Learning from failure a new view

The What:

Want to get more from your investigations? Are you only skimming the surface of whats available to learn? Bringing to life the power of creating a learning organisation where you can really reframe failures to amplify learning and improving. Whether it's an accident, incident, quality issue, customer complaint, all failures are opportunities to learn and get better.

This 1/2 day in person interactive workshop will delve into a new approach to reframe failure and really extract the learning so you can implement real sustainable change.

The Who:

- Leaders, Business Owners, H&S Manager, anyone involved with investigating, exploring failures of any kind.
- Especially important for safety critical business to enhance their current investigation process.

The Why:

Often when something goes wrong its easy to jump to judgements and assumptions and this can get in the way of really learning. Its not about who touched it last, but the context thats surrounds the failure and the events leading up to it. Failure is not something a business wants but its inevitable so we need to find a way to reframe these failures to really maximise the opportunity to learn from them which is the only way to reduce the chances it will reoccur.

If you are ready to really learn from your world of work and embrace reframing failures then this is for you.
