

Hi

DO YOU WANT TO HEAR YOUR STORY BROADCAST ON RADIO?

'PICK OF THE POPS' VICTORY RADIO 600 WORD SHORT STORY COMPETITION

I'd like to tell your members of a great short story competition launched today.

Loree Westron, founder member of the Portsmouth Authors Collective and Bob Bruce, owner of Victory Online radio are offering a unique opportunity to new and experienced writers to hear their short stories on the radio. Victory Online is based in Portsmouth but has listeners all over the UK tuning in on phones, tablets, computers and DAB+ radio. In Bob's words, "Radio like it used to be."

Every Thursday on Bob's popular 'Morning Call' show he invites Loree and another local author to the studio to talk about writing events and their latest books. Now they have joined forces to launch a 600 word writing competition 'Pick of the Pops' so that more voices can be heard.

Writers are invited to take their titles and their inspiration from Victory's playlist – spanning pop tunes from the 1950s to the Noughties. This is a national competition, which is being promoted to writers and writing groups all around the country. The top ten stories will be recorded by actors and broadcast on Victory Online and authors of the top three will win a selection of prizes.

You can listen to the launch on Victory's Catch Up service for the next 7 days.

I love this station as it plays all the tunes I can remember the words to with lively presenters that really want to engage with their listeners. Have a listen and I'm sure you'll hear a track that inspires you to rush off to your notebook or laptop to start writing that winning story!

I appreciate your time and would be delighted if you could include the details in your next newsletter or on your facebook page for your members. If you have any questions please check out the website or contact me via email.

Many thanks
