

The Devil's In The Detail

When writing there's a rule of thumb
No clichés or idiom

They're repetitive and make no sense
Like being sat upon a fence

Hard to balance, causes pain
Oh boy, you can say that again!

Rather than flogging a dead horse
Why not think outside the box?

At the crack of dawn or end of the day
Do as I do, not do as I say

Lead by example, fight the good fight
Don't cross to the dark side, stay in the light

In order to make your sweet heart sing
Bend over backwards to do the right thing

Dot the I's and cross the T's
It's really as simple as ABC

If the going gets tough, don't give up on your dreams
The end will justify the means

So listen up, here's my advice
Don't use clichés when you write

Take it or leave it, pie in the sky
Leave it out, or do and die
