

Forget Me Not

A worm slithers slowly across the muddy ground
The Black bird dives and takes its meal without a sound
The Ducks feed and drink from the murky river
Willing to take whatever nature can deliver
A squirrel forages for food on the forest floor below the tree
It's pleading eyes look directly up at me

In shame the Daffodils slouch, their heads bowed down
It would seem they were losing their golden crown
The haughty Bluebells stand tall and proud
Their bells ringing as they enjoy the droplets from the angry crowd
The wild Rose Bush flaunting shamelessly as far as the eye can
The Blooming Dyer offers Nectar to the hungry Bee

The yellow Whin stands on guard, surrounding the park
Fungi grows on the trees imperial bark
Speckles of white and yellow show through the green
The little Daisy definitely wants to be seen
The Cherry Blossom towers above them all in her bright pink gown
However it is the Lebonease Cedar that wears the golden crown

The gushing white rapids creates artistic patterns on the river below
The tears of the angry clouds cause the river to grow
As I watch this amazing scene by the rapid white waterfall
In these uncertain times it's almost like I wasn't here at all
So little blue flower, I say "forget me not" for I was here"
Forget me not for my memory of you is very clear
