

Market Share: The True North Star Business Metric Gaining a Competitive Edge in the Market

Discover the hidden pitfalls of relying solely on sales growth as a success metric. This article explores why understanding your market share is crucial for sustainable growth and how it offers a clearer picture of your competitive standing. Dive into our expert insights for turning market share data into your strategic advantage.

Market Share: The True North Star Business Metric Gaining a Competitive Edge in the Market

It's easy to be misled by the allure of rising sales figures. However, these numbers may be deceiving without a clear understanding of your market share. Imagine a scenario where your sales are up by 10%—a seemingly impressive achievement at first glance. Yet, if the overall market has grown by 20%, your company has actually lost ground to competitors.

Revenue Market Share—the ratio of your organization's sales to the entire industry's revenues—furnishes a more sophisticated and precise representation of success versus mere sales figures. This is the traditional definition of market share, but the industry revenue is very difficult to determine.

Account Market Share—the ratio of your organization's number of clients out of the total number of prospects available—furnishes a simple and easy measurement of your company's competitiveness. This methodology also provides leads and a focus for your Sales Team.

This strategy is known as "Account-Based Marketing" (ABM) or "vertical sales approach." Tracking account market share spotlights how much of the total addressable market your company has captured. ABM is a strategic approach in marketing and sales where key business accounts are marketed directly, as units of one (i.e., the 'logo'), rather than through broader market campaigns.

Account Market Share refers to the percentage of total accounts (or clients) in a defined market or segment that are managed, served, or owned by a particular company, relative to the total number of such accounts in the market. This metric is useful for assessing a company's dominance, competitiveness, and growth.

$$\text{Account Market Share} = \frac{\text{Number of Company Accounts}}{\text{Total Number of Targeted Accounts}}$$

* Riodatos provides the research to identify all the companies (logos) that comprise the denominator of the equation. Your client list is the numerator. See the Riodatos program and prices to provide this information (end of article).
