> The situation here in regard to the Board of Education expenditures has been pitiful. There has been absolutely no appreciation of countrywide conditions. There has not even been any pretence at cutting down expenditures. All we have is a little juggling and a smoke-screen attempt to confuse the taxpayers. One of the sweet items among the many is coal. We were told this item in the budget or estimate was cut down a couple of thousand dollars. The budget calls for $8,000.00 for coal when approximately $7,000.00 was spent in the last full year. Why have 14 per cent more in the budget than was actually spent in the last full year-July 1st, 1930, to June 30th, 1931. This has been one of the mildest years in the history of the country. There ought to have been comparatively little coal

If the people are to continue to have their homes around here, they have to take more interest in the actual expenditures and not have tax money regarded as a free-for-all. It is up to each member of the Board of Education to know where every

Odd Forms of "Exercise"

Dr. Harrison Gray Dyer, Washington (D. C.) biologist who died three years ago, had a unique solution of the exercise problem. Recently workmen engaged in tearing down his former home found an extensive labyrinth of passages and excavations underground. Some of the passages were neatly cemented and fitted with doors. Dyar's widow explained that her husband, ordered by his physician to get more exercise and, being unable to get out into the country, arose at five o'clock each morning for four years and put in several hours of digging daily.

Beauty Talks

MARJORIE DUNCAN

Famous Beauty Expert

Ambitious to Be Beautiful?

I HAVE heard young girls say, my ambition is to be a pianist, teacher, salesgirl, singer, Always a goal. have heard business women declare "I am ambitious to make this a banner year." Hard work ahead. I have seen them direct their efforts along the desired channels, hard work, stickto-it-iveness. Success may have been slow but it was sure.

We all know what sacrifices have to be and have been made in order to achieve success; but desire backed by ambition, and hard, sincere work usually make a success formula.

There will be more beautiful women in the world when more women are ambitious to be beautiful.

Women who excuse a lack of loveliness by, "Oh, you have to be born beautiful," or "I haven't the time," or "I haven't the money," or "I haven't the face, figure or foundation to work with," or "I just can't fuss," are only shutting their eyes to their own possibilities. Lack of loveliness on their part is due largely to laxness,

To be sure there are types and types. There's the short person who wishes she were tall, the large-framed lady who wishes she were petite, the blond who envies the brunette and the brownle who resorts to peroxide bleachers. But there is sufficient loveliness in every type. And to be the perfect exponent of your type is truly to "be beautiful." For remember that beauty today is not measured by the straightness of one's nose or the natural curl of the hair. Selfmade beauty is what counts. Selfmade beauty is nothing more nor less than perfect grooming. And perfect grooming is within reach of every woman.

The course is a simple one. Take an inventory of yourself.

Ask yourself these questions: Am I in good health? If not, see your physician at once. If the answer is yes, live sanely to preserve this most precious possession. There is little excuse for not knowing the health rules. And there is even less excuse for not observing

Now for actual beauty. Take your gure, your skin, your eyes, your brows, your entire face, your hair, your hands, your arms, legs, etc., your sture, attention to details, personal daintiness. Under each heading make a fairly full report of why you are or are not satisfied with yourself. And that are you doing for each item in he beauty ensemble?

"Nerves" Undermine Health and Beauty

A PHYSICIAN and nerve specialist speaking: "Too many over-zealous, over-conscientious people in the world we live in that's the trouble. Many men, but more women. They love beauty more than their health, but sacrifice both on the altar of over-activity, or over-worry-whatever it is it is over-much."

The discussion put me on the qui vive and in a single day I saw more pictures of "nerves" than I had seen in the preceding month. And every case marked the truth of the learned doctor's verdict.

First we visited a large business organization. Huddled in a corner of one of the offices was a young girl, typing away faster than we ever heard a human type, head lowered over her work, eyes and fingers flying. Her department head whispered us a word of commendation.

"A little wonder-simply in love with her work - engrossed in it from the minute she gets in until the time she leaves, which is usually long past the regular hour." She was giving too much-that young girl.

Without a "let up" a few months' breathless, top-speed, long-houred work-a-days would undermine her health, her eyes would lose their spar kle, her hair its luster, her skin become haggard. She may soon be rewarded with a higher position and more pay-then again she may fall victim to "nerves" long before the reward comes.

The next picture-luncheon with an old acquaintance. A trick of fate and fortune had suddenly plunged her into the maelstrom of social activity. An hour to herself was an "event." "I look a wreck, don't I (and without waiting for an answer) got to get more ginger, can't seem to keep step, feel tired out. Think I'll go hiking-that ought to make me feel peppy, don't you think?"

"Think you ought to go to bed for a week," I put in. But the look of surprise on her face seemed to saywho ever heard of going to bed? It took hard work on my part to convince her to drop everything for a week, go to bed, get complete rest and resumed her routine to have it modified-a great deal.

Too much of anything is-just too much. And work and worry can route health and beauty more quickly than

A STORY FOR BEDTIME

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

IF YOU think Peter Rabbit had a narrow escape when, just in the nick of time, Hooty the Owl swooped at Shadow the Weasel and drove him into hiding, Shadow himself had a narrower escape. Yes, indeed. Shadow had as narrow an escape as you can well imagine. There was just one thing that saved Shadow and that was his tail. Shadow ought to think a great deal of that tail. Probably he does. And yet it is quite likely that Shadow doesn't know to this day that it was his tail that saved him that night. But Hooty the Owl er Nature had been in a hurry when she changed Shadow's coat and lorg the end of his tail. But she didn't. Oh, my, no! Old Mother Nature never forgets. She left the end of Shadow's tail black purposely, and it's lucky for him that she did. You see, when he came jumping along in the snow, Hooty the Owl saw him. That is, he saw something moving. But Shadow was so white and the snow was so white that it was very hard indeed to tell them apart. Still, it is probable that Shadow would have been caught but for one thing. The black tip of his tail was very easy to see. Of course. Against that white snow it stood right out as black as black can be. Hooty couldn't help seeing that. It was such hard work to see Shadow himself and so easy to see that black end of Shadow's tail that Hooty kept his eyes fixed on that.

When Shadow was near enough, Hooty swooped swiftly and silently, but his eyes being fixed on that moving black spot, he grabbed at that with his great claws instead of at Shadow himself, and that tail being too small for him to get hold of he simply plunged his great claws into the snow and got nothing at all. Shadow dodged like a flash. No one can dodge quicker than Shadow the Weasel. He can move so quickly that it would have been hard work to follow him even if he had been wearing his summer coat of brown, but in that white coat-

The instant he had dodged the first time his sharp little eyes had looked all about for a hiding place, and they had seen an old log with a hole in it. It was nearer than the brush pile where Peter was hiding. Right away he decided that was the place for him. So dodging swiftly this way and that way he reached the little hole and darted in. He was safe, but he was terribly angry. He knew that he would have to stay there until Hooty got tired of watching. He knew, too, that but for Hooty he

Instead of landing on the hearth, however, the purse fell into one of the little girl's stockings, hung up before the hearth to dry. Thus commenced the custom of hanging up Christmas stockings for Santa Claus to fill.

How the grave saint of the early Christian church became the jolly fat Santa of today is another story. His figure and smile-wreathed face he borrowed probably from some jolly pagan good-fairy such as were worshipped before the Christian era. MAGGIE

THE hero of that familiar song, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," was its author, George W. Johnson; its heroine was Maggie Harris, the girl he found and won for his bride during a gold prospecting trip in the wilderness of unexplored forest, Indian ambuscades and occasional white pioneer settlements which in 1830 comprised East Tennessee.

Many years later, old and gray and alone, Johnson returned to the spot on the Haiwassee river that was the scene of his courtship, reviving in his mind's eye every dear detail of the settlement as he had first seen it, the green greve where stood the Harris cabin and where he had first seen Maggie, the old mill where they had walked on a summer evening. Noting sadly every change, he wrote down his poem to take home to his wife in the

KING ARTHUR

WHETHER King Arthur was a historical figure or not, and scholars are recently renewing research into this fascinating subject, there stand today in Cornwall, England, ruins of an ancient fortress, crowning the promontory Tintagel Head, which are generally known as "King Arthur's Castle." As the birthplace of the glorious King of the Round Table, this spot has recently been transferred to the possession of the English government to be used as a national park.

Such a chieftain is celebrated by the Sixth century historian Gildas, in connection with an account of the Battle of Mount Badon in 516, the decisive struggle which checked temporarily the advance of the Saxons against the Celts. Nennius, writing in the Eighth century, calls him by name and attributes to him victory in twelve battles. The date of his death in the battle of Camlan in 537 is added in the Tenth centur, Cambrian Annals. By the Twelfth century the Monks Goeffrey of Monmouth and William of Malmesbury were able to produce accounts of his heroism already embellished with much of the legend made familiar by Mallory and Tennyson.

Actually, only the foundations of the chapel of "King Arthur's Castle" date from anything like as early as the Sixth century. The rest of the ruins have been established as Thirteenth century Norman.

Lesson for Mankind in Bees' Trick on Mr. Bear

This happened long, long ago even before the first Indians broke the trails along the Mohawk and the Genesee. In those times, Mr. Bear had a long, long nose and a reputation of putting it in everybody's business besides his own, according to this fable related by Dr. E. A. Bates of Cornell university.

One of his most evil deeds was stealing the bees' honey. This made the bees very angry and finally they held a big council about the matter. After due deliberation, they sent a courier bee to bring in their friend, the woodpecker. In a common council, the bees and the woodpecker devised a scheme to trap the wicked bear and stop him from stealing the honey.

They selected a tree trunk that was hollow from the top to the ground and the woodpecker cut a hole in its side, just the size of the bear's nose. The bees smeared honey all around the hole and then all ist (London).

THE PHILIPPINES

There are two bills in Congress for freeing the Prilippines. One calls for the immediate freeing of the Islands, and the other calls for a gradual severing of relations with the United States in

Much of the development that has occurred in the Phillipines has been due to the efficiency of the War Department, although the Island is under the jurisdiction of a Governor appointed by the

The United States has spent large sums of money on schools, sanitation, harbors and other signs of progress and development in the Philippines. It has helped delevop agriculture and manufarcture in that Island. It has aided the marketing of its products. No few of the products of the Philippines come in free to the United States where a market exists for them.

It would be decidedly difficult for the Philippines to blossom over night into a new full-fledged government. It is unlikely that this would be possible. Under the Spanish rule the Philippines were practically serfs. There is, of course, an element in the Philippines that agitates for independence with the idea of seizing the reins of government and reaping financial and other benefits. This would probably lead to demoralization, confusion and revolution.

The average American will probably share the attitude of Secretary of War Hurley that while this country wants to see the Philippines eventually free there can be no definite time set for it and that the Islands ought not to be set free until there are clear cut evidences of its readiness to assume the reins of government and carry on commercial activities without aid of any outside power. Hurley bluntly says that he does not think they are now ready to go on their own. He maintains that no definite time can be fixed for releasing the Islands and that it all depends upon local and general world-wide conditions. He asserts if you fail to take into consideration both factors and turn the Islands loose before the Islanders are ready for self-government you are likely to have a revolution. He suggests it is just as reasonable to turn them free now and let them have a revolution under their own flag rather Life," sang a soprano on the Club than the American flag. The Philippine Islanders ought to thank God that in all these years they have had the United States To draw men as they ought to be not trying to build up a system of civilization for them, developing trade channels and carrying the heavy expense of war protection. There is another consideration. Regardless of the loud speakers in the two Houses in Washington, the people of the which holds as good today as it did Committee. United States, since the Spanish war, have spent a lot of money on the Philippine Islands. It seems an economic waste to turn the Islands loose before the Islanders are clearly ready for self-government. Again, there are troublous conditions in the vicinity of the Philippine Islands. From a standpoint of defence, it would be unwise at this particular juncture to abandon the Philippin Islands.

The Filipinos would find it quite a different thing on their own, The political plunderers there as in the rest of the world would soon get busy. The factions would have their usual fights. WAKING UP

In an editorial on the school situation, the Perth Amboy News points out that the people at last are beginning to study school expenditures. They have very little chance to study them here. The regime that has been in the saddle almost since the beginning of the time there was a Board of Education here holds desperately to a cloak of secrecy and silence. No light is thrown upon expenditures except what is forced out. Another day is coming and com-

The Perth Amboy News has the following to say: "In most instances a heavy vote was recorded, showing that the taxpayer has at last studied the costs of school administration and school board functioning. In another year, if this concern is still manifest, and there is no curtailment in the public school bill, another revolution on the part of the taxpayers will be forthcoming."

LET US HAVE THE NAMES

It is reported that two teachers did not agree to a pledge of a contribution towards the relief fund, which has only recently started. Teachers in many municipalities throughout the United States have been contributing to a relief fund ever since 1929. Here it is 1932, with the worst conditions the world ever saw and with the people that are hardest hit having to put mortgages on their homes to carry school employees on their backs and the backs of their children, yet some teachers refuse to contribute to the relief fund. We ought to know who they are. We also ought to know who is contributing and how much. This is only fair to those who contribute as well as to the community. They deserve no praise because government

It was reported a teacher in one family of five with everyone of Benjamin N. Cardozo, Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals of working but the mother, all with fine salaries, has refused to contribute. It is also reported that the daughter of a politician who has been well taken care of by the town all his life has done likewise. Let us have their names and put their pitctures in the paper.

PHIL COOK SAYS

Mary had a little lamb, its fleece was white as snow; The lamb got into politics, and now its black as coal.

Phil must have heard something of the Board of Education politics over the last quarter of a century—the "you scratch my back and I will scratch yours" society. He must have heard something essentially an American one. He possibly heard of the secret sodollars. This is aside from the tremendous sum they juggle and

NEWS HERE AND THERE

FAIRVIEW-70 school teachers here were notified by the Board of Education that there was no physical way of paying their salaries over-due since December 31st. The borough is without funds. Until the borough was able to pay its county taxes, it could not get advances from either the county or the State for the last half of 1931.

NEWARK-Money owed the county and state for back taxes due in 1931 was paid on Wednesday. Payment was only made possible through the private sale of tax revenue bonds to a group of banks and insurance companies. Public sale was apparently impossible. John Howe, City Director of Revenue and Finance, said that some of the local programs will absolutely have to be abandoned because of inadequate funds or the likelihood of the same.

Hillside-Fear of paying employees in scrip, promises, like in Philadelphia, was avoided for the time being at the last minute through some last minute acquirement of tax funds.

OTHER CITIES-Union City, Kearny and Bayonne, in Hudson County, were all threatened with mandamus proceedings recently by the County Treasurer unless their taxes, due from December 1st, are paid within the next few days.

CARTERET-Spending as usual by the Board of Education without consideration for the people or appreciation of the times.

Weather Lore

People began "speaking of the weather" a long time ago. The first scientific treatise on the weather, says the United States weather bureau, was written by Aristotle more than 300 years before the Christian era. The weather bureau library, which is the largest meteorological collection in the world, has a big book on the weather by Albertus Magnus, printed in 1494. and a facsimile of a weather journal kept by Rev. William Merle of England, who recorded the weather day by day from 1337 to 1344. The first weather records in America, so far as known, were kept by Rev. Johann Campanius, who recorded the weather each day in the colony of New Sweden near the present site of Wilmington, Del., for the years 1644 and 1645.

Old California City

The site of Oakland, Calif., was part of the holdings of Don Luis Maria Peralta, who received vast grants from the Spanish crown. In 1842 he divided his lands among his four sons and the two to whom this region fell established themselves on their estates. From one of them in 1850 Moses Chase leased a tract, and he became the founder of the future city. In 1852 the settlement was incorporated as a town and in 1854 it was chartered as a city. The name was suggested by the grove of oaks in which the first houses were bullt.

Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy, who gives his name as Shad (Sheridan) is sent on his way to Canton, with a letter to colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner.

Her hair was like spun gold, her eyes were as blue as violets, her voice was as musical and care free as the song sparrows. They were in that wistful stage of joyous, mutual discovery. The boy had found in her eyes a something which he could not

She was wiser than he, for he knew nothing of that mysterious power in the eyes and, form and graceful movements of a maiden which had produced the singular emotion now in his breast. Yet he had the soul of a poet, its love of beauty and its quick per-

She told him of her school and her studies.

"Oh-h!" he said wistfully. "I'd like to go to school like that an' learn to talk good like you an' wear shiny shoes an' nice clothes. I want to be a gentleman like yer father and Mr. Converse." She looked into his eyes, saying:

"You are an interesting boy. I never saw anyone like you. "I'd just like to stay here," he said.

"If I had a thousand dollars I'd give It to you." "What for?"

"I dunno. I'd just like to. That's the way I feel. I'm not exactly sure how it feels to be happy. I wouldn't wonder if I had got it."

This curious variety of love-making filled the most delightful day that Shad had known. That evening Colouel Blake returned. After supper the colonel told of his adventures in the wild West hunting Apaches and grizzly

In the morning when the boy stood with Colonel Blake by the buggy which was to take them to town, Ruth scalled to him from the door. He went

"Will you write me a letter?" she

He promised to do so. She shook his hand and ran away into the house, She did not even say good-by.

Shad returned to the buggy blushing and smiling; his blood was flowing The colonel laughed. Mrs. Blake kissed her husband and the lad.

"They'll watch you in that store," she said. "Of course you'll work hard and be strictly honest. We love you and we want you to succeed."

Those were the best words that Shad Morryson had ever heard. He did not forget them. The first timber in the real structure of his life had found its place. Now for the first time happiness had come to him. He was no longer a lonely, discouraged, life-sick lad. He was at last fully alive, In town the colonel bought for Shad a supply of shirts, socks and underclothing and neckwear.

The Blakes had much to say of a singular charm in the personality of the lad who had thus come to them. The colonel's inquiries soon led to the discovery of an interesting fact, The boy's mother was said to be a great, great-granddaughter of that brother of Napoleon Bonaparte who, late in the Eighteenth century, had had a hunting lodge in northern New York and who for a time had occupied the throne of Spain. It helped to explain the mental keenness of the boy and the noble shape of his head and the beauty of his countenance,

In his office Colonel Blake was not at all like the man Shad had met at the farmhouse. He was dignified. The rude Yankee dialect which he had used on the farm was dropped when he entered the office. Business was mostly a serious matter with him. In his view the farm was a joke, and there he played. A part of his play was the rude dialect of the country-

He took Shad to the inner office, and, calling a stenographer to his desk, dictated a letter of introduction for the boy to Mr. Ephraim Smithers of Amity Dam. When the letter was typed and signed he put it in Shad's hands, saying:

"Take a train to Ashfield at eleven. When you get there inquire your way to Amity Dam. It will be a five-mile walk for you. Have you money?"

"I've got twenty-one dollars in my pocket," was the proud answer of the boy. "Mr. Converse give it to me."

"Keep it a secret and hang on to it. Good-by."

The boy had almost two hours to spend before train time. He walked around the village, to him a wonderful place, with its town hall and houses and stores that looked large and important. He had never written m letter. He had seen only three or four letters in all his life.

"I don't know how I'd go to work to write a letter," he said to himself, "I'm too ignorant. I've got to learn something. I've got to."

It is significant that he should have stopped longest in front of a book store gazing wistfully at a lot of books. The merchant observed him and came out with the familiar query: "Is there anything we can do for

"I want to learn a lot o' words I don't know."

Soon he had bought a pocket dictionary, a small diary, a lead pencil and a cheap watch. With these treasures he went to the station and began at once, while he was waiting, to study the dictionary. He arrived at Ashfield and learned his way to Amity Dam. The day was far spent. Mr. Smithers read the colonel's letter. He was a bearded solemn-looking man of middle age with a gentle voice that softened the price of dry goods and won the confidence of women, "I'll give you a trial," he said. "Ten dollars a month and board is all I can pay you." Shad agreed to these terms, "Sit down here and rest yourself," said the merchant prince of Amity Dam, "We'll go home about nine After Shad rested a while, Mr.

"If You Go a Step Further, I'll Turn You Into Hay.'

Smithers showed the boy his establishment from cellar to garret. It was the usual country store of that time. Mr. Smithers wrote out for the boy a list of his many duties. Before they went home the merchant gave Shad a lesson in wrapping packages. Mr. Smithers lived in a frame house near the store. His wife was a kindly gray-haired woman. With a candle in her hand, she led the boy to his room above stairs, where she lighted a small lamp and put it on a little table at his bedside. Two books lay on the table. One of them was the story of Toby Tyler. He had learned to read, but he had never read any book save the First and Second Readers., Be- | fore he slept he made this entry in his diary: "I love Kurnel Blake an' all his folks. Walked from Ashfield to the store in an hour and 20 minits." It was an entry of greater importance than he knew. The days were filled with joy for the homeless lad. He was quick to learn. He enjoyed his work. One day a tall brown-bearded man entered the store. Shad was alone talking with a boy known in the neighborhood as Bony. The man had a serious face and a brisk manner. "Hurry up, boy, and give me a pound of the best tea," he commanded.

He paid for his purchase and hurried out of the store. This stranger was not like any other person Shad had seen in Amity Dam,

"Who is that?" he inquired of Bony. "That, sir? It's Cyrus Doolittle. We call him 'Cyrus the Great.' He hurries more an' does less than any man I know of. He's a politician. He's the great man of the town,"

Bony was a born satirist. A slim hatchet-faced lad with a sense of humor, he worked at odd jobs here and

"If you want to know more about Cy Doolittle, you ask ol' Bumpy Brown bout him."

"Who is Bumpy Brown?" Shad

asked. "He's the best dammer in Amity Dam. Now an' then he takes a holiday an' sets down comf'table an' spends it cussin' Cy Doolittle."

This somewhat fanciful introduction being ended, the hoy endeavored to restrain his imagination with no great success, while he presented the outstanding facts in Mr. Brown's biog-

"Bumpy is an old feller with a wooden leg who lives 'bout three miles away in the cur'usest shack you ever see. It's on the shore of the river. As a liar he'd take the first premium at the county fair. Nobody believes him."

"Don't he like Mr. Doolittle?" "Hates the ground he walks on. He'll start from Piermont sober and, with no help that anyone knows of but the scenery, he'll be drunk when he gits here. He never carries a bottle. It's a mystery. He'il set an' lean

The store windows interested him. | ag'in' the telephone pole opposite this store an' laugh an' cuss Cy till the cows come home. When he thinks he's ruined Cy enough he'll limp off down the road. He can walk as fast as anybody."

The boys laughed. That day Shad received a package of books from Colonel Blake; school books and some tales by Oliver Optic. The kindly Mrs. Smithers began to help him evenings with his grammar and arithmetic. He wrote many letters to Ruth Blake. They did not satisfy him. They violated a hidden growing sense of artistic propriety. He studied and burned them

On a September afternoon Shad got leave to go with Bony to the fair in Ashfield. There Shad came face to face with the sister of his stepmother -a young French woman of the name of Ba'tiste. Shad treated her to lemonade and she promised not to tell anyone that she had seen him.

One day Bumpy Brown came out and sat in his accustomed place on the corner at Amity Dam. Shad west out of the store for a look at him Old Bumpy was in an advanced stage of inebriation. He was muttering, "Rascal!" "Dirty sneak!" and like words of bitter scorn. As Shad approached the old man looked at him and nodded with a smile. He was about sixty years of age. "Hello, boy!" he said.

Bumpy Brown was not often drunk. Three or four times in a summer he went on a spree and when that happened he came always to Amity Dam, He was then so harmless and quiet that no one interfered with his pleas-

Shad was deeply interested in the curious man. He had to hurry back to the store. As he left, the drunkard called out laughingly: "And there lay round upon the ground great heaps of so'gers.'

Bumpy's assessment of Doolittle did not agree with the sentiment of the countryside. While people thought Doolittle a showy man, not overfond of work, who was deeply indebted to the bounty of his father-in-law, with whom he lived, everybody respected him or seemed to, everybody but Bumpy Brown and the boy Bony Squares. However, Bony was nobody. He came from nowhere. Moreover, he was down on the whole village. Mr. Doolittle was the friend of every great man in the county. He was a supporter of the church. He spoke at political meetings. That evening Shad was probably the happiest boy in the county. The mail had brought him a letter from Ruth Blake. Three times he had read it and then had put the treasure very carefully in his pocket. Often he touched it with his fingers. Ruth and her If the governor becomes President, mother and father had invited him to their home. He felt like a person of portance. Looking at the letter had brought back to him the singular elation which had come from looking into her eyes, from the feel of her hand. Shad was getting along. He and the Woosung had better manners. He had studied forts and village. But the grammar and dictionary. He had the Chinese defendshaken off his rude dialect. He had ing forces also were not yet learned how difficult it is to strengthened and their shake off the thing called background. History is often like a wolf on the prising to neutral ob-trail of a stag. Shad and Bony were alone in the store that evening. Suddenly the door opened. Shad's heart sank within him when he saw his father, Bat Morryson, and the village constable approaching him,

"You d-d runaway! At last I've found you!" said Bat. "What are you doing here?"

"Working," Shad answered. "You're going to come with me, I've got work enough for you at home."

"Is he your father?" the constable asked. "Yes, sir,"

"Then I expect you'll have to go with him.'

Bony picked up a pitchfork from a stack of tools. "I'll get my coat and hat," said Shad as he hurried into the rear room. Bat started after his son. Bony into hay.'

the support of delegates. "By action of the Democratic national convention of 1928 I am the leader of my party in the nation. With a full sense of the responsibility thereby imposed I shall not in advance of the convention either support or oppose the candidacy of any aspirant for the nomination." To the reporters the ex-governor said: "I don't know how I can stop anybody who wants to do anything for me. No, I won't stop them. That would be biting off more than I could

Political wiseacres immediately assume that Mr. Smith's statement meant he had joined the "stop Rooseelt" movement; that the New York delegation would be split up; that the nomination of the present governor of the Empire state would be difficult to bring about, if not impossible, and that there would be a deadlock in the convention comparable to that in the Democratic national gathering in New York city nearly eight years ago. Supporters of Mr. Roosevelt refused to be discouraged and began to redouble their efforts. Republican leaders expressed their quiet delight in the situation, believing it enhanced the chances of success for their party in

Then came a new development that left the prophets all up in the nir. Mr. Smith made an unannounced friendly call on Governor Roosevelt in Albany-the first in a long time-and after he left the governor emerged all smiles, declining to say anything about the conversation that had been held. The guessers then guessed that Mr. Smith had agreed to throw his support to Mr. Roosevelt at the earli-'est opportunity and had been promised therefor a position in the cabinet resistance was surservars. They refused to be driven from Chapel, though it was a region of battered ruins: and the garrison of the Woosung forts held out under rain of shells that smashed against their mud walls and blew up their ammunition stores. The apparent object of the Japanese was to silence the forts and land troops there for an advance on Shanghai from the north. But for the time this was prevented by Chinese artillery and machine gun nests and barbed wire entanglements.

Vice Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, the new commandant of the Japanese naval forces in the Shanghai area, arrived at the scene of conflict and talked diplomatically of his intention halted him with the pitchfork saying, to "prevent further trouble and settle "If you go a step further, I'll turn you the matters as quickly as possible in co-operation with the representatives of other countries."

Another Japanese admiral, Shimada, explained that the failure of the Japanese forces to occupy Chapei and Woosung was due to a desire to keep the Japanese casualties down to a minimum.

Shells from the Chapei battle area frequently fell in the international settlement, and protests of the powers were unavailing, as usual. The American Thirty-first regiment went on duty patroling a part of Shanghai.

EVENTS in Japan showed there was not complete unanimity concerning the government's policy. Twentyfive students at the Imperial university in Tokyo were arrested for participating in a demonstration in which handbills were distributed arging the people to "stop this imperialistic war!" The demonstration was believed to be the first protest against the military operations in China since the Manchurian campaign began. Junnosuke Inouye, financier, liberal statesman and leader of the Minseito (opposition) party's campaign for the general election, February 20, was assassinated by a youth indirectly connected with the reactionary "patriotic" elements responsible for most of the recent political mur-

Sald the Frenchman: "I would like to remind

Yen submitted quietly to the rebuke, but Doctor Llu, Chinese minister to Berlin, jumped up angrily. "You other powers are siding with Japan," he cried, "because you are afraid of being kicked out yourself. You want your share of the trade. If you don't be careful, you'll be kicked out, all of you, into the sea."

GETTING down to business, the disarmament conference in Geneva heard set forth the views of all the great powers. Andre Tardieu on behalf of France proposed that the League of Nations be provided with an armed force to enforce peace on the world, and emphasized the French refusal to disarm without security assurances. For Great Britain Sir John Simon offered a disarmament plan including abolition of subma-

Hugh Gibson rines and gas and chemical warfare, and he criticized the French proposals. The United States came next, and

Ambassador Gibson made a fine speech, submitting a program summarized thus by the State department: The American government advocates consideration of the draft convention as c a convenient basis for discussion, while expressing its entire willingness to give full consideration to any supplementary proposals calculated to invoke the end we all seek. We suggest the possibility of prolonging the existing naval agreements concluded at Washington and London, and we advocate completing the latter as soon as possible by the adherence of France and Italy. We advocate proportional reduction from the figures laid down in the Washington and London agrements on naval tonnage as soon as all parties to the Washington agreement have entered this framework.

We advocate, as we long have done, the total abolition of submarines.

We will join in formulating the most effective measures to protect civilian population against aerial bombing. We advocate the total abolition of lethal gases and bacteriological warfare.

We advocate, as I have already stated, the computation of the number of armed forces on the basis of the effectives necessary for the maintenance of Internal order plus some suitable contingent for defense. The former are obviously impossible of reduction; the latter is a question of relativity.

We agree in advocating special restrictions for tanks and heavy mobile guns; in other words, for those arms of a peculiarly offensive character.

We are prepared to consider a limitation of expenditure on material as a complementary method to direct limitation, feeling that it may prove useful to prevent a qualitative race, if and when quantitative limitation has Chancellor Bruening for Germany made a demand for "equality" in fighting forces. Dino Grandi told of all the war tools that Italy was prepared to scrap, and was loudly applauded. And Ambassador Matsudaira assured the conference than Japan is as eager as ever in the cause of disarmament.

Leaders of both parties had given the measure their approval and it was introduced by Senator Glass and Representative Steagall, both Democrats. The bill, it was explained, may be expected to accomplish the following esults:

It makes a $2,500,000,000 increase in currency theoretically possible; it may release close to a billion dollars of the federal reserve system's "free gold" for use as the basis of new credit; it will make eligible for rediscount billions of dollars in paper not eligible under present regulations.

PIUS XI, who had just celebrated the tenth anniversary of his elevation to the papal throne, received on Thursday his first visit from Premier Mussolini. The day was chosen because it was the third anniversary of the signing of the Lateran treaty and concordat, and nominally the Duce called to thank the pope for the award of knighthood of the Golden Spur which made Mussolini a defender of the Catholic faith. The interview between these two strong men, who really admire each other, took place 'n the pope's private library and was behind closed doors. But the premier, in full uniform, was received at the Vatican with all the pomp usually accorded to visiting royalty. Accompanied by his chief ministers, he was greeted by the governor of Vatican City and the councillor general after passing through the streets of the papal city which were cleared of all but the Swiss guards.

R EPRESENTATIVE CRISP of Georgia, acting chairman of the house ways and means committee, says revised estimates by the Treasury department show the new tax bill now under consideration must raise a total of $1,241,000,000 in additional revenue if the budget is to be balanced by the end of the fiscal year

As a result the committee expects to find it necessary to broaden the tax base to a far greater degree than had heretofore been contemplated. The imposition of a general sales tax of some sort is considered well within the realm of possibilities.

SHOW PROGRESS IN RARITAN COUNCIL

Another year of steady progress has recently been experienced by the Raritan Council Boy Scouts of America, in accordance with its annual report published recently.

Under the leadership of President Howard W. Thorn, of Carteret, the Executive Board of the Council which is made up of representatives of the various districts over which the Council has jurisdiction, held twelve meetings during 1931 with an average attendance of 66 per cent.

As of December 31st the Council had a total of 886 boys registered including 81 Cubs (boys of 9, 10, and 11 years of age) and 31 Sea Scouts (for boys over 15 years of age), there were also a total of 360 Scouters including 94 Scoutmasters and Assistants. The boy membership of the Raritan Council increased 15 per cent in 1931 which is the largest enrollment of boys in the history of the

Under the direction of Morris Margaretten, Chairman of the Leadership Training Committee, three Troop Leaders' Round Table Conferences were held in 1931. These conferences included the Scoutmasters and Assistants of the various Troops of the Council. In addition to these conferences, Scoutmasters' Training Courses were conducted at Camp Burton and Perth Amboy and a District Leaders' Conference was conducted in Woodbridge.

Harold P. Hayden of Sewaren, the chairman of the Camp Committee, reports that 192 Scouts of the Raritan Council attended Camp Burtonat-Allaire during July and August. These Scouts represented 81 per cent. of the various Troops of the Council. The Scouts paid $7.00 for one week and $9.00 for every additional week, the difference for the first week being made up from the Raritan Council appropriation for Camping. In addition to the attendance at Camp Burton, camps were operated by two troops and resulted in a total of 32 per cent. of Raritan Council Scouts in attendance at Camp for at least one week during the summer, while the National Council average is only 15 per cent.

Definite progress in Sea Scouting was reported by Dr. Charles W. Naulty which included the organization of a new Sea Scout Ship at Sewaren sponsored by the Sewaren Motor Boat Club. The Perth Amboy Division of Sea Scouting built six fifteen foot sloops from a special fund contributed for that purpose. Nine Sea Scouts spent one week on a sea Scout Training ship during the sum-

NO COMPROMISE ON 'WET' PLANK

Senator Barbour Feels That Prohibition Question Must Be Met by Facing the Facts.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 25-The following statement was issued by Senator W. Warren Barbour of New Jersey today in the matter of the proposed anti-prohibition plank in the Republican National platform.

"Suggeststions have appeared in the press that an effort will be made to bring about a compromise on the prohibition question among New Jersey delegates to the Republican national convention.

"So far as I am concerned, a compromise in this matter is out of the question. As I have repeatedly pointed out in public speeches and in the public press, I believe there is a majority sentiment against the prohibition law as it now exists and that the Republican party should not and cannot afford to longer ignore the issue or to take any half-hearted stand upon it.

"The prohibition questtion is one that can be solved only by facing the problem squarely and courage-

"I intend to urge strongly upon the delegates from my state to the national convention that a plank be incorporated in the party's national platform calling for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, and I am emphatically opposed to equivocation or compromise in the mat-

WHAT ABOUT IT?

Silence and secrecy has prevailed in handling of expenditures of the Board of Education for almost ever since its inception. The people in most enlightened towns in America naturally are told what is done with their money. This is as it should be. It is their money It does not belong to any member of the Board of Education or any

At a heavy cost, spending more than was originally voted by the people, an elaborate Borough Hall with all kinds of space, beautiful desks, etc., was built at heavy public expense. God knows when the debt will be paid off. One of the excuses for rushing into the building of the Borough Hall, which cost more than the sum voted by the people, was to get all the public records in one place, a fire-proof building. It was further urged that the people could go to a central place and get all the information about public records. We have had the building for some time now but the Board of Education records have not been put in that building or any public building. They are kept in a private house, apparently not accessible at times even to members of the Board of Education.

Despite the smoke-screens set up by those who want to further their own ends, the general economic situation is not over-promising. Individuals who have any income and are not on the public payroll, with their hands in other people's pockets, necessarily have to keep their eyes on expenditures.

They ought to be able to keep their eyes on the expenditures being made in their name by public officials.

Governor Roosevelt in removing Sheriff Farley said: Public Office Means Serving the Public and Nobody Else

If the members of the Board of Education believe this, that the public business is the public's business and they should serve the public and nobody else, let us have the school board records put in a public building accessible to the public all the time. Let us have a continuous statement to the people of how their money is being spent

It is up to the following members of the Board of Education as to whether or not the public's business is to be public business in regard to expenditures or the same silence and secrecy is to continue. The members of the Board of Education with this responsibility are given below:

Charles A. Conrad, William V. Coughlin, Robert Jeffreys, Matthew Beigert, Isadore Schwartz, Frank Haury, Lewis N. Bradford, J. W. Mittuch, Thomas Jakeway.

The president of the Board of Education is Charles A. Conrad. The Chairman of the Finance Committee is Joseph Mittuch. The Clerk of the Board of Education, in charge of the records, is William V. Coughlin, which records, it is understood, are in his apartment in a wooden structure. A fire would wipe out the records, while the costly fire-proof building in the Borough remains empty.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

OW that the Presidential campaign is beginning to warm up, the sloganeers will soon be busy inventing apt and easily-remembered catchwords with which to charm the ear of the voter. Already senatorial groups in both parties have chosen from those submitted in a recent contest mottoes which they hope will advance the cause of their standard-bearers-the Democrats with their 'Hee-haw! We're coming back!" and the Republicans with their "Prosperity Is Returning-Don't Throw It in Reverse!" And already there are dissenting opinions to the value of both slogans, both of which have been characterized as "un impassioned, uninspired and uninspiring." So it would seem that there's still a chance to coin a phrase which will play its part in electing our next President and, if we may judge by past history, that slogan may be brought into being at the most unexpected time and under the most unexpected circumstances any time between now and November 8.

How potent a slogan may be in winning for a Presidential candidate (and also for losing one!) is easily seen by an examination of American political history. The first effective use of the campaign slogan was away back in 1800 when the Republican party (which later became the Democratic) raised the cry of "Equal rights for all; special privileges for none!" in protest against the aristocratic tendencies of the Federalist party and swept Thomas Jefferson into office over John Adams, who was a candidate for re-election.

Then followed 24 years of rule by the "Virginia dynasty"-Jefferson, Madison and Monroe and the Federalist party disappeared from the scene, leaving only the Republicans, who now called themselves Democrats, with various factions within the party. In 1824 there were four outstanding candidates-John Quincy Adams, Monroe's secretary of state; William Crawford, his secretary of the treasury; Henry Clay, a member of the house of representatives, and Andrew Jackson, a member of the senate.

In the election Jackson led in both the popular and the electoral vote but did not have a majority. So the election was thrown into the house of representatives and there Clay threw his support to Adams, resulting in his election. When the new President Adams offered Clay the post of secretary of state, Jackson adherents raised the cry of "Bargain and Corruption!" They kept that slogan warm for four years and in the election of 1828 it helped Jackson defeat Adams and sent him to the White House, there to stay for eight years. In the meantime the Whig party had been formed but its strength in the 1832 campaign was divided and Jackson again was an easy winner.

When "Old Hickory" was through with being President he passed his mantle along to his secretary of state, Martin Van Buren, who was elected in 1836 over four Whig candidates, one of them, William Henry Harrison. Then came the famous campaign of 1840 when a slogan very definitely won an election. This time one of the defeated Whig candidates of the previous election was swept into office on a platform of slogans and songs. Affairs had gone badly for Van Buren during his four years. They had been four years of "continued executive autocracy, of undiminished official partisanship, of Increasingly violent interference with the fiscal system of the nation, of unrelenting administrative abuse of power." There had been a panic and Van Buren was proposing measures which might upset the financial stability of the nation. Then, too, this President who was supposed to be an upholder of democratic ideals had become considerable of an

"He Kept Us Out of War!"

So when the Whigs nominated the type of man that Andrew Jackson had once been-a frontiersman, an Indian fighter and a military hero, the nation was ready to turn (to state it paradox-Ically) from a Democrat who was an aristocrat to a Whig who was a democrat. Unwittingly a Democratic newspaper gave the Whig candidate the greatest boost it could possibly have given him. Sneering at his intellectual caliber (which admittedly was small) it said, "Give him a barrel of cider in a log cabin the remainder of his

And what a godsend that was to the Whigs! Immediately the log cabin and the hard cider purrel became their symbols and Harrison's Indian-fighting record furnished them the ringing war cry of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too!" Just for good measure they threw in a few pointed remarks at Van Buren, such as "Van, Van Is a Used-Up Man" and "With Tip and Tyler We'll Bust Van's Biler." They also anticipated the "full dinner pail" appeal to the voter with "Van's Policy: Fifty Cents a Day and French Soup; Our Policy: Two Dollars a Day and Roast Beet"

Four years later the campaign witnessed not only the appearance of the first "dark horse" in a Presidential campaign but also another telling slogan. The "dark horse" was James K. Polk of Tennessee and the slogan was "Fifty-Four Forty or Fight!" At that time the United States was involved in two disputes, one with Mexico over Texas and the other with Great Britain over the Oregon country. The Democrats stood for "reoccupation of the Oregon country and re-annexation of Texas." The Fifty-Four Forty or Fight represented the northern boundary line which the United States demanded-54 degrees, 40 minutes, north, latitude. What we actually got (and not by fighting either, but by arbitration) was 49 degrees. So the slogan didn't mean so much after the election, but it did play a vital part in deciding the election in Polk's favor, as did the slogan "Polk and Texas; Clay and No Texas" in regard to the Texas question.

In the war with Mexico which followed so soon after Polk's election one of our victorious generals was Zachary Taylor and from an incident in the battle of Buena Vista came a slogan which kelped elect Taylor President in 1848. It was the famous "A little more grape, Captain Bragg" which struck the popular fancy as being just what a great military commander would, say under the circumstances. What he actually did say on that occasion was the laconic "Give 'em hell!" But that didn't matter so much as the fact that the combination of the "grape" slogan and his popular nickname of "Old Rough and Ready" (so reminiscent of "Old Hickory" and "Old Tippecanoe") had much the same appeal as the Jackson combination and the Harrison combination of slogan and nickname,

In the same year was born a slogan that crystallized in popular phraseology the most fateful movement in American history. It was "Free Soil, Free Speech, Free Labor and Free Men," taken from a plank in the platform of the Free Soil party of 1848, the forerunner of the Republican party that nominated and elected Abraham Lincoln in 1860. The stirring campaign of 1860 was fruitful in slogans, as it was one of the hitterest in our history. Among them were, "Millions for Freedom, Not One Cent for Slavery," "Intervention Is Disunion," "Popular Sovereignty and National Union," "Free Homes for Free Men," "The Constitution and the Union, Now and Forever," "Let Liberty Be National and Slavery Sectional," and scores of others, on both sides of the slavery controversy, in similar appealing strains. Numerous catch purases were woven about the title "Old Abe" and "The Rail-adopted as slogans by the orators, such as "A House Divided Against Itself Cannot Stand" and "Slavery Is a Moral, Social and Political Wrong." Grant's famous "Let Us Have Peace" was used to good advantage as a slogan in electing the "Man from Appomattox" but the corruption which marked his two administrations provided the Democratic opponents of his successor, Hayes, with the best possible type of slogan. So "Tilden and Reform" echoed throughout the campaign in 1876 as a powerful rallying cry for the Democrats. By all the rules of slogan logic, the brevity and the force of that slogan should have won for Tilden but election boards and an electoral commission decided otherwise.

In the campaign of 1884 there was a case of history repeating itself in that, just as in the case of Harrison and the Whigs in 1840, Cleveland and the Democrats profited by a blunder made by the opposition. In that year Blaine was the Republican candidate and his Presidential aspirations were favored by his nicknames of the "Plumed Knight" and the "Rupert of Debate" as well as by the tuneful quality of the rallying cry of "Blaine, Blaine, Blaine of Maine," These were offset, however, somewhat by "Nosey Blaine," "The Tattooed Man" and "Jim, the Penman," the latter referring to the famous Mulligan Letters.

But the fatal blow to his chances was struck when an enthusiastic Blaine supporter, Rev. R. partisans and in this match Cody was B. Burchard declared in a speech that all conscientions Americans should vote the Republican ticket because the Democrats stood for specified time. From that time on, "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion." Blaine was present at the time but did not hear him distinctly enough to realize the gross error and to repudiate this slur upon the religious belief of millions of Americans. So the slogan which the Republicans had attempted to tack on the Democrats proved to be a boomerang and aided in defeating their candidate.

Cleveland's first campaign contributed "The Man of Destiny" and "Tell the Truth" to the slogan stock, both of which had a strong appeal to the voters.

The tariff campaigns were prolific with slogans among the most telling ones were "Protection Union flag and shouting down at the and Prosperity," "Free Trade and Pauperized Labor" and "Free Trade and the Destruction of American Industries," which the practical Mark Hanna hoiled down into the vote-getting slogan But spare your country's flagof "The Full Dinner Pail." William Jennings Bryan, who is associated in most Americans' memory with Clay, Tilden and Blaine as men "who just missed the Presidency," "Who touches a hair of you gray head, had a strong slogan—strong in its brevity and Dies like a dog, March on—." Blaine as men "who just missed the Presidency," its capability of being easily remembered-in his Fame has dealt less kindly, how-"Sixteen to One." But it wasn't strong enough ever, with the real Barbara Frietche. to win the election for him the first time he Although Whittier believed and investried and he never was able to get another tigation since has established that a which brought him any nearer to the White House, Sometimes a slogan will have a "kick-back" after it has accomplished its purpose. There is that Dame Barbara was ninety-six no doubt but that "He Kept Us Out of War" helped re-elect Woodrow Wilson in 1916. And house some distance from Jackson's then fate decreed that with six months after line of march. There is even reason his election we should be "in" and not "out" of to suspect that Whittier's Barbara was war. "Too Proud to Fight" was another phrase in reality another woman, May Quanthat haunted him.

As for the slogans of recent years, they are too fumiliar to most of us to need much comment. War-weary America turned "Back to Normalcy" bara Frietche legend lives on, the with Warren G. Harding in 1920. In 1924 when Whittier club only recently dedicated the Democrats hoped that it was restless under Republican misrule and hot for a change, they learned that it had decided to "Keep Cool With Maryland" was proudly waved what Coolidge" instead of vote for "Better Days With Davis," In 1928 the Democrats, wearing a brown derby and singing "The Sidewalks of New York" asked America to remember its "Eight Years of Wall Street" and to "Give Main Street a Chance." But instead of heeding this advice America voted for "Hoover and Prosperity." What slogans America will be repeating this year will depend upon who is nominated at the two conventions in Chicago next June and which will be the better of the two slogans will be decided at the polls in November.

BECKY THATCHER

WHEN that "red-handed chief of the Black Avengers of the Spanish Main," more commonly known to readers of Mark Twain as Tom Sawyer, indulged in moments of un-piratelike tenderness, little Becky Thatcher, Tom's schoolmate and sworn sweetheart, was the cause. Thus the great American humorist immortalized a love of his own youth when little Sam Clemens courted Laura Hawkins, who lived just down the street from him in Hannibal, Mo.

Out of their own school days came much of the similar material in "Tom Sawyer." The schoolmaster was a Mr. Cross, for whom Sam composed an elegant couplet:

"Cross by name, and cross by nature, Cross jumped over an Irish potater." From him Sam once actually did accept punishment for something Laura

Sam Clemens left Hannibal at the age of eighteen, and Laura married and became Mrs. Frazier, went to live at Palmyra, Mo., and enjoyed at least one adventure that never got into a book. During the Civil war her busband, an outspoken Secessionist, was forced into hiding from Union troops commissioned to capture and silence him. With a woman's instinct for the right things to do, Laura during her husband's absence invited the Union commander, Gen. John McNeil, to dinner and filled him full of southern cooking and flattery. Some time later, when her bushand had been captured and condemned to death, she made a personal plea for his life, which was granted by her former guest!

BUFFALO BILL

A SK the average American "Who was Buffalo Bill?" and he will answer "Why, Col. William F. Cody, of course!" Therein he will be only partly right for there were two other men who bore that title before Cody did.

In 1860, a year of drought in Kansas when the grasshoppers darkened the skies and ate up what crops were planted, a certain William Matthewson of Wichita, Kans., went out to kill buffalo and sent back several wagontrains of meat to feed the starving set-tlers. They were so grateful for this that they nicknamed him "Buffalo

During the Indian war on the southern plains in 1867-69 William Comstock. a celebrated guide, bunter and one of the favorite scouts of Gen. Phil Sheridan, gained such renown as a buffalo bunter that army officers at Fort Wallace, Kan., dubbed him "Buffalo Bill" Comstock. In the meantime William F. Cody, who had been scouting for the troops at Fort Ellsworth and Fort Fletcher, Kan., had also won a great reputation as a slayer of buffaloes. He increased that reputation when he took the contract to furnish meat for the laborers who were building the Kansas Pacific railroad west.

So a hunting match between Comstock and Cody was arranged by their victorious, killing sixty-nine buffaloes to Comstock's forty-eight within a Cody was the undisputed (even though he had not been the first) Buffalo Bill and his Wild West show later spread his fame throughout the world. . . .

BARBARA FRIETCHE

H EROISM met its just reward for the Barbara Frietche of Whittier's famed poem of that name. Forth from her attic window in Frederick, Maryland, leaned the courageous old woman, waving her bullet-torn Confederate soldiers who had fired at it the famous lines;

Girl at the Top in Health Tests

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West, are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion.

A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Allgire, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test.

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig 'Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's allments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal,"

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

Japan Rebuked by League Council, but Still Persistent -President Hoover Asks Congress for Reorganization of Government.

her determination to subdue the Chinese. Having received a report from its investigators at Shanghai, plac ing the onus of the hostilities on Japan the council of the League of Nations got its dander up and sent to Tokyo a sharp note calling to Japan's attention again her obligations under various treaties and the league coveant, re-mlading her of her high position among the powers and appealing to her to cease the warfare against China. The decision to send this rebuke was reached in the absence of the Japanese and Chinese representatives and over the protest of Germany and Jugo-Slavia. It was signed by the "committee of twelve" and thus a loophole was provided in case it is not backed up by the league assembly later. The communication took the same stand taken by Secretary of State Stimson, that the validity of Japanese occupation of Chinese territory could not be recognized.

Mr. Stimson formulated another stern protest against the use of the international settlement in Shanghai by the Japanese as a base for military operations, and declined to be impressed by Japan's argument that the other powers also had landed troops there. He told Ambassador Debuchi that if the Chinese should enter or fire on the settlement on any pretext while Japanese forces were utilizing it as a military base, the United States would hold Japan responsible.

In preparation for a grand offensive the Japanese heavily shelled the Chinese lines, and many shells fell in the international settlement. Two English sailors were killed. This caused great excitement in London. A special meeting of the cabinet was called at once and Prime Minister MacDonald left a nursing home to preside over it. American marines also were endangered by the rain of shells but there were no casualties among them.

A UTHORIZED by his government, the Japanese minister to China served an ultimatum on Gen. Tsl Tingkal, commander of the Nineteenth Chinese route army, demanding that the Chinese retire twenty kilometers from Shanghal and threatening to drive them away by force should they' not comply. There were evidences that the Japanese were growing anxious about the great concentration of Chinese troops and feared that Gen. Chiang Kai-Chiang Kai-shek would bring his national guard divisions to the aid of Shanghai's defenders and take command of the entire army. Minister of War Araki asked Emperor Hirohito to approve the cabinet's plan to send 30,000 to 45,000 fresh troops to Shanghai If the Chinese continued their resistance.

For the third time American Consul General Cunningham had to protest against a raid by Japanese plain clothes men on the middle school of the American Methodist Church, South. The furniture was smashed, books and papers scattered about, and an American flag nailed on the outer wall was torn down. Other Japanese civilians assaulted American Vice Consul Arthur Ringwalt and an American woman he was helping out of the bombarded district. For this outrage Tokyo apologized.

PRESIDENT HOOVER on Wednesday sent to congress a special message asking support for a reorganization of the government and recommending the creation of four new federal offices. He requested, simultaneously, the major alteration and changing in title of four other federal departments. Under the eight new and altered divisions he would consolidate present overlapping activities in an effort to subtract "millions of dollars annually" from the tax burden.

Authority also was asked for the Chief Executive to transfer and consolidate executive and administrative groups merely through the issuance of executive orders, each to lie before congress for 60 days before becoming effective.

Specifically, the President suggested:

1. Consolidation of the millions of dollars' worth of construction work undertaken annually by the various federal departments into a new office to be known as public works admin-

2. Incorporation of the vast amount of personnel administration into one office headed by a "personnel admin-

3. Transfer of the administrative functions of running the American merchant marine to the Department of Commerce under direction of a new assistant secretary.

4. Creation of a new assistant secretaryship of interior in charge of 'conservation," under whom would come reclamation work and the broad supervision of water power develop-

Promotion of the commissioner of education to an assistant secretary of interior, with transfer of all educational undertakings to his care. 7. Promotion of the director of agricultural economics to an assistant secretary, and the designation of an existing aid to the secretary of agriculture as assistant secretary for agricultural research.' The immediate changes, Mr. Hoover asserted, would cost about $40,000 per annum in additional salaries, but "the saving in cost of administration would be many times this sum."

DEMOCRATIC leaders of the house prepared to place their own taxation and economy proposals before the nation as a means of balancing the national hudget.

Following the declaration of Speaker Garner that President Hoover had failed to promote real economy, Representative Rainey of Illinois, Democratic leader, characterized the treasury tax proposals as "woefully insufficient." The first step in the economy program was the creation of a special committee to study means of abolishing and restricting government bureaus to cut expenses.

The house ways and means committee met to consider the treasury's additional tax program, which included a 1-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax and a 7 per cent tax on domestic electric light and gas bills. Rainey said:

"The treasury originally recommended taxes totaling $920,000,000 and then admitted a mistake of over $400,000,-000, and came back with a request to raise the total. "The treasury, even in to new esti-mates, does not take into consideration expenses incident to the $500,-000,000 reconstruction corporation, $125,000,000 land bank bill, possible direct relief funds of veterans' bills, and will not even estimate the increased interest on the national debt."

BY A vote of 35 to 48 the senate defeated the La Follette-Costigan bill to provide $750,000,000 from the federal treasury to the states for the relief of the jobless and needy, of which sum $375,000,000 was to be handed the states for highway building. Party lines were broken, and the "progressive" bloc was the only group that voted solidly for the measure. Sixteen regular Democrats and six regular Republicans joined with them in

This being out of the way, the senate took up the Glass-Steagall bill to liberalize the federal reserve structure and release a fresh flood of credit throughout the national banking system. This measure had passed through the house with little trouble and it was expected the senate would soon give its approval.

IN SELECTING a successor to Oliver Wendell Holmes on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States, President Hoover set aside geographical considerations and chose Renjamin Nathan Cardozo, chief justice of the New York state court of appeals. The nomination was sent to the senate and early confirmation was expected, though several protests were re-diciary committee. This appointment gives the Supreme court five Republicans and four Democrats, and nine of the justices are from the eastern states. It had been expected that a westerner would be named. Judge Cardozo was recommended by various groups describing themselves as liberals, and his choice for the high honor was praised by senators of such diverse affiliations as Norris of Nebraska Reed of

Prints Which Carry a New Message Young GIVEN NEW IDEA OF IDLENESS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A CCORDING to that which is to be seen in midseason and early spring fabric showings, the world of fashion is as print-conscious as ever and even more so, if that be possible. Which does not mean that "it's the same thing | which distinguishes the gown on the over again." On the contrary only those prints which carry an entirely new message qualify as chic. You can sense a this-senson's print at a glance, in that its unusualness, both as to col or and design, differentiates it from a print of yesteryear.

There's the new stunning striped prints, per example, which designers are making up so intriguingly. They have that out-of-the-ordinary look about them which at once classes them as being of year 1932 vintage. Most women yield to the lure of these handsome designful stripes at first sight The print stripe silk which fashions the dress shown to the right in the plc ture is typical of the new trend. Rather a happy combination, you will agree, this of allying stripes with colorful Pulsley patternings.

These Paisley striped silks are being put to more uses than one. Many an afternoon black frock (black with a touch of color is so very smart this season) is topped with sleeves and deep yoke of striped Paisley print. Silk of this type also is made up into many a smart blouse, which worn with a black or navy eton jacket suit is rated 100 per cent modish among the new costume collections,

Then, too, a strikingly new depar-O VER in Germany they are getting ture in the way of printed silk is the ready for an election, and Paul get-together gesture which plaids and von Hindenburg, their grand old man, dots are making this season. The freek of plaid silk which is collared, cuffed and girdled with plaid which carries the same colors and design but has a dark background is one of the highlights of the new mode.

Speaking of prints in general, for daytime frocks which can be worn on the street, silks, especially crepes, with neat small patterns predominate, navy with white leading in favor. Steelengraved prints are also included in nearly every collection. Dark lines etched on light grounds or the reverse. Among these, white roses and leaves on navy, black or brown backgrounds have a very strong appeal this season.

Large, gorgeously colorful designs, widely spaced, on white or black grounds on georgette or chiffon score for southern evening wear at the moment, their acceptance with resorters foretelling their coming summer vogue.

More than ever emphasis is being placed on print with plain combinations. The patriotic combination of red, white and blue is stressed throughout the season's showings. In most instances a light navy is chosen for the major color of the costume

MUCH ON BOTH SIDES

Ex-Governor Stokes and Assemblyman McCampbell have had an exchange of views on taxation. The ex-Governor points out one fundamental that cannot be denied, namely, that there will be no reduction in taxes, no matter how many forms of taxation there are, unless the actual expenditures are cut down. It This is just common sense. If you spend more you have got to find more money to pay the bills regardless of where you find it. The money just simply has to be raised. Expenditures are what count.

The wise boys who have been running our Boards of Education set up some estimates on probable financial needs. They cut these estimates down a trifle and then tell you they saved something. They do not cut their expenditures down. So, of course, as a matter of fact they have saved nothing. They put enough in their estimates to take care of expenditures as usual. This is so despite the fact expenditures here in many cases are proportionately higher than they are anywhere else.

A very simple case in point. The expenditures for the school clerk in another town whose school attendance is not much less than told if he moved to Carteret he would get jobs galore. Everything half of Carteret's is only $40.00. Our noisy clerk, who seems to apparently moved satisfactorily for him. The prediction was fine. think he is a law unto himself and it does not matter how much is spent, has $1,000.00 in the new budget. This is supposed to be a great, big "reduction." In other words, although our school attendance is a little more than twice that of this other town in Middlesex County, our district clerk plans to spend twenty-five times may not be able to borrow much longer. It would be regrettable as much. Everything else seems to be in proportion.

If your child was away at school and asked you for three times as much as a thing actually cost and then in the following year only asked for twice as much as it actually cost, you would not think much of that. You would probably be outraged to think the truth had been over-stated on both occasions. Just because the child cut down the "estimate" a little in the second case would not make you very happy. You would probably think you were being imposed upon and you would be. It is actually the same way in our school system. The budgets are nothing but over-padded estimates. Some of the Juice goes out of one item into another. Governor Stokes is right. Anyone who has ever had to earn a living knows it is expenditures that count. Every woman who has ever had to run a house knows the same thing. But the boys on the Board of Education are not spending their own money. They are spending your money.

The best thing to ever happen to this community would be to abolish the Board of Education as it is constituted. It is just "You scratch me and I will scratch you." No few members of the Board of Education have had relatives and friends put on the payroll. Some others have been interested in pretty must the same way in other expenditures. It is a game of euchre with the people being euchred all of the time. On the surface the boys appear to be very much opposed to one another. After everything is parceled out, you will notice each side is pretty well taken care of at your expense. The reckless spending of money by Boards of Education and issues of bonds has much to do with the condition this town finds itself

In this connection Assemblyman McCampbell had this to say: Taxation in some form, as well as lack of the proper forms of taxation, brought on our economic depression, and the only thing that will restore prosperity is untaxing

Ex-governor Stokes statement in part was as follows: You will never get lower taxes, no matter how many taxes you add, until you learn one common-sense lesson. You must limit the amount of expenditures. So long as you permit expenditures to run wild and be unlimited by law you will never reduce your taxes. The fundamental remedy in all taxation is the limitation of expenditures.

EXPERTS

Various statistical services, which in good times put out general logical statements as to trends, have in normal times obtained many devoted followers. If these followers have any memories at all, their faiths must have gotten some rude shocks since 1929. Practically all these "services" have predicted an up-turn in a certain

The administration in Washington has as its leading expert one Julius Klein of the Department of Commerce. He not only writes volumes but he speaks constantly over the radio. He has been credited time and time again as speaking for the President. Late in 1929 the President did his own speaking.

We give below the gist of the statements of Mr. Klein of the Department of Commerce, on various dates. It speaks for itself and requires no comment:

November 24, 1929-American business is healthy and vigorous and promises to be more so. The eager and loyal co-operation evidenced so splendidly by American business men in their talks with the President is nothing less than a certificate of prosperity insurance.

January 1, 1930-We are justified in feeling an abiding, if perhaps not an exuberant, optimism.

May 21, 1930-A healthy revival of business by the end of September may be expected.

September 22, 1930-We should be out of the depression by the end of October.

October 4, 1930-The end is appreaching to this process of shrinking values.

December 29, 1930-During the opening months of the new year conditions will steadily improve all along the business front. March 18, 1931-There is pretty good evidence that an appreciable degree of recovery is in sight.

June 9,1931-The bottom of the depression was hit in Janvary. We are now in a valley. The depression has ended. The ley usually runs across six or seven months. If history repeats itself, this means that in July we go up.

Governor Roosevelt removed Sheriff Farley because he was unwilling to give a satisfactory account of where he got "it" on a comparatively small public salary. He was reported to have banked $400,000.00 in one year on a $15,000 salary.

What the Governor of New York said applies here in Carteret. WHERE did some of the boys get it on little or no income? Incidentally (this applies to some "prominents" not now officially

In the Farley case Mr. Roosevelt said:

'As a matter of general sound public policy, I am very certain t'-t there is a requirement that where a public official is under ineviry or investigation, especially an elected official, and it appears t at his scale of living, or the total of his bank deposits far exceeds t' a public salary which he is known to receive, he, the elected public official, owes a positive public duty to the community to give a reasonable or creditable explanation of the sources of the deposits, or the sources which enables him to maintain a scale of living beyond the amount tof his salary.

There is a positive duty on the part of the public official to explain matters which arise on an inquiry which involves the expenditure or the depositing of large sums of money.

Passive acquiescence by unthinking people in the actions of those who shrewdly turn to personal advantage the opportunitites offered by public office is out of step with modern ideals of government and wih political morality. Such personal gain is not to be excused because it is accompanied by the respondent's popularity of person and great public generosity. Public offices should inspire financial integrity.

The Stewardship of public officers is a serious and sacred trust. They are close to the means for private gain that in a sense not at all true of private citizens their personal possesions are invested with a public importance in the event that their stewardship is questioned. One of their deep obligations is to recognize this, not reluctantly or with resistance, but freely. It is in the spirit of a public trust to give, when personally called upon, public prooff of the nature, source and extent of their financial affairs.

Standards of public service must be measured in this way. The stsate must expect compliance with these standards, because if popular government is to continue to exist it must in such matters hold its stewards to a stern and uncompromising rectitude.

"Public office means serving the public and nobody else."

HERE AND THERE

A lawyer from out of town seemingly is reported to have been

The public funds which are part of the savings out of earnings individuals and businesses in normal times seemingly belong to no one. We say normal times because now they do not or could not pay out of saving in many cases but out of borrowings. Some gest, for the community in a way but there are many who would like to see the free and easy spending and the unnecessary jobs done away with here. There has been really no curtailment here in connection with the Board of Education expenditures. There has been the usual smoke-screen and faking.

Although the Clerk of the Board of Education gets the fat salary, for part time work, of $2,200.00 he does not see fit to tell the public what the Board of Education's expenditures are before they are asked to vote on a "budget." How could they intelligently vote unless they knew what things cost? It is reported that even the finance committee in making up the budget had no such actual expenditures before them. How could it be pretended that the finance committee could approve or disapprove of the budget that was handed it unless it knew what the expenditures were. It is ridiculous to pretend that the Board of Education knows anything about what is going on. Apparently the old game is still on tap. 'You tickle me and I will tickle you." Some of the boys do not see anything perhaps because they turn their heads the other way. They are only looking when the things come up that they are interested in. It is sort of a free lunch counter.

The attendance officer in a town in which the school population is just a little less than half of Carteret's gets $300. If the reports submitted here are true, and we suppose they are, we do not have very many absentees. The job cannot be very difficult.

Yet the attendance officer here gets $2520.00, which is over eight times what the other party gets. There is apparently no limit or reason to anything the Board of Education does

In addition to Janitors' Supplies, which seems very liberally provided for here, we also have Janitors' Equipment. We find the other Board of Education does not have such a thing as Janitors' Equipment. Boy, we have everything! We are the world's greatest spenders or rather our Board of Education appears to be for us.

If you run out of money or food, be sure and look up the wellheeled members of the Board of Education or some of their rela-

We would be glad to print in this paper, if Clerk Coughlin will furnish it to us, a detailed copy of all those directly or indirectly related or connected with anyone on the Board of Education, passed or present, who has been interested in public expenditures.

Make the public's business public! Put the public records in a public building!

Take the public records out of a private home!

Make the public records available to the people who pay the bills for all the expenditures as well as the fat salary of the part

If there is no reason for concealing anything, as has been claimed, then why not put the public records in a public building accessible to all the people. They are not dealing with the funds of any ring, although you might think so the way all the information is hugged to their breast. Even the Court had trouble in getting its order recognized. Even then, according to the report, there was difficulty in obtaining the books.

The president of the Board of Education, Mr. Charles Conrad, owes it to the public to see that the public records are put in a public building accessible to all the people all day long.

We thing that he and the finance committee should have seen that the public had a complete itemized statement of the EXPEN-DITURES OF THEIR MONEY before there was any pretense at voting on a so-called budget.

There can be no vestige of an excuse for not letting the public see the records. There is no reason under the sun why the president of the Board of Education and the finance committee should not have seen to it that the public knew all about the expenditures up to date before they were asked to vote on any budget. It is their business. The public is treated as if it was none of its business. We have a lot of "hollering", a lot of shouting, a lot of frothing and a lot of blubbering but that is all. Regardless of which side is in, the public is no better informed.

Uunless there is a reform and reform quickly, Carteret might just as well get prepared to put a To-Let sign on the town. No business of any consequence will come to a town where expenditures are handled in this way.

Businesses already in the town have been hard hit borrowing money trying to meet payrolls and keep men employed. The situation with them is steadily getting worse. They have plants in for them to concentrate their business in one or two location. If it "Not half so bad as if I saw hulf a costs them many times more here than anywhere else it would pay to shut down and clear out of here.

They and all the people have a right to know how their money is expended. There should be a detailed statement furnished the public. There should be no lumping.

The public is not so dumb as to think just because they cut one estimate and leave the others alone that there is not plenty of juice in the remainder to take care of the situation.

The boys are past masters in this art. If they need any advice, they have some associates who are very well experienced in juggling.

to Solomon in Riches?

The wealthiest man in the history of the world was Croesus, last king of Lydia, who from his conquest, his mines, and the golden sands of the Pactolus, accumulated so much treasure that his wealth has become proverbial-"Rich as Croesus" now signifying rich beyond the dreams of avarice. He reigned from B, C, 560 to 546, but dissipated, and yielding himself up to sumptuous extravagance and the pleasures of life, declared that he was the unhappiest man in the world. Welcoming the Greeks to his court, he was visited by the great Athenian lawgiver Solon, of whom he asked the question, "Who was the happiest man in the world that he had seen?" to receive in reply, "No man should be called happy until his Coming into conflict with Cyrus, the Persian king, Croesus was defeated, his capital Sardis taken, and he was condemned to death by burning. As he stood awaiting the firing of the pyre, he recalled Solon's aphorism, and exclaiming "O Solon!" three times, aroused the curiosity of Cyrus who, inquiring into the reason for the ejaculations, was told the story of Solon's precept, and spared his life.

But, the First Book of Kings tells us that "King Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom." (10:23),-Literary Di-

Walking "Cane" Had Its Origin in the Orient

The ferula or staff of fennel wood was one of the earliest supports used by elderly persons because it was long, tough, and light. The designation of "cane" so generally used in this country originated in the Orient, where hollow palms and bamboos were naturally used for walking sticks. Pope's Sir Plume prided himself on the nice conduct of his clouded cane, while Guy celebrated in verse the strong cane and the amber tipped cane. Henry VIII had one cane "garnyshed with sylver and gilte, with Astronomie upon it," and another "garnyshed with golde, having a perfume in the toppe." Ancient Egyptian walking sticks made of cherry wood, with carved knobs, have been discovered. Comedy canes having heads carved in the grinning likeness of Punch, Merry Andrew, and Toby Fillpot still can be found in the shops. It is said that a collector of canes in Madison, Neb., has more than 160 on display in his home.

It was essential that fues and church wardens should be able to hand on to their successors exact knowledge of the limits of the parish .- Atlantic Monthly.

SYNOPSIS

Exhausted, ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party. He has fied from his brutal father, Bat Mor'ryson, Bat comes after him, but his new friends conceal him Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy, who gives his name as Shad (Sheridan) is sent on his way to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. The colonel secures him a situation in the village of Amity Dam. He becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinker, considered by the straitlaced people of Amity Dam as a drunkard because of his periodic lapses from strict sobriety, Bat Morryson comes to Amity Dam to take his son back to his own dissolute life.

CHAPTER III

A Day at the Fun Shop.

From the rear room of the store Shad ran downstairs to the cellar and out of its open hatchway. He went directly to the Smithers' house. The merchant, now familiar with the history of Shad, was at home. Learning the truth, he said to the boy:

"You disappear until the colonel comes. I'll telephone him. I don't want to know where you are."

He hurried to the store. Shad went to the loft in the barn and spread a blanket on the haymow and lay down.

Mr. Smithers found the Cyclopean Bat swearing mad. Shad's father and the constable were in the store. The latter introduced Mr. Smithers,

"Where is that boy?" Bat asked. "I don't know."

"You're a d-d liar."

"I don't allow swearing in this store," said Mr. Smithers in that gentle tone which he used in selling ribbons to a lady. "If you'll sit down, I'll consult my attorney on the telephone and ask him what ought to be

He called Colonel Blake, who said, "Tell the man that I'll meet him at your store tomorrow at eleven o'clock." The interview next morning was very brief. "Morryson, I know all about you," said the colonel. "You ought to be in jail. I shall see that you are put there and tried for brutality to your children if you do not get out of this country today and stay out of it. Don't irritate me by talk or tarrying. 1 want you to start now."

Bat started. He had heard of the district attorney of St. Lawrence county, the terror of all the lawbreakers of the north country. He would make no words with him. The colonel set out for his home,

At last Shad was free. He celebrated his emancipation with a social adventure. It marks the beginning of the second act of this drama of country life. He and Bony went down to Brown's cove on the river for a visit with Bumpy Brown.

"It'll be Sunday tomorrow-lord, how I dread it!" said Bony. "The bells an' the yells an' the stillness an' the sleepiness an' helpin' Miss Spenlow pick flowers an' then the walk in the cemetery to the graves of her cruel ancestors. Let's break away an' pike off to Bumpy Brown's. I'll paddle down today an' tell him we're comin'."

Now, Mrs. Smithers was a worker in the church. Shad had sat in the Smithers pew every Sunday with her and her husband. His compliance with their wishes had pleased them. The long prayers and sermons, the singing and incomprehensible shouting had generally given him a pain in the head. Shad's sense of rectitude was being slowly undermined by this ordeal. Soon he would be willing to lie to escape it.

That Sunday morning he told Mrs. Smithers that he was going for a walk to see the country and to think up things to write in a letter. He would not come home for dinner.

"I'll pray for you," said the good woman.

At the store he met Bony. "I suppose that Sister Smithers wanted you to go to the Sob Works?" said Bony. "The Sob Works!"

"The meetin' house," Bony explained. Always he called it "The Sob Works." "She's good to me," said Shad, remembering her kindness,

"Well, you're good to them. You do all their dirty work for 'em." They walked down the river road together. "What does Bumpy Brown do?" Shad asked. "Kind of a tinker-mends umbrellas an' clocks an' tin pans an' 'most anything. He's got a funny bird that

By and by they left the road and took a well-trod path that led into a thicket of evergreens. Beyond this on the high bank of the river was the curious little home of old Bumpy Brown, It was built of small logs stranded in his cove when the high water of the spring went down. A few shapely cedar trees stood around it. first married her first cousin and step-Bumpy used to say of his acre on the brother, Herod Philip, tetrarch of giver shore that it was "God's Fair | Iturea, and afterward became the wife | Ground." A man of imagination going to the lonely little house on a clear June morning would have called it the capital of Fairyland and chiefly because of the many voices in the reedy marsh and the woods and the flower-strewn grasses near it. Bumpy was wont to call the birds his chickens. He fed them with crumbs from his table.

With his own hands he had completed the picturesque little house. It was snugged into the river bank. Its curving roof had a wide overhang. Its windows were almost flush with the ground toward the trail. Its floor was somewhat below the level of the ground on three sides. Its south side toward the river had a door and two windows, opening on a flat rock ledge. Beyond them was a fine stretch of still water. The roof was partly covered with overlapping cedar strips from an abandoned launch, a patch of shingles, a patch of rusty tin, and a patch of tai paper.

The windows and doors differed in shape and size. They had come from abandoned mills and houses. The snug and shapely structure, about sixteen feet square, gave one the impression that it had grown out of the ground, Though delightful in form, it was a thing of shreds and patches.

Bumpy Brown was cutting wood back of the house.

"Hello, Bony!" he shouted. "I'm gettin' ready to start up the fun works.'

"It's a sight to see you workin'," said Bony.

"Say, by Jeedix! When I've swung an ax a while I git a grudge ag'in' Adam fer eatin' that apple."

Bony introduced his young friend. "Say, boys, what be you expectin'?" The boys did not quite understand his query and were silent.

"We'll have a good visit an' a reg'lar Chris'mus dinner. Come down to the spring a minute. I want to show ye suthin' calcullated to improve the condition o' the poor.'

They descended from the high ground to a wooded ravine. A covered dishpan was sunk in its cold spring, It held a small dressed turkey.

"My friend Muggins brought that to me, knowin' I expected company," Bumpy explained. "It makes him feel had to see young turkeys sleepin' outo'-doors, in a tree, these frosty nights. They ain't comf'table. He puts 'em out o' their misery."

The old man laughed as he added: "There ain't a-goin' to be no sufferin' here if I can help it."

He walked with a knotty crooked stick cut in the woods. His artificial leg squeaked at every step. He limped a little but he could travel at a good pace. As they entered the house a strange gentle voice called

"Hello, pard! Are you happy?" "Yes, Dick," Bumpy answered. "Praise the Lord!" the voice ex-

It came from a yellow-headed parrot in a cage that rested among some potted ferns on a windowsill. The floor was well swept. The whole interior of the little house was noticeably clean. A crayon portrait of a plain-looking woman bung on the wall.

"That's her-my wife," said the old man proudly as he stood looking at the portrait. "Just as pat'ral as can bemade from a photygraft. Alwus lookin' at me-the best woman that ever lived. Died ten year ago, this comin' fall-September seventeenth, at four ten in the mornin' exac'ly." He wiped his eyes with a faded bandanna handkerchief and went to the woodbox. He began to whittle kindlings for the stove. He stopped and looked up at the boys and added; "I said she died but she's still herealwas speaks to me when I come home an' we talk things over same as we

He hurried out-of-doors.

"Always hustles around like that after he's spoke his piece about her,' said Bony with a smile. Bumpy returned with an armful of wood. He turned to Bony and said: "Say, listen to me, Ol' Bumpy Brown has quit drinkin'. No more whisky fer him-not never no more! By Jeedix! I mean it. The las' time I come near breakin' my good leg an' then my wife an' I bad a talk about it. She argued it out plain. An' then

"Well, it's all over, an' Ljust as soon tell you boys suthin' if you'll keep it a secret. It's very private." The boys indicated their respect for his confidence with unusual emphasis, Bumpy winked and sat down and pulled up his right trousers leg to the knee, exposing most of his wooden member. On one side was a little shelf with a hole in it and a cork in the hole.

"Ye see, all I had to do was buy a bottle o' whisky an' fill up my leg with it. That ol' leg holds enough to see snakes with. When I wanted a drink I'd lift my pants leg an' stick a straw in the hole an' shift a part o' the load a little higher up. I call it my happy New Year leg."

The boys laughed. "Yes, sir, my ol' leg an' me is goin' to behave."

He took down a fiddle hanging on the wall and said: "Here's the main shaft o' the fun works,"

He tuned its strings and played "Money Musk" and "The Sailor's Hornpipe." The bird sang joyously and Bony danced a jig as Bumpy played. He hung up the fiddle and said to Bony:

"If you'll run down an' bring up that turkey an' the butter, I'll start the doin's."

The boy ran and fetched them. The bird indulged in a weird chortle, Bumpy smiled and said:

"Well, Dick, you've never learnt how to make a fool o' yerself as I have. I've got a maggot in my brain," Dick whistled a bar of the old bugle call for assembly.

Bumpy picked up a broom, shouldered it and marched briskly across the room as if obeying the call, I :turning to his task he said:

"We have great times-that bird an' me. We visit together an' he sings purty. When I go a-tinkerin' I take him with me, carry him on a stick behind me, fastened to my pack. He amuses the fam'ly while I work. Everybody loves him."

Bumpy had a jolly way of bullying the boys.

"Go an' wash yer hands an' comb yer hair," he said. "By Jeedix! Anybody would think that you was settin' down with common folks to a plaindinner. If any o' my rich friends should come I want ye to look right."

Bony had a nervous habit of winking and wrinkling his brow when amused.

By and by Bony had his turn. He knew all the droll sayings and misdeeds of Amity Dam, While Bumpy was filling his pipe be turned to Shad Morryson and said: "Boy, you ain't done a thing but laugh an' listen. Slip yer belt on the pulley an' keep the works a-goln'.'

It was then that Shad's remarkable faithfully that his friends roared with laughter. They sat talking the hours away until the sun was low. Suddenly Bumpy arose and began to pick up the dishes, saying: "And there lay round upon the ground great heaps of so'gers."

Bumpy used this rhymed picture as a kind of tailpiece to every situation. There was a touch of satirical humor in it. Doubtless at the lodge and at other places where old soldiers were wont to gather he had been fed up Recall some thing I meant to bring with bloody tales of the great conflict. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Daughter of Herodias Not Mentioned by Name

that Salome was the name of the daughter of Herodias, who, instructed by her mother, requested of Herod and received the head of John the Baptist in a charger as the reward of her dancing. MY MEMORY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHY is it I remember Things upstairs when I am down;

When I'm half way to town? Why is it in the attic I think about the fire,

What attics may require? Why is it I remember Things downstairs when I'm up? When up I went I fully meant

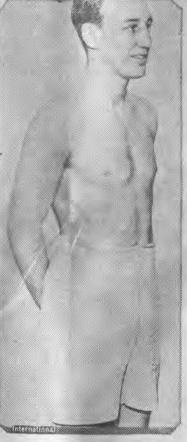

Or, far below, remember so

To bring along a cup. Why is it, when I'm outdoors I think of things within, And, in again, remember then, The things where I have been?

Why is it I remember Things inside when I'm out, My kitchen cares when I'm upstairs, Am I always turned about? Since at the proper minute A thing I can't recall,

PETER SEES A CHANCE

A STORY FOR BEDTIME

Never give up, but be willing to try, He always wins out who will never say die.

Was ever anybody in a worse fix than Peter Rabbit? There he sat panting for breath under a pile of brush in the Green Forest with Hooty the Owl perched on his watchtower just above, and, hiding in a hollow log not far away, Shadow the Weasel. Of the two Peter feared Shadow most. He knew that Shadow knew just where he was. In fact, if it had not been that Hooty had happened along just in time to swoop at Shadow and chase him into that hollow log, it is probable that Peter would have been caught before this.

"It's a lucky thing for me," thought Peter, "that Hooty did not come along until after I had got under this pile of brush. He doesn't know I'm here, and so he won't be watching for me at all. Shadow won't dare come out until Hooty has gone away, and until then I am perfectly safe. Perhaps I can steal away while Hooty is watching for Shadow. Of course, if I make the least sound Hooty will hear me. I don't see what Old Mother Nature was thinking of to give him such wonderful ears. It isn't fair to the rest of

Of course Peter quite overlooked the fact that Hooty's eyes are of very little use to him in daylight, and so he must do all his hunting at night and must have keen ears to help out his eyes in order to get enough to eat. Mother Nature is never unfair, though It may sometimes seem so.

"I'm glad," continued Peter to himself, "that there is snow on the ground, because that means that there will be no rustling of dry leaves when I move. It is dreadfully hard work to walk over dry leaves without making them rustle. That is one thing I do not have to worry about. I hope Hooty will be as patient as he usually is. If he sits there long enough, I wll get quite rested. Of course Shadow will follow my tracks as soon as the way is clear. He is the most persistent fellow of whom I know. He never gives up until he has to. Now I'll look about and see what chance I have to get away. The sooner I can do it the better. Shadow thinks I won't dare move while Hooty is on guard. I'm going to fool him if there is the least chance in the world, and the sooner I do It the better."

Very, very slowly and carefully Peter crawled to the edge of the brusn pile farthest from where Hooty sat on his watch-tower with his eyes fixed on the hole in which Shadow had disappeared. He took care not to make a sound. Where the brush was very thick he crawled on his stomach through the snow under it. And so at last he reached the edge where he could peep out. Just a little way off was a big stump.

"If I could reach that," thought Peter, "without being seen, I think perhaps I could steal away. There is a little hemlock tree just beyond, and If I can once get that between Hooty and me he never will see me in the world. It is my one chance to get away from here, and after I've done that I will have to trust to luck to fool Shadow. He'll follow my tracks as sure as winter is here, once Hooty lets him out, and Hooty isn't going to sit there all night."

Peter looked back over his shoulder up at the top of the tall dead tree which was Hooty's watch-tower. Right on the very tip-top sat Hooty. If Peter had not known he was there be certainly would have thought Hooty a part of the tree itself. Peter shivered. and it wasn't the cold that made him shiver. Did he dare to cross that open place to the big stump right in plain sight of Hooty if he should turn his head?

One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable is to see that little bowels do their work of carrying off waste matter promptly and regularly. For this nothing is better than Castoria, a pure vegetable preparation specially made for babies and children. Castoria acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic. Yet it is always effective, for older children, too. Remember, Castoria contains no harsh drugs. no narcotics-is absolutely harmless, When your baby is fretful with teething or a food upset, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Wake Up Your Liver Bile -Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed | in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned. It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE

LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at All stores. @ 1931, C. M. Co.
