you exist in is somehow beyond your capacity to control. Once again, we've suggested that many individuals have absolutely no difficulty in accepting the responsibility for certain aspects of your day-to-day interactions with other entities or indeed the day-to-day interactions that you experience in your privacy: that's within your control. Many would accept that. But to believe and to accept that the reality that you experience that is occurring on, not only just the other side of your Earth system, but indeed on the other side of your so-called universe, is also occurring because of beliefs that you hold, becomes a much more difficult concept to grasp. Absolutely.

To believe that it's a human consciousness concept in consensus to create and sustain this vibrational level entirely, and that the vibrational and indeed the universe that you experience in this vibrational level is within your capacity to control based upon the beliefs that you hold as individuals and as a society and, once again, as a human consciousness becomes for many a quite difficult concept to grasp in your so-called awake consciousness state. In your altered state of consciousness, to go withinside, one can begin to understand the illusionary concept of this reality that you experience in your awake consciousness state. Illusionary—because it alters as you alter your belief systems, it's not beyond your control—vs. real—what you believe in your awake consciousness state puts it beyond your control or capacity to alter or to change.

And once again, it comes back to that limited capacity to express the concepts that you desire to understand based upon the use of a vocabulary. To utilize a vocabulary, to give explanations for an illusionary reality that you believe in your awake consciousness state is real, [it] becomes very difficult. Absolutely.

The very use of that vocabulary is based upon the concept that you're not in control. It's a vocabulary that's based upon the belief systems that you have certain aspects of your reality that are absolutes. And so, to attempt to use a vocabulary based upon a reality that has the concept of absolutes to explain particular concepts that are not absolutes becomes very difficult indeed.

And so, we suggest time and again to go withinside, that the answers that you seek are withinside each of you. The information is available to each of you. You are so much more than what you perceive. You see, the information that we express, once again, is simply information that you desire to hear. We don't have access to some type of information that's not available to each of you. And in fact, we continuously tap into and utilize the information that you express in order to attempt to give you some type of an explanation and a description of that which you desire to hear and to understand.

It's not our message. We're not here to attempt to give you any type of solution that's not available to each of you on an individual basis. We would never do that. We would never come and suggest that, well, if you do this and this and this, this is what will occur. Or that indeed there are certain forces that are influencing your reality and if you do this and this you'll experience a certain type of reality. Absolutely not. The only forces influencing your reality are your forces. This is your creation. This is your vibrational level. There's not some entity sitting outside of your vibrational level that has control of it. And [then] saying, "Well, we're going to have this type of experience occur now on your system because the entities that are existing there are ready to have that type of experience." Absolutely not.

You are in control. It's your reality, it's your vibrational level. There are absolutely no entities existing outside of your vibrational level who have access to any knowledge that you do not have access to. Or indeed any entities existing outside of your vibrational level who have access to the information that you have access to regarding your creation process and the vibrational level that you exist in. You are the (inaudible) that put in place that electromagnetic type of energy that limits others existing outside of your vibrational level to have that capacity to interfere or to create in your vibrational level. Entities wishing to interfere and create in your vibrational level have to first of all enter into your vibrational level. And in doing so, agree to participate in your so-called human consciousness belief systems.

Those entities who exist within your vibrational level and believe that there are other entities existing outside of your vibrational level who are influencing your vibrational level simply don't want to take the responsibility for the reality that they are experiencing. And until you accept and take the responsibility for the reality that you're experiencing it becomes very difficult for you to consciously alter your reality.

If you hold that belief system that [that's] possible for others to influence your reality, either other entities existing within this vibrational level or outside of your vibrational level, to influence your reality without your consent and without your agreement then you perpetually create situations in day-to-day activities that validate that belief that you're not in control. And once again, it's not right or wrong. Absolutely not. It can be quite entertaining for you and that's why you do it. You do it to experience the emotions and feelings that are involved in that type of a creation process.

However, if you wish to consciously create your reality you have to accept that it's within your capacity to create it. If you don't believe that it's within your capacity to create it then the spark of consciousness that you are honors the choice that you make and it validates that reality belief system that you're not in control. And you experience all types of realities to, once again, validate the belief. Realities that you are the responsible one for the creation of. Not some other entity existing outside of your vibrational level. Indeed, not even other entities existing within your vibrational level that you have not at some level of your consciousness agreed to allow that participation and occurrence to come into your so-called awake consciousness state so that you can experience the emotions and feelings that are as a result of that type of interaction and reality creation process.

Without exception. That's the irony, without exception you create the reality. And if you choose to not believe that you're in control of the creation of that reality, once again, you create the reality to validate the belief system. And if you wish to consciously, to consciously have the capacity to create your reality then you must believe, first of all, that you are the god that you search for, that you create your reality, and that you cannot fail.

If you can't grasp that concept then it becomes very difficult to accept that you are in control, consciously. Because at some level of your consciousness that that spark of consciousness that you are that creates this reality understands absolutely not only that you are in control but indeed that the reality that you're experiencing is a reflection of your beliefs. And that the reality that you're experiencing is a creation that's done from a position of absolute unconditional love, that allows you to experience a reflection of your belief, and does so without judgment as to what's right or wrong. Does so joyously. Just as you create in any other vibrational level throughout all of creation.

The concept is quite simple. The reality you experience in your awake consciousness state is a reflection of the beliefs you hold, beliefs that you have agreed to participate in as a human consciousness, as a society, and indeed as individuals. Your creation, your agreement, and your participation are your choice. Absolutely, without exceptions.

Now. If you have any questions we would be willing to attempt to answer them for you.

Questioner: Would you please [expand] your thoughts on birth being the beginning and death being the ending of [this] reality?

Joshiah: You believe in the concept [as you've already] suggested a human consciousness, not necessarily as an individual, but you as a human consciousness believe in this concept of time and space and in order to validate, and to make it real, you have these beliefs that there is that passage of time and in order to validate the passage of time you create realities to sustain and to validate the belief system, and some of those realities involve that belief that you are born and that you die and that there's the passage of time in between.

It's illusory. You exist in the now. And the entity that you believe is a child, for example, that is born, simply validates that belief in time. But many individuals in your so-called awake consciousness state would look at that entity that's entering into an incarnational period and believe that they are somehow a new entity. It's new. That entity has existed, not only in this particular incarnational period, but in a multitude of incarnational periods and does so simultaneously. That entity exists within this incarnational period by choice, a choice that, and once again, is based upon an agreement with other individuals to have a certain type of experience in an incarnational period, but nonetheless, an entity that enters into this vibrational level through choice, and brings with them in various aspects that you now, in your so-called scientific studies would like to have some type of validation that it's within your so-called genetic makeup for the experiences that you have in terms of your physical being and in terms, as well, as a potential to have certain experiences in a particular incarnational period embedded in the so-called DNA.

And so, the choices are made. That individual entering into that so-called birth date is simply an entity who is validating your belief in time and space, who is validating the, and sustaining the illusory reality to make it more real. Not only for themselves but for every other entity that's involved in that particular process.

And once again, you believe that you die. You believe that that incarnational period terminates. It's a belief that you hold. It's an illusory reality. You cannot die, in terms of your so-called consciousness. You simply have various states of existence. And you exist in other incarnational periods simultaneously, if you wish.

You're a multi-dimensional personality existing in various levels of your consciousness simultaneously, all at the same time. That entity that is a child in terms of your belief in time and space could be in some other incarnational period an adult or even an elder who is ready to terminate that particular incarnational period.

It becomes a difficult concept to grasp because you believe, once again that there's this passage of time and space and there isn't really. The irony of it is, and this is where it becomes very difficult for an individual to grasp, is that that child is also experiencing that adulthood and that senior aspect of the experience, for lack of a better term, simultaneously. It's all in the now. Time is an illusion. It does not exist in other levels of your consciousness. It exists in your awake consciousness state.

And you go through these various aspects of so-called progression and of evolution in order to validate the belief in time and space. For without that belief in time and space this whole illusory reality would dissipate. It would be similar to the other vibrational levels that exist throughout creation where you would understand absolutely that you're in control. And you would understand as well that it's within your capacity to create whatever it is that you desire. You can have any experience that you wish and to experience it instantaneously. Doesn't need that passage of time to experience it. Not only instantaneously, but simultaneously with all of the other creations that you desire to experience.

A very difficult concept to grasp, absolutely, but nonetheless, an illusory reality. That child that is born is as much in control of their reality at some level of their consciousness as any other entity existing within your vibrational level. That child chooses and agrees to participate in the reality that they're experiencing. And for many that's a difficult concept to grasp. Particularly if the child enters into what you refer to as a negative or a less than desirable situation and existence in your so-called conscious state. It's a choice. It's a choice to experience the emotions and feelings.

You also, in that particular state of being involved to validate your belief in time and space believe that that child has limited knowledge and accesses to the experiences and as to the reality in that particular incarnational period. And once again, we suggest the irony of it is that that child is also the elder experiencing the reality simultaneously. Not only in that incarnational period but in all of the incarnational periods. Not only of your past but also of your so-called future. For they only exist in your awake consciousness state. Past and present and future are simply terminologies that you use to validate and to sustain your belief in time and space. They don't exist at your altered level of consciousness, at your so-called consciousness state from which you create this reality.

A very difficult concept to grasp, absolutely, but nonetheless a very accurate [one], that you exist in all of the incarnational periods simultaneously. You're so much more than what you perceive in your awake consciousness state. You are a multi-dimensional personality that has that capacity in your awake consciousness state to believe that you're not in control.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Yes, thank you.

Questioner: I was just wondering (inaudible) outside the given consensus—I don't see why we wouldn't, but—do lots of entities use what we would consider technology and technological devices, or is that just a human consensus thing?

Joshiah: Technological devices only exist in your awake consciousness state. In your altered state of consciousness it's within your capacity—not only within your capacity but many of you have experienced what you refer to as the ability to have experiences that are a reflection of the limitlessness of your ability to travel through time and space. In other words, in your altered state of consciousness individuals have that capacity to have experiences of so-called realities that are occurring not only in your past and your future but indeed (inaudible) to alter not only the concept of time but also the concept of space experiences that are occurring on the so-called other side of your Earth system. And they do so without the use of technology.

You see, technology is simply a validation that there's time and space. They're not necessary in your so-called altered state of consciousness. In your altered state of consciousness you can experience other realities and other so-called interactions and activities that are occurring, not only, once again, through the alteration of time by experiencing in your so-called past and that you have experienced (inaudible) even in your own future, that as well, alterations of the space concept and to have those experiences occurring on the other side of your so-called Earth system.

And so, technology, as you refer to it, is simply a validation of the reality in your awake consciousness state. Certainly not necessary in your altered state of consciousness. In your altered state of consciousness this time and space concept do not exist and without the concept of time and space and with one's understanding that you can have whatever it is that you desire, then you begin to understand as well that technology is simply a reflection of the beliefs that you hold. And if you wish to have technology [in] other aspects of creation you can do so if you wish. And you find it] as you are in your altered state of consciousness completely irrelevant and unnecessary.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Yes. Thank you.

Questioner: Can I ask about the bridge? What does the bridge mean to me?

Joshiah: Once again, individuals expect that we may have access to information that you do not have access to, and it's really not that way at all. What does it mean to you? What some concept may mean to an individual at this particular point of your so-called understanding can alter completely when were one to so-called change that perception.

Many use that terminology of a bridge as the so-called connection between your conscious and your so-called subconsciousness or your inner self. That bridge, that connection of who and what you truly are to this awake consciousness state. So, many of those so-called concepts can be limiting because it allows one to believe that one must utilize some type of imaginary concept in order to achieve that connection between one element of your conscious state and one element of your subconscious state.

And the irony of it is that when you allow those particular so-called illusionary aspects to become involved in one's attempts, if you wish, to go withinside they can become very distracting. It's a very difficult concept to put it all aside. When you alter your consciousness many individuals come to that state of existence where it's very entertaining, and it can be very enlightening—if you wish to use that terminology, although we hesitate to use it, for indeed it has many so-called connections that are not relevant to our discussion, but nonetheless—it can become very entertaining for you to be altering your consciousness and to have these visualizations. They can be very comforting and very tempting for you to believe that that's it. "I've got there."

And the irony of it is, that many times those visions, if you wish, and those concepts that if you can have some connection between this reality and your so-called altered state of consciousness reality, they become obstructions rather than assisting you and to achieve that which you desire. It becomes very difficult for an individual to get past that particular level of consciousness, if you wish, where you put aside all of the illusions, if you wish, that one is creating in that altered state of consciousness.

And there's nothing wrong with that. Absolutely not. We're not suggesting that that's a less than desirable aspect. But if one wishes to go withinside and to connect with that portion of your so-called higher self that creates this reality then it must become aware [that] it becomes more possible, if you wish, and the probability becomes much greater if one continuously puts aside all of the so-called illusions and interactions that one experiences when one alters their consciousness and enters into a meditative state.

Including one's concept that if there's a bridge and if you could cross the bridge you can get from here to there or that that bridge concept is a connection. [It's] not wrong, we're not suggesting that one can't have that type of particular image and utilize that particularly to alter consciousness and to get into [a] so-called mediation state. But as one attempts to achieve that so-called connection with one's higher self, with that portion or spark of consciousness that you are, then it becomes very difficult to explain that as you get to nothing you begin to get it all, when you can put it all aside and your consciousness can actually travel outside of the limitations that [is] put upon it.

A difficult concept to grasp, that you are all that is and yet you are nothing. And when you can reach the nothing then you being to understand the limitlessness of who and what you truly are. And all of those concepts, all of the methods and techniques can begin to seem insignificant. Absolutely.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Oh, yes. Thank you.

Questioner: I have a question of curiosity. For about a week I've been waking out of dream state I'll have one word that's there just as I'm waking up. And I didn't know what the words were, so I went to research them. While my conscious mind didn't know what they were, obviously another part of me did. Anyway, they are names of gods from old mythology, different kinds of gods. And I wondered if you could comment or reflect back to me any particular reason that theme would be. I haven't studied those in this lifetime so I was just a little curious as to why that theme was showing up this week.

Joshiah: As we've suggested now, [in] our talk this afternoon, we suggested that many times when an entity alters their consciousness they interact in other incarnational periods. And as one begins to believe that it's within their capacity to have all of these experiences in the so-called now, then one also has that ability to believe that it's possible to bring back into this so-called consciousness state certain memories and retain memories of that interaction in the altered state of consciousness.

As you perpetuate those belief systems, once again, you create the reality to validate the belief. And it's like a validation that it is within your capacity to experience those types of realities, those other incarnational periods and to come back into this awake consciousness state and have absolutely no conscious memory of the interaction, and yet you [had] that ability to have associations with these other incarnational periods that really don't make any sense in your so-called present awake consciousness state. And yet, as we suggested, you can look in your so-called history and validate that interaction and that connection.

Once again, the irony of it is that it's also possible for one to have that experience in the so-called future of your reality. It's just that you don't have the so-called history that you believe is absolute and real to validate and sustain that interaction and connection with a so-called future incarnational period. And you also believe that it's possible for you to alter a future incarnational period and so you could, if you wish, through choices and decisions, alter the future. You can accept that because, you see, as a human consciousness entities existing in this vibrational level believe that the future can be altered; it's the past that's real.

And so, as you have that experience in your so-called dream state and you retain that interaction with your so-called past, and it comes back and you can validate it, you can look into your history as we have suggested and, "Oh yeah, there it is. It validates that the piece of information that I had absolutely no knowledge of," in your so-called awake consciousness state in this incarnational period, "And it validates that I'm so much more than what I believe in my awake consciousness state."

Once again, individuals existing, not only in this incarnational period but in all the levels of your multi-dimensional personality have that ability and capacity and can even get glimpses of your so-called future. You have but to believe and you can have that experience as well. And [yet] you can alter, not only can alter but do alter the past as readily as you can and do alter the future. It's just that you believe that the past is real. And so you come back into this so-called awake consciousness state and you bring back with you certain memories of interactions and then you have this past history that validates the interaction.

You exist in the now. It begs the question, which came first? The retention of the memory of the interaction, and then as you look into the history you create the reality to validate the belief, or did the past occur first and as a result of your so-called past you had the experience. A very interesting concept, that the past is created as a result of your interactions and beliefs in your so-called present. And you alter that as readily as your future, which you believe you can alter as a result of your so-called interactions and choices and decisions in your present.

A very interesting concept. And one which if you grasp and can get a glimpse of that understanding, allows you to, once again, get a grasp of the understand of the illusionary reality that you're existing in. So that you can alter it, you can change it.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Yes, thank you.

Questioner: Can we influence or help a child create a positive or good reality or will each child create the reality that it wishes to experience?

Joshiah: Every individual existing within your vibrational level, once again, is here by choice. Every individual existing within this vibrational level creates the reality that they experience as a reflection of the beliefs that they hold. Now. All of the interactions that occur in each day-to-day activity is a result of agreements between individuals involved in that creation and that day-to-day activity.

And that becomes very difficult to grasp that concept, that you can have a multitude of individuals all agreeing to participate in a creation process of a reality that some might find quite favorable and yet for others it can be quite devastating. And yet, all agree to participate. All. There's not one instance in your vibrational level in the creation process that is accidental. And there is also not one instance in your so-called reality and your creation process that any individual participates in without their agreement.

And that becomes difficult to grasp, absolutely. When one is involved in what you refer to as a less than desirable interaction or activity or [a] reality, and to believe that one is in control of that, absolutely, can be very difficult. When two individuals seemingly are at odds with each another, are in a very conflicting type of reality creation process, it's difficult to believe that both agree to participate at some level of their consciousness. It's also difficult to believe that an entity that you believe to be the so-called child has at some level of its consciousness the exact same power to create as any other entity existing in your vibrational level.

There are no accidents in your vibrational level. If it appears to be an accident, it's because someone wishes to believe that they're not in control. It validates a belief system that one's not in control or that one's not worthy or it validates a belief system that someone else might have control over another entity. But it's only an illusionary conscious reality. At some level of the subconsciousness each reality is creating the experience to validate belief systems. And it does so joyously, without exception.

Can one influence another? If both agree to participate, absolutely. It's an interaction that occurs as a result of individuals at some level of their consciousness holding certain belief systems and creating the reality to validate the belief. It's really that simple.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: So, well, can we, if we have an agreement with someone, and yet we still have a choice, can we change that agreement?

Joshiah: Absolutely. Not only can but do on a continual basis. You see, once again, in your awake consciousness state you believe in this concept of time and space and you believe that the past is set and that the future can be affected by choices and decisions. It's not set. It's an illusion. Time and space are illusions. The past is no more valid than the future. It can all change. It's simply one's belief in time and space in your awake consciousness state that validates this reality, that makes it real, that makes it appear that it's beyond one's control. But it's not, really.

It becomes a difficult concept to grasp, absolutely, that all individuals existing within this vibrational level are here by choice. [There's all] the individuals are creating and experiencing a reality that's a reflection of beliefs that they hold. Absolutely. Without exception. There are no coincidences. There are no such thing as an individual is having that experience because some other individual holds a different belief system. Absolutely not.

It's all a reflection of beliefs and the spark of consciousness that an individual is creates the reality joyously, continuously, and it does so in the now. Time and space are illusions, they only exist in your awake consciousness state.

And that becomes very difficult for an individual to grasp in that awake consciousness state, because all of the individuals existing within your vibrational level have agreed at some level of their consciousness to participate in the perpetuation of the illusion by putting in place that electromagnetic type of energy that limits their capacity to understand who and what they truly are.

You are all interacting with each other, through choice. Absolutely and completely. We suggest that you're a Piece of the One. And that's a very difficult concept to grasp, because it doesn't matter what type of explanation we attempt to give, it's always based upon your belief in time and space. A Piece of the One infers that there's this larger One, and there really isn't. It's all One. You are not separated. Each of you exists within each and every atom of your entire universe, and that becomes a difficult concept to believe, because, "How can that be?" Well, it can be because the entire universe is illusion. It's really quite simple.

But to make it simple and to have it so that you can understand it in your so-called awake consciousness state would simply violate this agreement to be involved in your so-called vibrational level where you have put in place the electromagnetic type of energy. And when entities existing within your so-called vibrational level in any incarnational period in your so-called span of time wish to not sustain that belief, wish to have that experience of understanding that they are in absolute control consciously, then they leave the vibrational level. It's a choice. No one is here because they have to be in your vibrational level. There's not one entity existing within your vibrational level that's here other than they choose to be here. And when they choose not to be here then they [wouldn't] be here.

At some level of your consciousness, each and every entity existing within your vibrational level is here because they choose to be here. And when they choose to leave, they will leave. They are creating [the] reality that they're experiencing so that they can experience the emotions and feelings that are associated with that type of a reality creation. It's really that simple. You make it much more complicated because it makes it more real. And [if] it's more complicated and more real then it's beyond your capacity to control. And if it's beyond your capacity to control then the emotions and feelings are much more intense, and that's why you came here in the first place.

And when they lose their intensity, when you believe that, "Well, I don't wish to participate in this type of reality anymore," then you leave. It's really that simple. There's no progression that one has to go through. There's no entity existing within your vibrational level that's put here because some other entity believed they had to grow or expand. It is not that way. You are no more and no less than any other entity that exists, not only in your vibrational level but in any of the other vibrational levels throughout all of creation. You are all that is. Absolutely. And each and every other entity that exists is all that is.

A difficult concept to grasp when you believe in time and space. But nonetheless, every entity existing within your vibrational level is experiencing their reality as a reflection of the beliefs that they hold. And some of those beliefs are chosen at your so-called altered state of consciousness, particularly if you in your awake state of consciousness choose to make certain decisions based upon the belief that you don't have that opportunity to control your reality. Then the spark of consciousness that you are validates that belief system. Absolutely. And it does so joyously. It gives you whatever it is that you desire and it does so without judgment. And it's the same with every other entity existing within your vibrational level. Absolutely. Without exception.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Yes. Thank you.

Questioner: So, when we die [and leave] this reality, and we still see what's going on in this reality without having, without interfering, I guess?

Joshiah: The irony of it is that entities existing outside of your vibrational level, for the most part, have no desire to be involved in this creation process. It's like, you're involved in a creation process in your so-called circle of influence and there are other entities involved in other creations in certain other societies, that you have absolutely no interest in at all. You could spend your entire time, if you wish, studying those particular societies. But for the most part, you're more concerned about your creation and about your reality and how all those other societies influence your reality as opposed to worrying entirely about what those other societies are involved in [in] their creation process.

And so it is when you exist outside of this vibration level. For the most part you have absolutely no desire to be involved or to be interested in this particular incarnational society type of [a] creation process. There are exceptions. Absolutely. We are an exception. Through our interaction with our friend Elias we have the opportunity to have many experiences that are not [possible in our] particular vibrational level. Experiences, in fact, that we can, if you wish, tap into the emotions and feelings that you experience in your vibrational level in your awake consciousness state.

We have suggested many times that we have no desire to be involved in your incarnational period other than these so-called interactions which, for lack of a better terminology, occur within certain periods of your incarnational so-called lifetimes. Our interaction with our friend Elias has been ongoing, if you wish, in many incarnations. Because it exists in the now we (inaudible) capacity to be involved in certain incarnations in various aspects of the creation process and in return we share with our friend the opportunity for him to experience, what you refer to, that connection of who and what you truly are.

And it's a sharing, if you wish, it's an agreement. And it allows us that capacity to have that experience without actually entering into your vibrational level which, as we have said before, we have absolutely no desire to be involved in any type of reality creation process in your vibrational level. We are, we would suggest, the exception. Most entities have absolutely no desire to be involved or to observe your creation process. Absolutely not. Other entities are involved in their creation process. Other entities do not have the capacity to influence your reality or your creation process any more than we have the capacity to influence your creation process. It's just not done. It's not possible. No more than you have the capacity to create or to influence our creation. It just is not possible.

Does that answer your question?

Questioner: Yes.

Joshiah: Well, now. It has indeed been, once again, as always, a very enjoyable interaction and we appreciate and are grateful for these opportunities to interact and to share with each of you. And we would remind you that we are not separated by time or space but rather by a vibrational level and should you choose to interact with us you have but to express the intent and we would welcome that opportunity to interact and to share with each of you. And we would, once again, offer you our absolute, unending support and unconditional love. And we would bid each of you farewell, with love and with peace. ✨