CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Expressing the sense of the WCL over a standard policy needed for women's storage and breastfeeding stations (or designated room), a policy should be issued that can be used worldwide in any workplace or business setting.

Whereas several men and women have asked the United States Presidential Service Center (USPSC) and the WCL for help in designing and issuing a uniform world policy;

Whereas women seek equality in business and professional lives but are physically different and medically different;

Whereas breast milk has been found universally to be the best for brain development and growth by male and female infants by leading pediatricians worldwide and should be provided for as long as possible via manual suction-cup, or electronic machine, pumping and subsequent cold storage and refrigeration until leaving the work office, construction site, warehouse, warship, or work-center to go home;

Whereas a separate miniature station can be purchased, that looks like a small camper and are often set up in work areas, or a designated room can be established with small refrigerator, cleaning supplies, signs of encouragement and support, and labels for different bottles to be had;

Whereas additional information from the United Nations is available at <https://www.unwomen.org/en/how-we-work> and UN Women acts on two fronts. It supports international political negotiations to formulate globally agreed standards for gender equality. And it helps the UN Member States to implement those standards by providing expertise and financial support. UN Women also assists other parts of the UN system in their efforts to advance gender equality across a broad spectrum of issues related to human rights and human development.

Resolved by the WCL (the USPSC concurring),

That it is ordered by the WCL that--

- (1) a comprehensive one-page policy should be completed; and
- (2) the policy will suggest three different companies with their complete web address and contact info to order everything they need.
