

GASCalc™, its options, and supplements are licensed for installation on only one computer per authorized copy. That is, only one copy of the program is intended to be installed per license. Each purchased copy of the program represents one license. We are relying on your honesty and integrity to ensure that multiply copies of the program are not created.

In reference to this agreement, the following definitions shall apply: Software shall mean the GASCalc program, documentation, and any associated options, enhancements, or supplements; User shall mean the individual or organization purchasing the Software, the individual or organization employing the persons to be using the Software, the individual or organization otherwise responsible for the administration of the use of the Software, or any affiliate thereof; Developer shall mean B3PE LLC (formerly Bradley B Bean PE). By use of the Software, the User consents and agrees to accept full responsibility for the use of the Software including: Interpretations, conclusions, or decisions based on any results derived from the Software; Any claims resulting from the use, accidental misuse, or intentional misuse of the Software by the User; And for reimbursement of the original purchase price to the Developer for each unauthorized copy of the Software generated from the User's authorized copy.

The Developer neither assumes nor incurs any explicit or implied responsibility or liability for conclusions or decisions made by the User based on values produced or derived from the software, and makes no warranty or claim as to the fitness for use of the software for any specific purpose other than that described and referenced in the accompanying documentation.

Depending on the specific version received by the User, the Software will use a certain copy protection method. The method may require registration of the software with the Developer, installation of a physical security device on the User's equipment, or other method of protection. By installing the Software the User consents and agrees to the means of copy protection.

A SINGLE USER LICENSE (LITE) provides limited feature access for installation of the Software on one machine per purchased license in a stand alone configuration.

A SINGLE USER LICENSE (FULL) provides full feature access for installation of the Software on one machine per purchased license in a stand alone configuration, or for installation of the Software on a shared drive, allowing concurrent users up to the purchased license count.

An ENTERPRISE LICENSE provides full feature access for installation of the Software on an unlimited number of machines owned or contracted by a single operating company, or for installation of the Software on a shared drive, allowing unlimited number of concurrent users so long as all users are employed by or contracted to the operating company purchasing the Software. This license type will be assigned to an individual operating company.

A CORPORATE LICENSE provides full feature access for installation of the Software on an unlimited number of machines at an unlimited number of locations so long as all machines are owned or contracted by a single holding company, or for installation of the Software on a shared drive, allowing unlimited number of concurrent users so long as all users are employed by or contracted to the holding company purchasing the Software. This license type will be assigned to a single holding company.

Purchase of a license provides authority for perpetual use of the Software, to the extent that the software will operate unmodified on future operating systems. An annual maintenance fee may be applied for custom installations or in cases where a non-standard license agreement is used, otherwise no annual maintenance fee is required. Updates to the Software are available for download at no additional charge from our website. Technical support on the use of the Software is provided by way of telephone or email communication at no additional fee.

