

A vibrant field of yellow flowers stretches to the horizon under a clear blue sky with a few wispy clouds. The flowers are densely packed and create a textured, golden foreground.

About This Production

You Should Have Seen the One That Got Away

Tonight, Big Fish takes one of its first turns on the stage since the show closed on Broadway in December 2013. You will be experiencing this musical at the end of its ripening journey into our hands, and at the beginning of its life in regional and community theatre.

This story has come a long way since the publication of David Wallace's original novel, Big Fish: A Novel of Mythic Proportions, in 1998. It has existed through his novel, through the film by John August and Tim Burton, and then through the musical by Andrew Lippa and John August. Lines have been kept and thrown away; scenes and characters have been added and removed; fish have changed species; and musical numbers have been retooled over and over again. So what you see before you tonight is the result of almost two decades of creativity and collaboration among these artists and writers and their actors, designers and audiences.

Over these transformative years, Big Fish has grown to embody and build on the storytelling traditions that weave the cultural fabric of America. You will see common motifs from American tall tales, including everything from giants to swamp witches, war heroes and beautiful women. All the iconic American characters — Johnny Appleseed and Paul Bunyan, Annie Oakley and Pecos Bill — are part of the legacy that our protagonist Edward Bloom and his creators now carry.

Gunslingers, mermaids and werewolves are as much a part of how we and our neighbors have come to understand our growing nation as they are a part of this story and those that came before it. In fact, Edward Bloom's tall tales all have their roots in myths and legends that are uniquely American from eyebrows to bootstraps. You could say this musical is a love letter to American legends, and the storytellers who laid down their foundations.

This rings truest in the story behind our story. David Wallace wrote about a man, his father and his father's larger-than-life stories. John August gave us more of Edward's tall tales and an even bigger cinematic and imaginative experience. Then, when Andrew Lippa came on board for the musical, he and August cut away some characters, scenes and settings that were in the movie script, in order to focus on the crucial tales — making Karl taller, Sandra more lovely, and Edward even braver.

Big Fish is, as its name suggests, a "big fish" story. With every telling, it continues to get bigger, bolder and more in touch with its heart, even as its details become exaggerated and implausible.

The show you see tonight has been growing for years, and it will continue to grow even as you watch. It will let you fall in love with storytelling again, just as its creators did at every stage of its development.

Sara Lyons
DRAMATURG

About This Production

'Be the Hero of Your Story If You Can:' Epic Dreams on Stage

We all do it — we tell the story of something that happened to us and, to give it a little more dramatic effect, we exaggerate a few details. No harm done, right?

But what if those exaggerations took on a life of their own, so much so that the seed of truth within them was buried so deep, a major excavation would be needed to unearth it?

Edward Bloom has told many stories throughout his lifetime, and his son, Will, is desperate to dig out from under all the witches, giants and tornadoes to uncover who the man behind all these tall tales really is. If only he had just listened to the stories, he might have learned more than he ever imagined.

For really, what Edward wants is what we all want. He wants to be the hero of his own story — to be the knight in shining armor, the savior, the good guy, the last man standing after all the dust has settled.

For most of us, the stories we tell our friends and family will only ever play out in our collective imaginations. But today, you will experience the thrill of seeing Edward's stories come alive right before your eyes.

Every exaggeration, every fanciful detail, every over-the-top nuance will come to startling, musical life on stage through the talent of a cast of over 50 young performers. They will tell this epic tale through song and dance, and they will transport you.

I always feel humbled and grateful that so many people are so gracious and thank me, the director, after seeing the Port Summer Show. They treat me as if somehow I have done this heroic feat of putting on a show.

But that is an exaggeration, too. It isn't me — it's everyone you see on stage, every crew member you spot silently sliding a set piece across the stage, every musician keeping time, every parent volunteer who has organized everything from props to wigs to concessions to tickets, every quiet helper who in their own way adds to what you see as the finished product on stage.

These people are all my heroes. They all take time out of their lives to come together and create a sort of magic that is hard to describe in words.

So enough words! The story you are here to see will begin shortly, and boy, is it a whopper of a tale!

Diana,

We are so proud of you and all of your accomplishments on and off stage.

Your smile lights up a room,

Always be proud of who you are.

Your gifts are many, your talent is extraordinary,
your possibilities are endless ...

Dear Senior PSS Board Parents,

It's always a joyful yet sad time when we say goodbye to our seniors, but it is equally sad to say goodbye to our senior parents. Being part of the PSS board, we shared laughs, snacks, horrible weather and many, many, many scripts to read.

Nomi, your calm manner and smile, always made me feel that everything was going to be okay.

Bob, you are walking Google. Your energy, stories and love of life are inspiring.

Karen, your "can do" energy and creativity always made me smile, and you always came through with that hard-to-find prop!

Katie, I am amazed and inspired by your creative genius that knows no bounds. Throughout your 10 years of dedication to the PSS, you have made new friends, and kept the old – from banners to sets, toilets and Eleanor, simply amazing!

I will truly miss all of you next year, and cannot thank you enough for all you have done and have meant to PSS and to me.

With love,

Jeanne

Two years in pit and five above it,
Ensemble parts for your first four.
Still, “no small roles”—they say. You love it,
Stagestruck and stuck on the stage door.
A decade back (excuse digression),
Playing with stuffed toys your obsession,
Enjoying shows like Lucky Stiff,
Into the Woods, and Starmites, if Encouraged to perform you'd duly
Retreat, yet here you are in light.
Life's full of big surprises, right?
So sing out, “Sandra Bloom”—how truly
You need no roof to raise our hearts.
One chapter ends, the next one starts.

Congratulations to the entire cast, crew, pit, team, and parents of Port Summer Show's 2015 production of Big Fish!

Congratulations to the Stopfords' Favorite Daughter on her Summer Show stage debut! Break a leg, Una. We are so proud of you!

Wyndham-John, from the Pit in Pajama Game, to Officer Lockstock in Urinetown, you have dazzled us every summer. We wish you a magical life, filled with wonderful stories.

Thanks to all in the Summer Show family!

— Angus, Jeannine, Robin,
Basil & Honey Bunny

"BIG FISH"

THE SIGMAN FAMILY

CONGRATS TO ALL!

Here's to you, Jake, to your oldest Summer Show friends, your newest Summer Show friends, all Summer Show 2015 graduates, everyone who has ever worked on, is working on, or will work on the Summer Show, ensemble players everywhere, Harry Potter, dinosaurs, dogs, waffles, tap dancing, musical theater, Shark Week, the diving boards at the old Manorhaven Pool, Moe's, YA authors, little brothers, roller coasters, sunscreen, Ms. Leonard, Tina Fey, Amy Poehler, Joel McHale, Matt Groening, Trey Parker and Matt Stone, Will Ferrell, Kristin Wiig, Seth MacFarlane, Key & Peele, and BIG DREAMS!

(Thank goodness your big dreams no longer include marrying this guy, having Siamese twins, and living down the street from your parents!)

It's been such a pleasure seeing you brighten the Schreiber stage these past five years!

You've grown into a wonderful performer, with a gift for comedy and a knack for acting years beyond your own age!

We can't wait to see you "Be the Hero" you were always meant to be! Best of luck!

Congratulations to the cast, crew and producers for this wonderful production!
