Pheasants Forever and Quail Forever promote Josh Marshall to Senior Farm Bill Wildlife Biologist

Marshall will take on expanded responsibilities in this leadership role

MILAN, Mo. – June 29, 2023 – Pheasants Forever and Quail Forever in Missouri is excited to announce the team’s own Josh Marshall was promoted to Senior Farm Bill Wildlife Biologist. He started his new role on June 27.

The Farm Bill Wildlife Biologists on the Missouri team are partnership positions supported by the Natural Resources Conservation Service, the Missouri Dept. of Conservation, and the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation. Marshall, stationed in Milan, Mo., will continue to work with private landowners in Putnam, Mercer, Grundy, and Sullivan counties helping them with wildlife management planning. He will also serve as the lead for the northern Missouri Farm Bill Wildlife Biologists.

“As a tenured member of the Missouri team, Josh has developed into a great resource professional and is valued among the landowners, partners, and peers he works closely with,” said Missouri State Coordinator Andrew White. “His passion and dedication to conserving soil, water, and wildlife are top tier, and using relationships he’s built with teammates and partners, paired with his leadership experience in the Marines, I trust he will accel in this new role and help propel the Missouri team to further success.”

Marshall has been with the Missouri team since April 2018 and has been working in conservation since 2014. As a Farm Bill Wildlife Biologist, he loves being able to work with Missouri landowners and help them reach their conservation goals. He grew up in northwest Missouri where he worked and hunted on his family farm, which grew his passion for the outdoors and conservation. He graduated from the College of the Ozarks with a B.S. in Conservation & Wildlife Management and has been working in the conservation field ever since.
