Synopsis

"Hold that pose!" It's time for the annual Young American Miss State Pageant again, and this time the competition is fierce. So many girls but only one can walk away the winner. Brenda and Big Bob Freeland run the Santa Rosa competition and put up with all kinds of shenanigans - peeping toms, emotional outbursts, and a choreographer who demands a ramp for the show, even if it means going over budget. The pageant hopefuls include Doria, a southern blonde who wants to win and eventually live out her dreams in Disneyland; Robin, a pretty girl who is in way over her head; Maria, the Latino sensation who has more talent in her tamales than most girls have in their whole acts; and a slew of others with the kinds of wild and wacky personalities you would expect to find at such a heated competition. With a score full of songs that would have been right at home on 80's pop radio stations and dancing that promises to electrify the audience, this crowd-pleaser could only lead to a room full of smiles!
