

Testing

Everything changed, nothing was the same
An invisible enemy came, our lives to claim Shut the doors don't let anyone in To go out without a mask was a sin Social distance was the clarion call If we were to have any chance at all Essential workers did their best To help us out of this mess Test, test and test again Was the constant refrain then science came to our aid we no longer had to be afraid of the worst outcome of this disease although we couldn't fully be at ease as the virus mutated in different ways to combat our return to normal days so we adapted to a different norm worked from home to perform our jobs and our children's education shopping, chatting and entertainment

As we regain our everyday lives
Take care and we will survive, Regain our family visits, holidays
Life in its many glorious ways
