

GIVES REPORT ON CLUB CONFERENCE

Woman's Club Secretary at N. Y. Affair.

Women, women, everywhere,
And lots and lots to drink.
But it was tea, with lemon or cream.

As mentioned in last week's paper, Mrs. T. J. Nevill, president, and the writer attended a Women's Conference on Current Problems on September 29th as delegates of the Woman's Club. Following is my report to the Club:

This conference which was sponsored by the New York Herald-Tribune was held in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel at 50th Street and Park Avenue, New York City. There were three thousand women, gathered from twenty-six States, assembled in the main ballroom of the hotel. Eighteen hundred organizations were represented. The conference was divided into three sessions—the morning session from 10 to 1, the afternoon session from 2:30 to 5:00, and the evening session from 8:00 to 11:00. Mrs. Nevill and I attended all three sessions.

Mrs. William Brown Meloney, editor of the Herald-Tribune Sunday magazine, who was responsible for assembling all the prominent speakers, was chairman of the conference. She stressed the fact that the conference was a strictly non-political and non-partisan affair. She said "Believing that we are on the threshold of a new era, we will key the discussion to what we have called 'The New Day'. It is generally believed that after the difficult time through which we are now passing, there will be many changes in the picture of American life. With shorter working time will come greater leisure, lower incomes and new social values. Every economic revolution has been followed by a period of depression, and after that life has opened out more richly and fully for the mass of people. The present crisis, which has followed an intensified development of labor-saving machinery in both the home and factory, has bewildered many of us; but it has also put the best minds of the world to work on solutions. Out of the struggle will come a stronger America and a better world. This generation will progress in proportion to the intelligent and courageous use it makes of the knowledge which is available."

Mrs. Meloney then introduced Mrs. Ogden Reid, Vice-President of the Herald-Tribune, who together with (Continued on Last Page)

HOST AT LUNCHEON

Thomas N. McCarter, president of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, was host at a luncheon Tuesday in the Essex Club, Newark, at which time he introduced Colonel Edward C. Rose, who was recently made a vice-president of the corporation and its underlying companies, to his official associates.

A large attendance enjoyed the dance held by the St. Elias Greek Catholic Church, at St. Elias hall, Sunday night. In between the dance numbers, specialty features were presented.

Church Parish Plans to Give Musical Here

The trustees of the Presbyterian church are planning a treat for the people of Carteret in the near future. They are engaging Mrs. Ola Bidwell Sherry of the Sherry School of Music for a recital. Mrs. Sherry is a musician of rare ability, both vocally and on various instruments, as well as an accomplished reader. Some of the more developed pupils of the school will accompany her and it is possible that her husband, Michael Sherry, late of the Winthrop Ames Opera Company and the American Opera Company, will also be present. Mr. Sherry is a tenor of unusual strength and beauty. It is planned to hold the recital in the high school.

ELECTED HEAD OF HEBREW SOCIETY

Mrs. Samuel Roth, was elected president of the ladies' Congregation of Loving Justice, at the meeting held in the Chomez Synagogue on Monday night. The other officers are: Mrs. Sidney Brown, vice president, and Mrs. Frank Brown, treasurer.

Plans were completed for the public card party to be held at the show rooms of the Economy Garage on Monday, October 17. At the conclusion of the business session, cards were played and refreshments were served.

At the session were: Mrs. Frank Brown, Mrs. Philip Drouin, Mrs. Jacob Daniels, Mrs. N. S. Jacoby, Mrs. David Wohlgerman, Mrs. Sam Roth, Mrs. Sam Brown, Mrs. D. Abrams, Mrs. Sarah Schwartz, Mrs. J. Binstein, Mrs. Sander Lehrer, Mrs. Samuel Lehman, Mrs. J. Brown, Mrs. Thomas McNally.

I. O. O. F. Members Attend Installation

Arrangements to hold election of officers tonight were made last Friday night at a regular meeting of Carteret Lodge, No. 267, I. O. O. F., in Odd Fellows hall. After the election the members will go to Perth Amboy to witness installation of officers of Lawrence Lodge No. 255 of that city.

The bowling team of the lodge will roll the first game of the third tournament of the Odd Fellows Bowling League next week, Wednesday night, playing against Franklin Lodge of Elizabeth on the Jr. O. U. A. M. alleys, East Grand street and Jefferson avenue, Elizabeth.

HELD ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Josefa Reiris, of 75 Union street, was held for the action of the grand jury by Recorder Nathaniel A. Jacoby in police court last Thursday night, on the complaint of assault and battery made by Mrs. Mary Molnar, of 62 Essex street, this borough.

DANCE AT GERMAN HALL

Plans have been completed by the Foreign American Independent Citizens Club for a dance to be held at the German Lutheran hall on Saturday night, October 22.

John Haas is chairman of the event. He is assisted by John Yurionka, John Daluski, Harry Czar and Stephen Uhryn.

CHURCH SOCIETY AT SUMMIT SHRINE

The Rosary Society of St. Joseph's Church went to the Shrine Church in Summit, Sunday in a large bus chartered for the trip. In the delegation were: Mrs. Patrick Cooney, Mrs. Bartley Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Jerry Donoghue, Mrs. Frank Born, Mrs. Stephen Medvetz, Mrs. Arthur McNally, Miss Katherine Dunne, Mrs. Joseph Shutello, Sr., Mrs. Morton LeVan, Miss Rose Hagan, Mrs. Lawrence Hagan, Mrs. Daniel Gibson, Mrs. Hugh Jones, Mrs. B. Lloyd, Mrs. Mayme Little, Mrs. John E. Donahue, Mr. and Mrs. John Harrington. There was also present a large number of members of the Sacred Heart Church in Fitch street.

Gala Charity Ball in Brunswick, Wednesday

At the meeting of Carey Council, Knights of Columbus, held Tuesday night, plans were completed for the charity ball to be held at the Knights of Columbus rooms in New Brunswick on Columbus Night, October 12. William Lawlor, Jr., is general chairman of the affair. James E. Dunne is also a member of the committee.

Arrangements were made to hold a card party at the Nathan Hale School on Monday night, October 31, with the following committee: Joseph Shutello, Edward Dolan, James Dunne, Nicholas Sullivan, Harry Rapp, Frank Kmetz, Joseph Kennedy, Patrick Cooney, James O'Donnell, Lewis Kasha and Joseph Dollin. In charge of publicity is James Dunne, F. X. Koepfler and Nicholas Sullivan.

PLAN TO ATTEND STATE CONVENTION

The State Christian Endeavor Convention will be held in Somerville on October 12-15. This convention is open to all who are interested in vital Christian work. Members of the three Christian Endeavor Societies of the First Presbyterian church are making plans to attend as much of the convention as possible. On Saturday morning there will be a special intermediate and juvenile convention aside from the general convention. Carteret is especially interested in the Saturday afternoon session, a part of the program is the intermediate oratorical contest and Earle Way of the local church represents the Eastern District in this contest. Last year Earl was the district representative in the State convention which was held in Orange and took third place at that time.

Young Republicans at Pleasing Card Party

A pleasing card party was held by the Young Republicans at the Washington avenue headquarters Wednesday night. The winner were:

Non-players, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Mittuch, Frank Haury, George Bracher, Miss R. Pluta, Joseph G. Jomo, Mrs. Joseph Trefinko and Mr. Erdlyi. Fan-tan, A. Bryer, Mrs. Peter Pehringer, A. Bensulock, Josephine Pluta, Bridge, Eleanor and Anna Bryer, Mrs. John Fee, Elsie and Evelyn Springer, Mrs. N. A. Jacoby, Loretta Nevill, Mrs. A. Kavanaugh, Pinhole, Mrs. Robert Wilson, Mrs. B. Miss Evelyn Oibrich is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Blanche Cole, at Jamestown, N. Y.

STRANGE

Apparently storekeepers and home owners in Carteret—Carteret taxpayers—are subject to attack from out of town for raising the natural question as to the disposition of money that comes out of their pockets in the way of taxes.

If the money did not come from the taxpayers of the community for taxes, and if the money was not provided by the taxpayers in Carteret, they, of course, would not have any right to question the disposition of it.

However, in view of the fact that they do own property here and do pay taxes here and the money that pays school employees' salaries in the borough comes out of their pockets, they have a perfect right to make suggestion as to the disposition of their own money. Yet, taxpayers here who have the temerity to ask any questions about where their money goes or how it is disposed of, are subject to attack from out-of-town.

The usual smoke-screen goes up from the political propagandists about saving the schools when anyone raises the question as to the disposition of the taxpayers' money.

ASK FOR TRAFFIC LIGHTS AT BRIDGE

Councilman Points to Dangerous Crossing.

Councilman John E. Donahue presented a resolution Wednesday night at the Council meeting asking that the City of Rahway and the State Traffic Commission install stop and go traffic signals at Lawrence street and Hazelwood avenue, and at Lawrence street and the super-highway in Rahway.

It was pointed out that many motorists from here encounter considerable difficulty in making turns at the two named intersections because of heavy traffic.

Borough Attorney Elmer E. Brown reported that he will be in Trenton Thursday to obtain the necessary form of advertising for the paving of Longfellow street. Work is to be started shortly.

At the request of Superintendent Sims of the Liebig plant, American Agricultural Company, Mayor Joseph A. Herman appointed Sigard Olsen as special officer. Motion for the appointment was made by Councilman Ellis.

Councilman Donahue reported that he will have ready at the next meeting a complete report on relief work.

Councilman William D'Zurilla and Edward Dolan were absent from the meeting.

HIBERNIANS AT PARTY

A card party featured the session of the ladies' auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians held at the Hibernian club Monday night. The winners were:

Duchre: Mrs. Frank Davis, Mrs. William Bowler, Mrs. Philip Foxe, Mrs. John McCarthy, Edward Lloyd, Steve Kurdiya, Mr. and Mrs. James Byrne. Bridge: Mrs. Mary LeVan, Mrs. A. J. Bonner, Mrs. Howard Burns, Thomas Hoolihan, John Ahlering. Non-players: Mrs. Lawrence Hagan and Mrs. Edwin Quinn.

TO OPEN DENTAL OFFICE

Dr. Edward C. Krenton will open his new dental offices in the Simon's building on Saturday. Dr. Krenton comes well recommended and is a graduate of Rutgers University and Columbia University.

Miss May McShaffery, New York City, is spending a week as the guest of her sister, Mrs. James McCann, of Pershing avenue.

CARD OF THANKS

We, the undersigned wish to express our sincere thanks for aid and service to Rev. Father Medvetzski, St. Johns Society; Chief of Police, H. J. Harrington; Undertaker Frank Burns and to our many friends for their kind words of sympathy, and to all those who sent floral pieces, in the recent bereavement of our Dear Father.

Signed,
THE DEMISH FAMILY.

ASKS BUDGET CUT OF MILLION DOLLARS

Governor A. Harry Moore left for a short vacation in New England. Before going he ordered the State Highway Commission to cut from its budget at least one million dollars.

It appears that the Governor, before leaving, summoned the members of the Commission to Sea Girt and suggested a plan of economy. He advised he would be away for about ten days and that at the end of that time he either wanted that plan adopted or a substitute plan that would bring about the same saving.

In three weeks since he has started his economy drive, the governor has ordered economies in excess of $2,000,000.00. He has reduced payroll costs, abolished jobs, cut traveling expenses and is still on the search.

In addition to that he has a commission from Princeton University making a survey, which commission is to report to the Legislature when it meets in January. The Governor has pointed out that the taxpayers of the State have not got the money to pay the bills so that the State cannot continue to incur bills in their name.

LOCAL GIRL REGISTERS AT BUSINESS SCHOOL

Miss Helen Agnes Foxe, of 98 Emerson street, Carteret, has registered at the Packard School, 253 Lexington avenue, Manhattan, for the business and secretarial course, according to an announcement made today by Seth B. Carkin, Principal.

Miss Foxe is attending the Packard School during the 75th Anniversary of the founding of the school which was established in 1858 by Silas Sadler Packard, a pioneer in business and commercial education.

NAME DELEGATES TO CONVENTION

At the meeting of the Rebekah Odd Fellows held Wednesday night, Mrs. Sumner Moore and Mrs. Charles Morris were named as delegates to the state convention of Rebekah lodges to be held in Atlantic City on October 12 and 13. Mrs. Ellen Anderson will accompany the delegates.

Plans were made to hold a Halloween party on Halloween night. The committee includes Mrs. Ellen Anderson, Mrs. Clara Jamison, Mrs. Sumner Moore, Mrs. Sadie Brown, Mrs. Gussie Wolf.

At the conclusion of the session, cards were played and refreshments served. The guests included:

Mrs. Walter Vonah, Mrs. Louis Vonah, Mrs. Morris Katznelson, Mrs. Mrs. A. Rabinowitz, Mrs. William Schmidt, Mrs. Eggert Brown, Mrs. Estelle Jamison, Mrs. Nathan Duffy, Mrs. George Patterson, Mrs. Thomas Moss, Mrs. August Kostenbader and Mrs. Matthew Sloan.

Mrs. D. Venook Entertains Lady Israelites

A short business session was held by the ladies' auxiliary, Congregation, Brotherhood of Israel, at the home of Mrs. David Venook, of Lincoln avenue, Monday night. Plans were discussed for a public function to be held late this month.

Cards were played and refreshments were served.

The guests were: Mrs. D. Seastiel, Mrs. William Weinstein, Mrs. Edward Hopp, Mrs. L. Chodosh, Mrs. Leo Rockman, Mrs. Dorothy Jacoby, Mrs. Robert Chodosh, Mrs. Ben Klein, Mrs. Sam Wexler, Mrs. Herman Fischer, Mrs. Isadore Brown, Mrs. William Brown, Mrs. Joseph Blaukopf, Mrs. Aaron Rabinowitz, Mrs. Isadore Gross, Mrs. N. Chodosh, Mrs. David Venook, of this place, and Mrs. Anna Chodosh, of Rahway.

VETERANS PICNIC

Fair and warm weather helped to make the picnic of the Star Landing Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars at Markswalt's Grove Sunday afternoon, a big success.

There were groups from various parts of this county and Union county. Cards were played, dancing was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

The combined Polish societies will hold a dance at Falcon's hall November 6, under the direction of Stanley Dombrowski.

CROSSING GATES BROKEN

Gates of the West Carteret crossing of the Central Railroad of New Jersey were broken during the night. The planks were found on the tracks at 3:00 o'clock Wednesday morning.

There was nothing to indicate that the gates were broken by an automobile.

NEW METHODIST PASTOR

Rev. Fletcher S. Gariss, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Woodbridge, will also serve the Methodist Episcopal church here, it was announced recently.

Rev. Gariss will take up his work here Sunday, when he has charge of the services to be held at 5:30 P. M. The Sunday School session will be held at 2:30 P. M.

IN MEMORIAM

In Loving Memory of
DOROTHY MARY SIMONS
My spirit feels just like the storm;
So mild, alone, depressed—
Some day I hope we'll meet to find,
Contentment and sweet rest.
YOUR MOTHER.

Bad feeling between two neighbors of more than fifteen years' standing, culminated in a stabbing and clubbing match on the streets of the borough shortly after 6 o'clock Wednesday night, with the result that both landed in the Rahway Memorial hospital. One of them is in a critical condition, hospital attaches say.

The participants in the assault were: Mike Toth, forty-two years old, of 28 Edwin street. He has a possible fracture of the skull, lacerations of the scalp, depression of the right side of the frontal bone, lacerations of the leg and his right arm is swollen.

Mike Nagy, the other participant, forty-six years old, of 50 Edwin street, deep lacerations of the scalp, lacerations of the upper left arm and possible fracture of the left arm. It required fifty-two stitches to close his wounds.

The fight occurred about 6 o'clock and, according to police, was the outcome of an old grudge between the two men. The quarrel had flared up anew Wednesday in the factory where both work.

Nagy lost so much blood that his condition is considered serious, especially if pneumonia sets in. Toth may have a fractured skull.

Chief of Police Henry J. Harrington sent Sgt. J. J. Dowling to the hospital and kept in touch with the hospital until after midnight, when both men appeared to be slightly improved.

LEGION POST TO INSTALL OFFICERS

Carteret Post, No. 263, American Legion, and its auxiliary, installed their officers at a session held in the Legion rooms Tuesday night, with over 100 guests in attendance.

County Commander Percy Quackenbush, of Perth Amboy, installed the officers of the men's unit. They are: Maurice Cohen, commander; John Katasa, senior vice commander; Walter Boyer, junior vice commander; Clifford Cutter, finance officer; Edward Walsh, adjutant; Fred Ruckriegel, chaplain, and Harold Edwards, sergeant-at-arms.

Officers of the auxiliary were installed by Miss Jane Cook, county president. The list comprises: Mrs. Harry Gleckner, president; Mrs. John Katasa, first vice president; Miss Jane Cook, second vice president; Mrs. William D. Casey, secretary; Mrs. John H. Nevill, treasurer; Mrs. Clarence Slugg, historian; Mrs. Thomas Jakeway, chaplain and Mrs. Walter Boyer, sergeant-at-arms.

A joint social was enjoyed after the session. The speakers included: J. W. Mittuch, Edwin Casey, Holger Holm, Nathaniel A. Jacoby, Commander Cohen, Clarence Slugg, John Kennedy, Mrs. Charles End, Miss Henrietta Klaus, Mrs. Harry Ivans and Miss Cook.

IN RAHWAY HOSPITAL

Frank I. Bareford, Sr., of Roosevelt avenue, is a patient in the Rahway Hospital under the care of Dr. J. J. Reason, and Dr. John M. Randolph, of Rahway. Mr. Bareford was operating a power saw in the Liebig plant Friday, when three fingers of his right hand were badly cut.

MISSION BAND MEETING

Mrs. E. J. Bennett entertained the members of the Ladies' Mission Band of the First Presbyterian church at her home Tuesday night. Plans were completed for the joint harvest home supper to be held on Thursday night, October 13.

After the business session refreshments were served. The guests were: Mrs. Howard Thorn, Mrs. Charles Morris, Mrs. Gus Edwards, Mrs. William Elliott, Mrs. Edward Webb and Mrs. Daniel Lorentz.

SYNOPSIS

Wilson McCann, young Arizona ranchman, finds an old friend, Jim Yerby, with a broken leg. Julia Stark, daughter of Matthew Stark, inveterate enemy of the McCanns, is with him. Jasper, Julia's brother, attempts to assassinate Wilson. Ann Gifford, with her young sister, Ethel, are sheep raisers, and on that account unpopular with the cattlemen. "Night riders" shoot a McCann rider. Peter McCann, Wilson's father, offers a reward for the disclosure of their identity. Wilson McCann horsewhips Jasper, he making practically no resistance. Matthew Stark posts notice he will kill Wilson McCann on sight. Ann Gifford's tragedy is the fate of her dead sister, Nora, betrayed and abandoned by her lover, Jasper Stark and Carl Gitter, known as a "killer," hold secret conference. A Stark rider, Tom McArdle, is believed by the Starks to have been killed by the McCanns, but rumor links his name with that of Nora Gifford. Matthew Stark is killed, from ambush. Julia finds him dead, with Wilson McCann stooping over him. She and Phil, her younger brother, accuse McCann of the killing, despite his vehement denial. Wilson is shot from the chapparral, while standing over Matthew Stark's body. Believing him dying, the Starks have him taken to their home. Dave Stone, Stark rider, a Texan with a record as a "killer," openly doubts Wilson's guilt. Jasper is disinherited by his father's will. Wilson McCann is restored to health. Jasper Stark, despite the girl's aversion, seeks to persuade Ethel Gifford to marry him, holding over her the threat of revealing Ann as the slayer of Tom McArdle. Ann drives him from the ranch. Later she admits to Ethel that she killed McArdle, Nora's betrayer. No action as to Matthew Stark's killing is taken. An anonymous letter to the sheriff charges Ann Gifford with McArdle's murder. Dave Stone, hearing of this, confesses to the sheriff that he killed McArdle, the slaying being the result of McCann's betrayal of Nora. Stone is confined in the jail at Mesa. Jim Yerby finds Jasper Stark and Gitter urging the lynching of Stone for McArdle's murder. He tells Ann Gifford, who insists she killed McArdle and Stone is trying to shield her. With Phil and Julia she rides to Mesa to tell her story and save Stone. Julia meets Wilson McCann and appeals to him for assistance. McCann "kidnaps" Jasper Stark.

"You wouldn't take advantage of me this way, Wils," he wheedled. "I ain't got a thing in the world against you. All this family feud is plumb foolish. That's what I said to Julie. I says, 'Let's take Wils home an' nurse him.' I says, 'This shootin' was Dad's fault anyhow, an' Wils is a good fellow.' Honest, to G—d that's what I told her. Wils, we looked after you right at the Circle Cross, didn't we? Done everything for you that we could?"

"I'm not going to hurt you," the other said with disgust. "No use lying to me. It don't buy you anything. . . . Move on up the bunk here an' knock on the door."

Through the gloom the shadowy outline of a building had emerged. It was the back of the stone jail.

Jasper knocked on the iron-studded door.

"Who is it?"

"Wils McCann with a prisoner. That you, Mike?"

"Yep. It's sure enough you, Wils, is it?"

The deputy was already unlocking the door. His question had been surplusage, for he had recognized the voice. Nevertheless Rand's revolver covered the men as they entered.

"Whachawant?" he demanded.

"Why, I brought a trouble-maker along with me, Mike," answered Wilson. "I figured he was better here than shootin' off his mouth at the Gilt Edge. Got a cell handy for him?"

"You've got no right to hold me without a warrant. I won't stand for it a minute," bustered Jasper, now much reassured as to his safety.

"Incit'n to riot, Mike. Better hustle him into a cell. This is liable to be our busy night. I'm going back to get that Gitter if I can. If we get these two birds in jail an' nobody knows where they're at, the mob is going to drift around for awhile lookin' for its leaders. If we can stand 'em off a few hours there won't be any lynching. Mostly mobs are what you call temperamental."

Rand was Irish and ready to fight. If there was a chance to save his prisoner's life he was more than willing to take it. The appearance of a friend willing to play the game out with him was tremendously cheering. He knew the McCanns well. If they rallied to his aid there was a likelihood of success.

"Boy, I'm with you till Yuma gets snowbound," he cried with enthusiasm. "We'll put Mr. Stark in Number 40 an' give him a chance to cool off."

Five minutes later a small colored boy was giving a message to the big Texan. "Gen'lman says Mistah Stark would like fer to see you at the back doah, Mistah Gitter."

Busy though he had been drinking and exhorting, Gitter had missed his fellow conspirator and wondered where he had gone. That Jasper should send for him to hold a whispered conference away from the crowd was quite probable. Gitter swaggered to the rear of the saloon without an instant of misgiving.

He walked out of the back door straight into a forty-five, the barrel of which pressed against his stomach.

"Hands up, Gitter," came the hard crisp order.

The Texan had no option. His hands moved skyward.

Defiantly McCann removed his revolvers.

"We're going down the alley," he explained in a low voice. "I don't aim to kill you unless you make some fool break. Do that, an' it will sure be a funeral."

"What's the play if you're not fixin' to kill me?" Gitter asked.

"You'll find out. Now move—not too fast—an' don't look back. I might change my mind."

The Texan moved. He never argued with a man who had the drop on him and meant business. It was safer to watch for a chance and plug the fellow when he was not looking.

Wilson followed at his heels, the gun under one edge of the coat he wore unbuttoned. They reached the street unnoticed, crossed it without observation, and passed into the gloom of the alley beyond.

"Where you takin' me?" Gitter growled.

"To jail."

"What for?"

"Raisin' a riot."

The prisoner made no complaint about the illegality of this proceeding. It was high-handed of course, but the man behind a gun has the privilege of being that if he chooses. There was no use trying to talk McCann out of the advantage he held. Gitter did not attempt it. His cunning mind concentrated on the practical problem of escape.

The chance came as they were picking their way down into the small gulch. It was so dark that McCann was following close on the heels of the other. Gitter stumbled and fell. His arm swept out, caught the younger man's legs below the knees, and dragged them out from under him.

The revolver flew out of Wilson's hand as he went down. Before he could stop himself he had rolled down the steep ground on top of the Texan. They went to the bottom of the incline together, now one and now the other on top.

In the scramble of wildly flying legs the two men clung fast. But in that instant, while they were locked in each other's arms, Wilson realized that he was no match for his opponent at this kind of rough work. He was lighter by twenty-five pounds and he was still weakened from the effect of his recent wounds. To survive, he knew it would be necessary to break the other's bear-like hug. Otherwise his ribs would be crushed and the breath driven out of his body.

They landed in the creek bed with Gitter on top. The Texan laughed in savage triumph. He had his enemy at his mercy and knew it, though Wilson was still trying with short arm joints to the jaw to break the viselike grip that encircled him.

"I gotcha, by G—d," the Texan grunted.

He shifted his hold. One hand pinned down the fist beating like a piston rod against his face. The other found the throat of the prostrate man, the sinewy fingers tightening until McCann struggled for breath.

Wilson knew he was lost unless he could escape from the grasp of steel encircling his neck. Yet it was by no set plan that he hit upon a way of saving himself. In his agony he drew up his feet and straightened them with swift force. The effect was astonishing. Gitter let out a shriek of pain. His throat held loosened momentarily. Again McCann brought up his heels and raked them savagely down the calves of the other.

Gitter tore himself free, cursing, and got to his feet. The man's trouser legs were shredded and his limbs bleeding. The sharp spurs on Wilson's boots had ripped through to the flesh and roweled it mercilessly. He stood there cursing, furious with rage.

Before he recovered his reason the man on the ground covered him with his own revolver, drawn from the belt Wilson had fastened above his hips.

"Reach for the roof," McCann ordered.

The Texan glared at him savagely. His huge doubled fists worked spasmodically. He wanted to fling himself on this young fellow and stamp the life out of him. But under the menace of the forty-five he dared not attempt it.

McCann still struggled for breath in a world which swam in bubbles before his eyes. But Gitter did not know that. The big fists slowly moved up over the bullet-shaped Teutonic head.

"If I had a gun—"

The subordinate clause was a threat which bore no conclusion to be understood.

"I'm still borrowin' it. Don't you move."

Slowly Wilson rose. Every moment he was breathing less raggedly and was seeing more clearly.

"If you're quite sure—you don't want to start something else, Mr. Gitter—we'll be moving on again," he said with an effort.

They traveled up the sandy wash, climbed from the creek bed, and were admitted into the jail.

"How's everything, Wils?" the deputy asked.

"Why, fine as silk. Brought you another prisoner, Mike."

"What's he been doin'?"

"Incit'n to riot, too. Can you give him a nice quiet cell all by his lonesome?"

"Sure can do." To his prisoner the deputy said: "Come right along, Mr. Gitter. Room 27 for you."

When Rand had locked up the Texas he led his friend down the corridor toward the office.

"You sure set a good example, Wils," he said with a grin. "Since you left I've had more visitors offerin' to help me out the hole I'm in. Two of 'em."

"Good. If we get four-five fighting men—"

"One of these is a lady," the deputy explained dryly.

"A lady?" McCann's mind flew to Julia Stark. Had she been so unwise as to come to the jail with the idea that she could be useful? It would be like her. She was both impulsive and unselfish.

"Why yes, a lady! Come right in an' meet her."

Wilson followed him into the office.

"Reach for the Roof," McCann Ordered.

like your next-door neighbor. Well, if there's anything you want while I'm away holler for it to Mike. He'll fix you up."

Stone did not trouble the deputy with fussy requests. He read or lay on the iron cot and let his thoughts drift where they would. He found them turning, if he did not consciously direct them elsewhere, to a tight-lipped young woman whose last word to him had been that she did not want him for a friend.

When Rand brought dinner in for him at noon Stone detected in his manner a note of silent evasiveness foreign to the temperament of the garrulous Irishman. Within five minutes he knew what was troubling the deputy. The town was "wilding up." Looked like Jas Stark and Gitter might get the boys to do some crazy thing or other.

Stone's impassive eyes fastened to his. "Meanin' just what, Mike? Allowin' to hang me, are they?"

"Well, Jas Stark an' that Gitter are tellin' how you dry-guiched Tom McArdle."

Stone nodded. "I know those birds. So they're fixin' to get rid of me? They would, of course. I've played

How Chemical Research Has Helped the World

There is no single "cure-all" drug for every ill that flesh is heir to; even the "same" disease in different men does not always yield to the same drug. The chemist dare not generalize in drug research for the needs of a human machine which recent discoveries have proved to be so delicate that the absence of five-millionths of a gramme of a vitamin appreciably shortens the life of man.

Specialized research has placed so much at the disposal of the modern doctor that such a common disease as rickets can be cured by giving the patient food containing vitamin D, a product of peculiar value in strengthening weakness in the bones. Vitamin D can be made in the laboratory. Two grammes of it are equivalent to about one ton of cod liver oil in its power of curing or preventing rickets.

Besides prolonging life, chemical research has done a multitude of things to make life possible as we live it. The

Poetry Found to Be True

"A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," said the poet, and tests in Germany have disclosed that even if the rose were artificial, it would be as attractive to the butterfly in its search for food. It is the color, and not the odor, that attracts, it has been found, the insects settling indiscriminately on paper and on real flowers that were scattered about a garden.—Exchange.

right into their hands. What you go into to do about it, Mike?"

"Well, I've wired Hank to come home an' I'm figurin' on swearing in some deputies to help me."

A sardonic smile touched the face of the Texan. "To help you protect Dave Stone, bad man an' killer. I reckon you'll find the boys some reluctant."

It proved to be as the prisoner predicted. Rand returned to him in the middle of the afternoon. From the cot where he was lying Stone looked up and read failure in the deputy's honest face.

"Well, you got the jail full of law-abidin' citizens?" Stone asked with gentle derision. "All of 'em anxious to go the limit for me?"

Rand's eyes confessed defeat.

"Don't worry, Mike," the Texan went on. "I knew it would be that way. Question is, what do you aim to do now? Do I get a chance for my white alley, Mike?"

"How d'you mean?"

"Do I get my guns back, so I can take Gitter an' Stark with me on this long journey?"

"I don't reckon that would hardly be right, Dave. You're a prisoner."

"You'll turn me over to be lynched, then, by two murderers who want me out the way because they're afraid I've got the goods on them."

Rand had an inspiration. "No, sir. If it comes to a showdown I'll swear you in as a deputy."

"I'll promise not to throw down on you, this time," Stone assured him with morbid irony.

During the long afternoon the deputy was in and out of the prisoner's cell a dozen times to consult him. The Texan showed no emotion or excitement. He faced imperturbably the shadows of darkness drawing closer to him. Whatever of despair he may have felt in his heart did not reach the chill mask of his face.

Through the window he looked down at Mesa, and he knew that the men hurrying to and fro on the streets were thinking of the fate in store for him.

The chances were that he would never again see the glory of a new day, the sunlight streaming across the silvery sage of the desert. He had lived hard, but on the whole clean. They had called him the good bad man because he never wasted his force in futile dissipation. Would that serve him where he was going? He smiled grimly, wondering.

Night fell. Stone walked to the barred window and looked out. The lights of the town were coming out one by one. He could see that the place buzzed with excitement like a hive of swarming bees.

"Soon now," he told himself quietly. "He thought of many things, almost forgotten—of school days in the small town where he had been born, of boys not recalled in years, of the serape which had driven him to the Texas frontier. Scenes in his turbulent life, some of them detached and episodic, jumped to mind vividly.

One of these showed a barroom, and inside it a swaggering bully and bad man "deviling" a boy of seventeen. It showed the flash of guns, the surprised desperado sinking slowly to the floor while the boy stared at him with fear-filled eyes at thought of what he had done. From the hour he had killed King Hill, in the eyes of the world David Stone had been marked with a brand he could not escape.

The door of the cell opened and Rand's head was thrust in. "Lady to see you, Dave."

Stone turned swiftly. A young woman was moving across the threshold of the room. He recognized instantly her slender erectness.

"You—Miss Ann?" he exclaimed, amazed.

She moved forward, and when she was close he saw that her face was working with emotion.

"Why did you do it?" she cried in a low voice.

"Do what?"

"You know. You know. Pretend that you shot Tom McArdle."

"Other folks were being suspected, I figured I'd better tell the truth."

"It's not the truth. You know it isn't. I killed him."

"No, ma'am. You thought so, but you didn't."

"How can you say that? I saw him fall from his horse when I shot."

"I'll tell you about that, Miss Ann," he said, and related to her the same story he had told the sheriff.

"I don't believe a word of it," she replied, and there was a sob in her voice. "You're doing it because I'm in trouble about it, and now—they're going to—"

"I know," he said gently. "Don't you worry, Miss Ann. I'm a hard citizen. Anyone will tell you that. I'm only gettin' what's comin' to me. An' about McArdle—it's sure enough true. I killed him. If I hadn't of, how would I know he'd made his brags that he was comin' over to yore place even when you didn't want him?"

She could not wholly deny that bit of corroborative evidence. But she saw another possibility, a more likely one. "Maybe you found him before he—died. Maybe he told you."

He shook his head, meeting her eyes steadily. "No, ma'am. I told you the straight of it. He said something no decent man would say. I called for a showdown an' beat him to the draw. He had better than an even chance."

She threw out her hands in an impatient little gesture of abandon. "I don't care what you say. If you did it for me. You're shieldin' me now. That's why you gave yourself up, so that people wouldn't blame me. And I had treated you mean—wouldn't let you be my friend. Then you did it for me. But I won't have it. I'm going to stop it. I'll tell them I did it and they'll let you go." Ann ended on a rising note close to hysteria.

The gunman was close to death. The dull roar of its menace echoed up to him from the street a block away. He did not think of that now. In his blood there drummed a beat of joy. In that hour he was nearer to the woman he loved than ever he had been before. But so flicker of feeling was allowed to reach his poker face.

"Nothing to that," he said quietly. "This is a private grudge an' those holding it will get me if they can. You're not in this. What's the sense of you mixin' in? It won't help me any, an' you'll get in bad yourself. If I was you I'd go straight home an' not say a word to anybody. Maybe things will work out all right for me. You never can tell."

His coldness chilled her, but she would not give up. "Go home!" she repeated. "Leave you here to die when—when—" She put her hands up to her face and broke into violent sobbing.

The Texan stepped closer and touched her arm gently with his hand. "Don't you take on that way," he begged. "Don't you."

After a time, through the catches of her breath he caught the answer. "What kind of a woman do you think I am—to go home and fold my hands while—while—"

"I think you're the salt of the earth, Miss Ann," he told her simply. "You've risked a heap in tryin' to help me—what folks will think an' what this crazy mob would be liable to do if they found you here with me. It's the biggest thing any woman ever did for me—except my mother. But there's no way you can help me more than you've done already. So I say, don't get yore name mixed up with mine in this. I'll likely make the grade. I've been in tighter places than this an' come through all right. Do I look like I was worried about it?"

Before he had finished speaking there rose a sound such as Ann had never heard before. It had in it something of the wild beast's triumphant scream when it has brought its kill to bay. At that yell of hundreds of voices answering the call of the old savage blood-lust she shuddered with terror. The dread of it crashed over her senses like a great wave lifting her from her feet. The room tilted and objects swam together in a haze of bubbles.

When her eyes opened she found herself looking up into the face of Stone. He was supporting her in his arms.

"You fainted," he explained. "An appreciation of the situation flowed back into her mind.

"I—was frightened. It's dreadful. If someone would talk to them, would explain things—"

He shook his head. "No use. They're beyond talk," he said quietly.

"But there must be some way. There must be," she pleaded desperately.

"We'll fight 'em off," he promised. "Time for you to go, Miss Ann. If Mike figures it's safe, have him let you out the back way. Then you go straight home."

She was pallid beneath the tan. Her lips trembled. He knew that she was shaky on her legs.

"If you die it will be for me," she told him in a whisper. "I'll never forget it—never as long as I live."

"I'm not figurin' on dyin'," he told her, with a steady cheerfulness designed to deceive. "Adios! You'll have to hurry."

He had not removed his arms from her for fear her strength had not fully returned. Her eyes, with all the gift of her love in them, sank fathoms deep in his. Again he knew the exultant beat of drumming pulses. Unworthy though he was, he knew that she had given to him the inner citadel of her heart.

Because the end of the passage was so near for him and because he divined that in the years to come it would be a comfort to her, he drew her close to him and kissed her lips.

Then, without another word, she was gone.

Again there came to him on the light night breeze the ominous yell of the man-hunters.

Obedience

The following is an incident that happened some years ago in India: A bachelor friend was giving a dinner party to some of his pals and their wives, and thought that wild duck would be a nice change. Instructions were duly given to the cook, and late that afternoon, when the host returned from his office, he found the cook busily chasing the wretched duck round and round the compound. Upon being asked why, the cook replied (after having safely caught the duck) that as he was unable to get a wild duck in the market, he had bought a tame one and was trying to make it wild by chasing it round the compound.—Exchange.

All Eyes Turn to "New" Fur Capes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SO FAR as "stepping out" in that which is conspicuously new-looking and eminently chic she is lost who hesitates to top her "first" fall frock made either of one of the smart woollens or rough crepes, with a jaunty little fur cape. Later on the style formula calls for the addition of a wee muff or one not so diminutive if you prefer.

These little fur capes are about the smartest thing fashion has to offer in the way of an early autumn wrap. As winter comes on they will be worn over the collarless cloth coat which thus multiplies their practicality by two.

It is not only that such varied types of fur are employed in their styling, but the fact that the silhouette of these youthful-looking capes is so variously interpreted, adds greatly to their intrigue. Perhaps if one were called upon to cite one fur as being more generally in use than another for the making of the new capes the honors would go to astrakhan and its near relations such as Persian lamb, broadtail and galyak. Dyed lapin is also a great favorite not only in brown seal effects, but especially in gray for gray furs answer the call of the hour.

Then too, the fur which is made up into new and novel capes emphasize their charm in that they are toned to blend into the color scheme of the costume ensemble. Consider the little mole cape to the left in the picture in relation to color harmony. It tops a frock made of a novelty woolen in a rich autumn green shade, the natural tone of the mole pelt together with the soft green achieving a color value which at once appeals to discriminating taste.

This model is unique in that it is a cross between a cape and a jacket. The fronts of this nobby fur wrap cross and fasten with square silver buttons which emphasize the importance of a touch of metal to enhance the fall costume.

The outfit which the young woman pictured to the right is wearing is keyed up to fashion's very latest. First of all notice that the cloth dress assumes princess lines and that which is highly significant is the fact of it being buttoned from neck to hemline. It has also a close-up-about-the-throat collar effect which interprets an outstanding fashion trend. The cape of Persian lamb is the popular circular type. Its accompanying barrel muff completes the picture.

The fashion of separate fur pieces which may be worn with any coat or dress or suit is destined to develop into a vogue of vast proportions.

Milliners, too, are doing their bit in contributing to the glory of the new fall fur ensembles in that they are trimming many of their smartest hats with fur fantasies.

BLACK AND WHITE IS STILL POPULAR

Black and white fashions were by far the most striking and predominant in the recent fall fashion show of American designers.

For street, afternoon and evening wear the dashing, crisp contrast of black and white outshone even the luscious new wine tones that have the town on its ear.

Tailored street frocks of the new lightweight woollens were almost unanimous in their choice of white accents. Sometimes the white was the form of the huge Buster Brown collar of chalky white angelskin silk, with matching flaring cuffs, sometimes reaching almost to the elbow.

Sometimes the white was applied in galyak trimming. A black broadcloth frock, severely simple was made into something to remember you by with the addition of a little vest of white galyak.

HIGH WAISTLINE

A high waistline which expresses the simplicity of the directoire silhouette gives this gown of white velvet, with hat to match, up-to-the-minute prestige. The trend to lifted waistlines minus belts is marked in the newer dresses. Another distinguishing touch is the wide ostrich bands on the sleeves. Quantities of ostrich will be used this fall and winter in a trimming way. All signs point to this, and there is a wide use of ostrich bands and novelties in the millinery realm.

Fur Trimming Is Widely Used on New Fall Suits

Fur trimmings are much in evidence. They are used in new ways, not only on fall coats and suits, but on dresses as well.

Strips of black astrakhan are intrusted into wool frocks in the little stripes and squares that were formerly made of satin. Many a collar on a white silk blouse turns out to be made of shaved lamb or breit-schwanz.

There is probably more of a variety of furs used on clothes this year than ever before, but there is no blatant parade of heavy fox bands and voluminous collars. A few elaborate evening wraps show silver fox trimmings; there are some few fur necklaces of fox skins, but in general, the use of fur in any individual garment inclines to be sparse.

Redfern shows some good practical coats of gray tweeds trimmed with collars of gray astrakhan and lings them with white and gray squirrel.

Taffeta Is Planning a Comeback for Fall

Taffeta promises to stage a style "come back" this fall.

The heavy stiff silks which played a prominent role in grandmother's wardrobe are already being used for evening frocks and occasional afternoon dresses.

Buttons in Colors

Buttons are doing their share to brighten the new wardrobe. All-black dresses show buttons of bright red or green and white dresses step out of the all-white category when they are adorned with blue or green or red buttons.

Recalling "The Most Daring Act of the Age"

Commander Stephen Decatur

The Barbary Coast

Commodore Edward Preble

Blowing up of the U.S.S. Philadelphia

Decatur Home in Washington D.C.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IT WAS Admiral Nelson, the great British sailor, who, when he heard of Lieutenant Stephen Decatur's brilliant exploit of entering the harbor of Tripoli and destroying the U. S. S. Philadelphia right under the noses of the Barbary pirates, called it "the most daring act of the age."

And now it is another distinguished foreigner who is proposing to pay a tribute of another kind to the desperate valor of a young American naval captain more than a century after he had thrilled the hearts of his fellow-countrymen with his daring.

For Premier Benito Mussolini, dictator of Italy, has conceived an ambitious project of "putting the old Barbary coast on the map" again and making it easy for American tourists to visit the spot where took place one of the most glorious deeds in American naval history. Not only will he make it easy for them to visit the place but it is said that he is planning special inducements to attract them there.

During several visits to Tripoli Mussolini was particularly impressed by the historical attraction the place held for the American people, especially as it has always been more or less closed to them. For there still survive there many relics of America's almost forgotten war with the Barbary pirates at the opening of the Nineteenth century. The hull of the Philadelphia lies in 25 feet of water, less than 400 feet from the end of the mole, to where it drifted before exploding, and when the sea is clear one can row out and see the timbers. Divers report that the hull is mostly intact and well preserved and it is said that Mussolini even intends to raise the vessel eventually for exhibition purposes.

To take advantage of this American historic appeal, Premier Mussolini is going to cut a broad tourist trail straight across Italy, Sicily and the Mediterranean to Tripoli. He will have special train services, special sailings and then luxurious hotels in Tripoli to lodge the visitors. The hotels are being built now. It was partly for this new attraction that the Italian government is financing several fine new liners, which will sail directly for the Mediterranean and stop at Tripoli as well as Naples. The liners carrying winter cruises will be invited to stop there.

The situation which brought about Decatur's chance for glory was this: For centuries the Barbary pirates had preyed upon the commerce of all nations. Finally it became Europe's custom, and also that of America, to make presents of goods and money to the fierce rovers of northern Africa, and when those gifts were not promptly forthcoming the swift galleys of the corsairs ranged the buccaneering calendar. The cruelty of these rovers was unbounded, their arrogance unmitigated, their demands insatiable.

America, its colonies established as a free and independent nation following the Revolution, its maritime troubles with its erstwhile ally, France, settled, now turned its attention to the vexatious and dangerous problem of the Barbary corsairs. The war really opened in 1801 but it was not until 1803 that the third squadron sent out by the United States gathered at Gibraltar under the command of Commodore Edward Preble, one of whose lieutenants was Stephen Decatur, the son of another of the same name who had commanded an American privateer during the Revolution.

After several bloodless encounters, Preble assigned two American vessels, the famous Philadelphia and the Vixen, to the task of blockading Tripoli. This was exceedingly difficult because the coast was a high, dangerous one, full of reefs, shoals and strong, unknown currents, as well as being harassed by strong winds. The difficulty of the situation became acute when the Vixen made off toward the east in search of a Tripolitan cruiser and the Philadelphia, a deep-draught frigate, fell heir to the duties of in-shore chasing.

During the course of this duty the Philadelphia ran on a reef. Immediately the Tripolitans swarmed about the ship and her commander, Capt. Richard Bainbridge, was forced to surrender. Bainbridge tried to sink the ship to prevent her falling in the enemy's hands, but failed. He and his men were thrown in a dungeon in Tripoli and within a week the pirates had the Philadelphia refitted and ready for action against the Americans.

Commodore Preble, hearing of the catastrophe, determined upon a vigorous course of action and making good a promise given Decatur, indicated that the latter was to head the perilous expedition he had projected. Preble first had thought that re-capture of the Philadelphia would be possible, but upon mature consideration resolved that her destruction was the only course. Plans were carefully worked out, and finally Decatur received these instructions from his commander:

"It is my order that you proceed to Tripoli in company with Lieutenant Stewart, enter that harbor in the night, board the Philadelphia, burn her and make good your retreat with the Intrepid, if possible, unless you can make her the means of destroying the enemy's vessels in the harbor, by converting her into a fire-ship for that purpose, and retreating in your boats and those of the Siren. You must take fixed ammunition and apparatus for the frigate's 15-pounders, and if you can, without risking too much, you may endeavor to make them the instruments of destruction to the shipping and bashaw's castle.

"You will provide all the necessary combustibles for burning and destroying ships. The destruction of the Philadelphia is an object of great importance, and I rely with confidence on your interperity and enterprise to effect it. Lieutenant Stewart will support you with the boats of the Siren and cover your retreat with that vessel. Be sure and set fire in the gunroom, berths, cockpit, storerooms forward and berths on the berth deck. After the ship is well on fire, point two of the 15 pounders, shotted, down the main hatch and blow her bottom out."

The expedition, consisting of the Siren and the Intrepid, set forth, loaded with combustibles and anxious but eager men. Arriving before Tripoli just as bad weather was setting in, Decatur sent out a boat with the pilot and Midshipman Morris to reconnoiter. Their report was unfavorable, and the decision was against going in. The wind, getting constantly worse, blew a gale and drove the adventurers to the eastward. Recalling that the boats were small, and that they were overloaded with men and combustibles, one can sympathize with Morris in his account of the situation of the Intrepid's crew. He says:

"The commander, three lieutenants and the surgeon occupied the very small cabin. Six midshipmen and the pilot had a platform laid out on the water casks, whose surface they covered when they lay down for sleep, and at so small a distance below the deck that their heads would reach it when seated on the platform. The marines had corresponding accommodations on the opposite side, and the sailors had only the surface of the casks in the hold. To these inconveniences were added the want of any room on the deck for exercise and the attacks of innumerable vermin which our predecessors, the slaves, had left behind them. The provisions proved to be decayed and offensive."

Finally, however, the little fleet again stood before Tripoli, and this time the grim drama was not to be interrupted. With approximately 84 men aboard, the Intrepid, commanded by Stephen Decatur, drifted into the harbor, a pale, beautiful young moon overhead lighting her way. The harbor and town were still; no sound was to be heard but the gentle lapping of the waves as the Intrepid moved quietly to her destination.

Her quarry—the Philadelphia—stood before, a handsome ship, her 40 guns all loaded and double-shotted and well manned. This was the enemy which the little ketch of 60 tons and four small guns faced—and in addition there were the guns of the Pasha's castle as well as other batteries. Furthermore, there were floating defenses close by consisting of two or three cruisers and some galleys.

It was a tense moment and had suspicion been directed against the Intrepid "she would have been blown out of the water and not a man could have escaped." All the men on the ketch were kept concealed except a few in native dress and, owing to the smooth Tripolitaness of the Sicilian pilot, no suspicion was excited aboard the Philadelphia. The watch hailed, and the pilot of the Intrepid replied that she had lost anchors in the gale and would like to make fast to the Philadelphia for the night. This was agreed to, but after the ketch was warped alongside the Philadelphia's crew scented danger and there came the cry: "Americano! Americanos!"

In another moment the Intrepid had swung broadside on and quickly passed lashings held the two ships locked in deadly embrace. Then Decatur's cry of "Board!" rang out and with a quick rush and the discharge of only a single gun the decks were gained.

The surprise was as perfect as the assault was rapid and the Tripolitan crew, panic-stricken, huddled like rats at bay awaiting the final dash. Decatur had early gathered his men aft, stood a moment for them to gain sight of the enemy, and then, with the watchword "Philadelphia" rushed upon the rovers. No defense was made, for, swarming to leeward, they tumbled overboard; over the bows, through gun ports, by aid of trailing billiards and stranded rigging, out of the channels, pell-mell by every loophole they went—and then, such as could, swam like water rats for the friendly shelter of the neighboring war galleys.

One by one the decks were cleared. Ten minutes after the boarding party swung over the rails Decatur was in full possession of the ship. Events then moved with lightning rapidity. Parties, especially assigned of course, darted here, there and elsewhere, setting fire to vulnerable points. Then, with the ship already a blazing mass which lighted the entire harbor and sent terror to the hearts of the native onlookers, the brave little crew of Americans made for the Intrepid. Then came the struggle to escape, with the town awakened, the Tripolitan batteries coming into action, and the tiny ketch the object of every missile.

Through a veritable hell of gunfire the Intrepid made its way safely out of the harbor and as they did so a mighty explosion shook the earth and sea and a column of flames shot to the sky—the Philadelphia had blown up. The impossible had been accomplished—and not a single one of Decatur's men had been killed!

Shortly after the epic fring of the Philadelphia, Preble recommended to the secretary of the navy that Decatur be promoted. This recommendation was promptly carried out, and the secretary addressed a letter to Stephen Decatur, Esq., captain in the navy of the United States. Decatur was just twenty-five years old, the youngest captain ever appointed in the United States navy.

Porto Rico Devastated by a Hurricane—Gandhi's Fast Ends in Victory—De Valera Tells League of Nations What Ails It.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONCE again the "storm of San Eusebio" came out of the southern Atlantic ocean on the feast day of that saint and swept across Porto Rico as it did in 1928, leaving a terrible trail of death and destruction. For hours the hurricane raged, tearing down buildings, ruining the coffee and fruit crops and killing and maiming the people of the unhappy island. Gov. James R. Beverley thought the dead would number well over two hundred and the injured more than a thousand. The property damage has not been estimated but it certainly will run into many millions of dollars. Broken communication lines and roads blocked by debris made the gathering of accurate information slow. Before reaching Porto Rico the storm struck the Virgin islands, killing 15 persons, sinking many vessels and wrecking buildings. Later it hit Haiti and Santo Domingo.

Most of the fatalities in Porto Rico were in the country districts, for the authorities of San Juan, forewarned, placed many hundreds of the residents in the solidly built schools and churches. The property losses in the city, however, were heavy, especially on the ocean front. Governor Beverley was prompt in starting relief machinery. He formed an emergency committee and placed ample insular funds in its hands. By his order the police impressed into service prisoners in all the jails, letting them work without guards at clearing the roads and streets and reopening communication facilities. The governor of course reported the conditions immediately to Washington and the Red Cross ordered its chief supply officer to the island and sent a destroyer with medical supplies.

MAHATMA GANDHI'S "fast unto death" won a striking victory for the little old Hindu holy man, for the caste Hindus and the untouchables, hurrying to save his life, agreed upon a compromise electoral plan that was fairly satisfactory to Gandhi. It was hastily accepted by Prime Minister MacDonald and the British cabinet, and thereupon the mahatma broke his fast with a few sips of a lime concoction. For more than six days he had partaken of nothing but water with salt or soda in it, and the physicians at Yeravda jail said he could not have survived much longer.

The compromise plan provides that 148 seats in provincial legislatures be held by the depressed classes and that a percentage of seats in the central legislature be reserved for them. It also provides a system of primary elections. These special features are to end after ten years. In accepting this plan, the British government pointed out that some details still remained under consideration. The official statement said this did not imply opposition by the government. Gandhi, though born a caste Hindu, has been making his fight for the depressed classes, and it is possible that his victory may lead to revolutionary changes in their treatment. However, some authorities declare that the gulf between the four castes and the untouchables is of too many generations' standing to be wiped out in a day or two, even by the ukase of religious leaders.

WHEN the League of Nations assembly opened its thirteenth annual session in Geneva, Eamon de Valera, President of the Irish Free State, was in the chair as president of the league council, and he took the opportunity to tell what he thought of the league and its failures. He spoke without restraint, telling his gloomy hearers that the league had lost the world's confidence because it had not boldly tackled the major problems that came before it, notably the situation in the Far East and the question of disarmament.

"People are complaining that the league is devoting its activity to matters of secondly interest while vital international problems of the day are being shelved or ignored," he continued. "People are saying that equality of states does not apply here in things that matter. People are becoming impatient at the apparently meager face-saving results of successive league conferences and meetings. They are inquiring whether these conferences justify the burden of contributions to the league's budget. Finally there is the suspicion that little more than lip service is paid to the fundamental principles on which the league was founded."

There is a suspicion that action by the league in the economic sphere is paralyzed by pressure of powerful national interests and that if a band is raised against the covenant sufficiently strong it can smite with impunity.

This last obvious allusion to Japanese controlled Manchuria was followed by a warning that the only way to silence criticism of the league is "to show unmistakably that the covenant is a solemn pact of obligations which no state will find it possible to ignore."

Disarmament, he also declared, was a flop and a bluff. The Lausanne conference on reparations, he admitted, was a mild success, but he made it clear it was not the fault of the league. Nicholas Politis of Greece was elected as the president of the assembly. What that body would find to do was uncertain. The reception and discussion of the league's commission on Manchuria already had been postponed for at least two weeks at the behest of Japan, and the statesmen were not agreed even upon the establishment of disarmament, financial and economic commissions. To make matters worse, the steadfast refusal of Germany to take part in the sessions of the disarmament conference effectually stopped up that august international body for the time being. The steering committee in a quarrelsome secret meeting considered the demand of Arthur Henderson for immediate convocation of the general conference and then announced it had adjourned until October 10.

To make matters worse, the steadfast refusal of Germany to take part in the sessions of the disarmament conference effectually stopped up that august international body for the time being. The steering committee in a quarrelsome secret meeting considered the demand of Arthur Henderson for immediate convocation of the general conference and then announced it had adjourned until October 10.

DEMOCRATS now are in control of the United States senate, outnumbering the Republicans by one. This comes about through the appointment of Walter Walker by Gov. William H. Adams of Colorado to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Charles W. Waterman. So the upper house now has 48 Democrats, 47 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite. There was uncertainty as to whether the new man would serve in the lame duck session of congress or only until a successor to Waterman is elected November 8.

BOTH the Republicans and the Democrats professed to have high hopes of carrying Iowa in the Presidential election, but their claims are unsettled by the announcement of Senator Smith W. Brookhart that he will be in the race for the senate as the nominee of the "progressive" party, expecting to draw support from both the major parties. His decision came three months after his defeat in the Republican primary by Henry Field. He admittedly has a large following among the Iowa Republicans, especially in the rural districts. The Democrats had expected that Brookhart would follow the example of his brother progressive Republican, Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, and come out flatly for Franklin D. Roosevelt for President.

JOUETT SHOUSE, former executive chairman of the Democratic national committee, gave the California Democrats a shock by the announcement that Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, of which he is president, would support Tallant Tubbs, Republican nominee for senator from that state, rather than William G. McAadoo, the Democratic choice. Shouse said that McAadoo had not made his position clear on the prohibition question. He stated also that the association feared the cause of prohibition repeal might be retarded or embarrassed by the election of McAadoo. It therefore urged, he said, that California advocates of prohibition repeal vote for Tubbs.

FOES of President Machado of Cuba reopened their campaign of assassination, their victim being Dr. Clemente Bello, president of the senate, leader of the Liberal party and the man slated to succeed Machado as the head of the government. Seven men in an automobile fired five volleys from a machine gun at Bello as he was leaving his home, and he was struck and killed by eleven bullets. His chauffeur also was mortally wounded. Within a few hours alleged government agents had retailed by slaying three prominent oppositionists, Dr. Ricardo Arango, and Representative Gonzalo de Andrade and his two brothers. A fourth leader of the Conservatives, Dr. Miguel Aguilar, was fatally wounded.

NOTABLE among the deaths of the week was that of John Sharp Williams, former senator from Mississippi. He was seventy-eight years old and had been ill for months. Williams was known for his scholarship and his bitingly sarcastic political oratory.

PRESIDENT HOOVER appointed Representative Charles R. Crisp of Georgia as a member of the tariff commission to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Lincoln Dixon of Indiana. Crisp was defeated for the senatorship nomination in the Democratic primary and so is classed as a lame duck. However, his appointment will not be criticized because of his long and able services in the house.

HOW to arrange the financing by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of the sale of 15,000,000 or more bushels of northwestern wheat to China has been taking the attention of President Hoover and the interested federal agencies. Negotiations have been opened with China and though the final arrangements had not been made, it was said in Shanghai that the deal was practically assured. It involves about $9,000,000 in gold.

The grain involved in the proposal would come from producers of the Northwest on whom shipping costs have borne heavily. The relief act authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans for financing foreign sales of surplus agricultural products where they "cannot be financed in the normal course of commerce" and where they will not "affect adversely the world markets for such products."

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S famous trowel is being put to use quite often these days. The latest occasion was the laying of the cornerstone of the new $10,000,000 post office building on Pennsylvania avenue. With Mrs. Hoover an interested spectator and hundreds of others gathered about, Mr. Hoover wielded the tool that the Father of his Country used in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol in 1793. He slapped on the mortar and the stone was swung into place, a real mason tested the block with his level and pronounced it truly laid. Postmaster General Brown told the crowd that the day was the one hundred and forty-third anniversary of the founding of the postal service. Senator Smoot spoke briefly, and the President then delivered an address dwelling on the function of the postal service in the making of the nation.

FIVE eminent citizens have agreed to act as a commission which will "survey the transportation situation in this country" and report such recommendations for relief and betterment as may appear wise to them. The commission is sponsored by the National Association of Mutual Banks, and the announcement of its creation was made by Walter Bennett, New York banker, on behalf of the association. Calvin Coolidge, former President, is chairman of the commission; and the other members are Bernard M. Baruch, financier and railway director; Alfred E. Smith, former governor of New York; Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, and Alexander Legge, president of the International Harvester company and former chairman of the farm board.

The commission is the result of mobilization of virtually every bank, insurance company, and major business association in the country for a concerted effort to convince congress of the imperative necessity of immediate legislation to protect the financial foundations of the railroad industry. Its survey will include all the transportation facilities of the nation, including buses, trucks, pipe lines and other carriers, as well as the railways.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Railway Labor Executives' association called on President Hoover, asking administration intervention in the matter of the proposed railway wage reductions which they opposed "at a time when there are some hopeful signs that the depression may have run its course." Mr. Hoover also talked with railway presidents and Secretary of Labor Donak, and the latter then issued a statement that the President felt it was desirable that the question should be deferred until the end of the year, since the present wage agreement does not expire until February 1.

GREAT BRITAIN'S national government, formed last October to meet the financial crisis, experienced its first break when three of the most important Liberal and Labor members of MacDonald's cabinet resigned. Their action followed a disagreement over the tariff proposals approved at the recent empire conference in Ottawa. The ministers who quit, stating these proposals were incompatible with their free trade principles, were Viscount Snowden of Ickornshaw, lord privy seal, former leader of the Labor party, and Sir Herbert Samuel, home secretary, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, secretary for Scotland.

Sir John Gilmour was moved from minister of agriculture to home secretary and his former portfolio was given to Maj. Walter Elliot. Sir Godfrey Collins took Sinclair's place. The Simon Liberals in the house still support MacDonald.

NOTABLE among the deaths of the week was that of John Sharp Williams, former senator from Mississippi. He was seventy-eight years old and had been ill for months. Williams was known for his scholarship and his bitingly sarcastic political oratory.

ALL THINGS TO ALL MEN

Franklin D. Roosevelt is just completing a swing around the West. It is doubtful if the general public has very carefully read his speeches. On the whole they did not deal with the real problems concerning the country today.

In one part of California, San Francisco, where the Smith adherents are strong, Mr. Smith was praised as a great Governor and a great Democrat. On the next evening when Mr. Roosevelt was in a McAdoo section of the State, no mention of Smith was made but praise for McAdoo who was credited with arousing intolerance in the 1924 convention in order to head off Smith.

When visiting the Western silver centers, which are hard hit because of the lack of demand and low price of silver, he attacked the administration and told his hearers that the first thing he would do would be to take up the question of increasing the price of silver. When he reached Seattle, where the trade with the Orient has fallen off tremendously, he promised to take up at once on becoming President the question of furthering the American trade with the Orient.

When he reached Chicago, where there is a large Negro and foreign population, he told the Negroes and the foreign element how much in sympathy he was with them and what he was going to do for them.

In other parts of the West among the farmers he attacked "Wall Street" and told how important it was to protect depositors in banking institutions. He did not tell them that he had been Governor of New York for almost four years, which State has full control over the operations of the New York Stock Exchange and had not lifted a finger to do anything.

Of course, the people on the West Coast and in the silver country are not the only ones that have lack of trade and even little demand for their goods. That is so all over the world because of general world conditions and Mr. Roosevelt is not quite so ignorant as to believe he or anyone else is going to change that condition over night.

The only thing he touched on that was constructive in regard to the railroads in one of his speeches is part and parcel of the present program of the present administration in Washington, no little of which has already been put into effect.

It must be said in all fairness, too, with a world condition which these generations have never seen before, heroic efforts have been made in Washington in the past year to stem the tide. Unquestionably despair was beginning to appear in many quarters. Despair now has been replaced in no few of them by hope.

It seems hardly possible, even in these upset conditions when many people are disturbed of mind, that they would think that Roosevelt, who is for anything and everything, all things to all men, is really the man for the job.

It must be remembered in New York State under his rule, during the depression when the costs should have been dropping, they were mounting. We cannot escape the fact, too, that there is a tremendous amount of unemployment in the State of New York and that Governor Roosevelt has not contributed anything in the way of helpfulness to that situation.

On his record there is nothing especially to recommend him. He has a pleasant smile, a nice personality, and a good social background. On his trip West, Roosevelt has lived up to his reputation as that of a promisor. His record in New York State shows he is no real performer.

On his trip West, Roosevelt has lived up to his reputation as that of a promisor. His record in New York State shows he is no real performer. The grave questions the people of this country will have to decide soon will be whether they want for President a man who is simply a critic, a promisor, without a record of constructive performance handling the most difficult job in the world today—President of the United States.

DANGEROUS

The intersection of the country road coming from Carteret with the road running in front of the Rahway Reformatory is a dangerous one. This is due in part to the fact that a great deal of traffic is diverted from Route No. 25, over the bridge through Woodbridge to the shore.

Most of these transient drivers appear to be unaware that Hazelwood Ave., the road coming from the Carteret direction exists at all. It appears in coming from the direction of the Rahway Reformatory the view of this road is shut off. No light at night hangs at the intersection to suggest caution.

The result is that hardly a week goes by that there is not an accident at that intersection. Those coming from the shore route to make No. 25 in no few cases pass the intersection at 40 miles an hour.

Last week there were three accidents at the intersection. In one of these cases a car was over-turned three times and landed on the edge of the Rahway River.

In view of the fact that the drivers, to and from the shore using the Rahway bridge at about that point appear to be unaware of the road coming from Carteret, it behooves us if we value our lives at all to use the utmost caution at that point.

Perhaps we, too, are a bit to blame in that there is a tendency along the uninhabited stretch of Hazelwood Avenue to step on it a bit.

MOTHER TEACHERS PLAN HOME SUPPER

Plans for the annual harvest home supper to be held on Thursday evening, October 20, under the joint auspices of the Mission Band and the Mother Teacher Association of the Presbyterian Church, were made Monday night at a meeting of the Mother-Teacher Association. The supper will be held in the Sunday School room, from 5:00 P. M., until 8:00 o'clock. The committee includes: General chairman, Mrs. H. W. Thorn. Mrs. Harry Baker will be in charge of tickets. The committee on tables and decorations includes Mrs. Roscoe Levi, Mrs. Harry Baker, Mrs. John Eudie. The kitchen committee includes: Mrs. William Elliott, Mrs. George Paterson, Mrs. James Baird, Mrs. Charles Bryer, Mrs. Sager Bonnell, Mrs. Joseph Gawronski, Mrs. Estelle Jamison, Mrs. Thomas Way, Mrs. Matthew Sloan and Mrs. Daniel Reason. The members voted to assist the borough relief work by sewing on the cotton goods that has been obtained from the American Red Cross for clothing for children. The annual Sunday school party under the auspices of the association will be held on Monday evening, October 31, in the Sunday school room it was decided Monday night. Mrs. Sager Bonnell was appointed chairman of the committee in charge of arrangement. Mrs. Harry Yetman will be in charge of candy. Other members of the committee are: Mrs. Robert Wilson, Mrs. Charles Bryer, Mrs. James Baird, Mrs. Thomas Way, Mrs. George Paterson, Mrs. Walter King and Mrs. William Elliott. The next meeting of the association will be on the night of the first Monday in November. Refreshments will be furnished by a committee including Mrs. Louis Dunster, Mrs. John Eudie and Mrs. Charles Hite. After the business meeting there was a social hour and refreshments were served.

Entertainment to Enliven Next Meeting

The next social meeting of Court Carteret, No. 43, Foresters of America, will be held at the German Lutheran hall, instead of Odd Fellows' Hall, on Tuesday, October 11, at 9 P. M.

Joe Harko and his entertainers will furnish the music for dancing and also provide several entertainment features.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOTES

By the Pastor

Continuing the series of services on the general theme of Prayer and Penitence, the pastor will speak on "Confession" at the morning service on Sunday. The subject for the Juniors will be "The Heart, the Center of Life." The subject for the evening service will be "The Sovereignty of God."

The Church Night will be held on Tuesday evening of next week. In order to give every one an opportunity to attend some of these special midweek services they will be held one week on Wednesday evening and the following week on Tuesday evening. "Prayer" will be the theme for consideration on Tuesday evening.

On Friday evening the Middlesex County Christian Endeavor will hold an executive meeting in the Baptist church of New Brunswick. The local society will be represented at this meeting by Bruce Farr, president, Evelyn Beech, Dorothy Byrne, and the pastor who is one of three ministers of the county who act as advisors to the County Union.

On Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock the 46th Annual State Convention of the Christian Endeavor will open at the Second Reformed Church of Somerville. A number from the local societies are planning to attend. Some will go early during the convention and others for the Saturday sessions. Among those who will go early are the Misses Dorothy Byrne and Evelyn Beech, Grace and Jean Mott and Marian Atcheson and Rev. and Mrs. D. E. Lorenz and daughter, Emma. For those who go on Saturday it is expected to arrange for transportation by bus with a small charge to each one. On Saturday afternoon the Annual Intermediate Oratorical Contest will take place with Earl Way of the local church representing the Eastern district.

WOMAN'S CLUB ACTIVITIES

By Isabel Lefkowitz

"You go to your church And I'll go to mine, But let's walk along together."

Could there possibly be a better motto for our Woman's Club? The club during its five years of growth has proved itself a tried meeting ground where neither personal religion, politics nor money enter. It is the woman herself who counts,—her personality, her character, her ability. Here, too, friendships have been formed and acquaintances have been made that I am sure would never have been possible were it not for the Woman's Club. Then, Her's to our club, Bless its endeavor, May it prosper and flourish, Enduring forever.

Next Thursday afternoon, October 13th, we'll be "walking along together" to the club's opening luncheon to be held at one o'clock in the Presbyterian Church on Emerson street. The Board of Directors met Monday evening at the home of the president, Mrs. T. J. Nevill, to perfect plans for the affair of which Mrs. Louis Ruderman is chairman. Directors will be calling up members on their lists to notify them of the arrangements made.

The club congratulates Mrs. Max Brown on the birth of a son.

The club's employment bureau is still doing business through its chairman, Mrs. Joseph Weisman, whose telephone number is Carteret 8-0605. She has domestic and factory positions on her list.

The club regrets the removal of its member, Mrs. Weiner, from town.

Mrs. T. J. Nevill, president, attended the opening meeting of the Perth Amboy Woman's Club on Monday.

Give Handsome Prizes at St. Jos. Card Party

MAC'S MEN TUNE UP FOR EMERSON TILT

Local Squad Shapes Up Well With Rookies.

Coach Frank McCarthy's 1932 gridiron edition, tuning up for its second successive home game of the still infant season, encountered St. Mary's of South Amboy in a practice tilt Wednesday as a means of polishing off some of the rough spots evidenced in the inaugural game here last Saturday against Freehold. The Blue and White got off to an auspicious start, however, bowling over the South Jersey eleven to the tune of 24-7.

If anything, the decisive victory was something of a surprise and indicates once more that McCarthy has moulded together a more than formidable eleven, despite the loss of several of last year's stars by graduation.

This is not the first time the amiable McCarthy has been compelled to build an almost entirely new team and probably not the last.

He suffers the loss of stars year after year but he goes on just the same turning out successful elevens. The same thing happened this season. Carteret's grid faithful were more or less concerned over the prospects of a good club but the inaugural game with Freehold dispelled any doubt as to the strength of the current eleven.

As long as he has men with whom to work, regardless of their experience, McCarthy appears perfectly satisfied.

He often wishes, though, that old dame fortune will provide him with a Joe Medwick every now and then. On Saturday the Blue and White will tackle Emerson High, of Union City, at the local gridiron.

Engagement Announced

At a delightful party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jervis Nevill, of Roosevelt avenue, on Sunday night, the engagement of Mrs. Nevill's sister, Miss Mabel Mellon, of Hillside, to Harry Gordon, of the same place, was announced.

The Nevill home was decorated in autumn foliage and fresh cut flowers. Music and a supper at midnight featured the event. The guests were:

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Nevill, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Nevill, Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey Feehan, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Dunne, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lewer, and daughter, Alice, Kathryn Dunne, Zita Mellon, all of this borough; Mrs. Gordon and sons, John, Frank, Harry, James and Robert, Mrs. E. A. Mellon, Harold Ransteller, Muriel McLeo, of Hillside; Julia and Margaret Sullivan, of Elizabeth and Louise Landenberger, of Rahway.

Mrs. John Reilly, Miss Ann Reilly and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Paulin, spent the week-end at Ossining, N. Y.

Star Landing Post, V. F. W. Nominates

Star Landing Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, at its meeting held Friday night nominated the following officers: William Bishop, commander; Stanley Pelszyk, senior vice commander; Frank Mlub, junior vice commander; August Freeman, quartermaster; Charles Thorn, adjutant; A. J. Connolly, chaplain; Henry Staubach and Charles Thorn, delegates to the county council; William Ensminger and Andrew Sivon, alternates.

The Foreign-American Independent Citizens' Club will hold a dance on Saturday evening, October 22, in the German Lutheran Hall, Roosevelt avenue. On the committee is John Haas, John Yuska, Stephen Uhyrn, John Daluski and Harry Czar.

Bernard Rosenbleth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Rosenbleth, of High street, entered the Temple Dental College, at Philadelphia. He was graduated from the local high school in 1930 and has been studying at Temple College since that time.

ELECTED SUPERINTENDENT

Miss Alice Barker was elected superintendent of St. Mark's church Sunday School at the initial fall meeting held Sunday. Harold Cromwell is treasurer and Miss Alma Colgan, secretary.

The following teachers were appointed: Dorothy Guyon, Dorothy Dairymple, Dorothy Vonah, Kathryn Scally, Harold Cromwell, Curtis Dunster, Lillian and Evelyn Graeme, and Helen Turk.

The junior choir of the church will hold practice every Sunday morning, following the Sunday school session.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel!

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If this note is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25¢ at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.

Co-Operation

Ant society is similar to human society in that individuals co-operate for the good of the group; individual specialization of function with resultant division of labor makes for greater efficiency in the capture of energy, protection against enemies, and reproduction; and the social co-operative mechanisms are capable of extension to include animals belonging to other species which thus become incorporated into the society.

Giant Concrete Link in the Lincoln Highway

STRETCHING 1,510 feet across the historic Turtle Creek valley just east of Pittsburgh, the giant George Westinghouse bridge forms one of the most picturesque links in the Lincoln highway, in addition to containing the longest reinforced concrete arch in the United States. This arch, (the middle one) is 425 feet long and clears the railroad tracks by 200 feet. The bridge, which has just been dedicated and opened to traffic, is a part of a five-mile improvement costing $4,000,000.

THE BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE QUACKS GROW UNEASY

PETER RABBIT doesn't like the very hot weather of midsummer any more than you or I do. He cannot go to the seashore or the mountains as we can, and just think, he has to wear a fur coat all the time; Of course in this respect Peter is not worse off than a lot of his neighbors. In fact none of them likes the very hot weather. So with the coming of the first cool days in September new life seemed to fill Peter. He loves the fall. Next to the spring he likes the fall best. But for two things he thinks he might even like it the best of all the year. Those two things are the parting with old friends who are leaving for the far-away sunny Southland, or who are preparing to sleep all winter, and the fact that the fall brings the dreadful hunting season when men with terrible guns delight in spreading terror and suffering over the Green Meadows, through the Green Forest, along the Laughing Brook, around the Smiling Pool, up in the Old Pasture and even deep in the Great Woods.

"What Are You So Glad About?" Demanded Mr. Quack.

The fall is a busy time for Peter. You see there are so many friends to say good-by to that he is afraid that some will slip away before he sees them. The first of the cool days had already come and Peter knew by things he saw that it would not be long before many of his feathered friends started on their long journey. Everywhere he saw them in flocks now instead of in pairs, as he saw them in the spring. They were making up parties for the long journey, for they prefer to travel in this way. It is quite necessary, because you know there are so many young birds for whom this will be the first time to make the long journey, and they must be shown the way by the older birds. Then it always is much pleasanter to travel with company.

A great party of blackbirds flying over the Old Brier Patch reminded Peter that it was quite likely that certain other friends would soon be starting, among others, the Quack family, who had spent this summer in the pond of Paddy the Beaver. So the first chance he got Peter hurried over to Paddy's Pond deep in the Green Forest. He was half afraid that they might have left already, and he half hoped that they might decide to stay all winter. When he got there he found Mr. and Mrs. Quack and the ten young Quacks, now as big as their father and mother, still there.

"Oh, I'm so glad!" cried Peter.

"What are you so glad about?" demanded Mr. Quack, swimming in close to where Peter was sitting on the bank.

"That you are still here," replied Peter. "I was afraid you might have gone away. Are you going to take that terrible journey again this year, Mr. Quack?"

"Certainly," replied Mr. Quack. "What else can I do?"

"Why, stay here all winter the same as I do," replied Peter.

"And what would we do when all the water has turned to ice, stupid?" demanded Mr. Quack.

Peter looked foolish. "I hadn't thought of that," said he. "Of course you have to go where the water doesn't freeze. Just the same I think it is dreadful that you have to take that terrible journey."

"It wouldn't be so bad if it were not for the hunters with terrible guns," replied Mr. Quack. "We don't mind the journey; it is the terrible guns. Have you seen any hunters near the Old Brier Patch yet?" Mr. Quack asked this anxiously.

"No," replied Peter.

"This cool weather is sure to bring them out," replied Mr. Quack uneasily. "I almost wish we had started earlier, but we have been so happy here this summer that I cannot bear to leave until we have to. What's that?" Mr. Quack started nervously and stretched his head up to listen. All the other ducks did the same thing. It was only the snapping of a twig under Buster Bear's feet, and in a moment he appeared.

At once the ducks dropped their

THREE DESSERTS

THERE comes a time to all housewives when it is impossible to think of anything for dessert which fits the meal she is preparing. Keep a card index of desserts and pick out one that has not recently been used, for we all like variety even in desserts. It is not always the things that sound the best which turn out that way. After preparing food for some time one's judgment should be a good guide, after reading a recipe, as to its palatability; however, some times the strangest concoctions turn out well—so don't be afraid to try a new recipe.

A New Apple Cake.

Take one cupful of flour, a bit of salt, three tablespoonfuls of shortening, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-third of a cupful of milk, two and one-half cupfuls of apple sauce, juice of half a lemon, two egg yolks and one cupful of whipped cream. Rub the shortening into the dry ingredients, using butter, as it gives a better flavor, although any sweet shortening will be good. Pat out and line a pie plate. Mix apple sauce, lemon, egg yolks and bake until the crust is brown and filling firm. Cover with whipped cream or the whites of the eggs may be used as a meringue.

Simple Charlotte.

For this use the little nut cups about an inch high and two inches in diameter. Split lady fingers and line the cups, letting the cake come up an inch above the tops. Fill the cups with lightly sweetened whipped cream and top with a tiny macaroon or a cherry. One may use any color scheme for this light dessert.

Boston Cream Pie.

Beat the yolks of six eggs until creamy, add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and add one cupful of sugar very slowly, beating well, then add two teaspoonfuls of grated lemon peel, three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and one cupful of flour folded after the beaten egg whites have been added. Sift the flour several times to make it very light. The layers will be very thin. Now to one cupful of whipped cream add three beaten egg whites. Sweeten and flavor and spread over the cake. Ice with a chocolate frosting.

heads and began swimming about again, for they did not fear Buster Bear. But it was very clear that they were uneasy, very uneasy, indeed, especially Mr. and Mrs. Quack. The young Quacks had had no experience with hunters, but they were uneasy, too. The truth is they were anxious to try their wings. They were looking forward to that long journey as something very wonderful. They were anxious to be on their way. Something inside was urging them to start for their beautiful Southland. It is often that way with the young. They did not fear because they did not know.

Dental Bird

The crocodile, when it feels the need of the services of a dental hygienist, climbs out on the bank of the river in which it makes its home, opens its huge mouth invitingly and waits.

In due time a bird known as the Nile-bird comes along, sees the job waiting for it and goes to work. It hops into the crocodile's mouth and picks off all the leeches and other foreign forms of life which may be clinging to the tongue and cavity walls of the crocodile, and then departs. The reptile then closes its mouth and with not so much as a thank you slides back into the water to accumulate another job for another Nile-bird.

WON IN THREE BABY SHOWS

Mother gives credit to Eagle Brand

Little Rose Marie Haggerty of Pueblo, Colo., at 1 year, 7 months.

"WE STARTED our baby on Eagle Brand at three months," writes Mrs. W. F. Haggerty, 1016 Carterette Ave., Pueblo, Colo., "and she is perfect now. She has won in three baby shows, and I think Eagle Brand ought to have the credit. She is 1 year, 8 months old now, and has never been sick, not even a cold—and I will send our family doctor's statement if you wish.

"The texture of her skin is just like velvet. I sure have praised Eagle Brand, for I think it has made her beautiful.

"The other day, I was visiting at the hospital and one of the men called a doctor to see her and he asked was she bottle fed and when I told him Eagle Brand, he said, 'Well, Eagle Brand ought to see her' so that is why I am sending the picture."

If your baby is not thriving on his present food we suggest that you and your doctor consider Eagle Brand. Send for free booklet. The new and complete edition of "Baby's Welfare" contains practical feeding information and suggestions for supplementary foods—orange juice, cereals, cod-liver oil, etc.—advised by doctors.

What Can You Do For The Pains Of Rheumatism?

Pain Ended In Few Minutes, This Way

It has now been discovered by thousands of rheumatic sufferers that the pains of that distressing disorder can be eased in as little as a few minutes... relief and comfort in almost as little time as it takes to tell!

Doctors advise two tablets of Bayer Aspirin taken with a full glass of water. Then a rest of a few minutes... and that is all. Pain is eased quickly—sometimes almost unbelievably.

TAKE 2 BAYER ASPIRIN TABLETS

DRINK ONE FULL GLASS OF WATER

Remember it is Genuine Bayer Aspirin which claims this quick-dissolving, quick-acting property. So be careful that you get the real article when you buy. See that any box or bottle you purchase is clearly marked "Genuine Bayer Aspirin." And that any tablet you take has the name "Bayer" stamped on it in the form of a cross. Then you will get quick relief.

Had a Poor Opinion of the "Bald" Eagle

Although the great naturalist, John James Audubon, expressed admiration for the American or white-headed eagle, also known as the bald eagle, because of its great strength, daring and cool courage, and its unequalled power of flight, he was of the opinion that its undesirable qualities were so many that the selection of this bird as our national emblem was an unhappy choice. In this he expressed agreement with Benjamin Franklin, as is indicated in the following, taken from Audubon's "An Account of the Habits of the birds of the United States of America."

those among men who live by sharpening and robbing, he is generally poor, and often very lousy. Besides, he is a rank coward; the little king bird, not bigger than a sparrow, attacks him boldly, and drives him out of the district."

Profitable Weeping

A number of married men were recently dining together at their club. The question was asked, "What trait in your wife do you consider the most expensive one?" The answers were as numerous as the men in the party. With one it was vanity, another religion, or charity, or love of dress. The last man to whom the question was put answered oracularly, "Her tears!"—Exchange.

Ways of the Kurds

Kurdistan is a province in Persia inhabited largely by Kurds, a race of wild and lawless people. Kurds also are found in Turkey and Russia, where they live in the mountainous regions and mix brigandage with their nomadic traits. There are approximately 800,000 Persian Kurds, 1,650,000 Turkish Kurds, and 50,000 Russian Kurds. Although the Kurds are a wild and somewhat primitive race, they take great pride in their ancestry, many families tracing their descent back to the Omayyad caliphs. Sinna, the capital of Kurdistan, is famous for its beautiful rugs, some of which bring handsome prices.

Denver Boy is a Winner

Every mother realizes how important it is to teach children good habits of conduct but many of them fail to realize the importance of teaching their children good bowel habits until the poisons from decaying waste held too long in the system have begun to affect the child's health.

Watch your child and at the first sign of constipation, give him a little California Fig Syrup. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it quickly drives away those distressing ailments, such as headaches, bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness, feverishness, fretfulness, etc. It gives them a hearty appetite, regulates their stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord. For over fifty years, leading physicians have prescribed it for half-sick, bilious, constipated children. More than 4 million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it.

Mrs. C. G. Wilcox, 3355 1/2 Wolf St., Denver, Colorado, says: "My son, Jackie, is a prize winner for health, now, but we had a lot of trouble with him before we found his trouble was constipation and began giving him California Fig Syrup. It fixed him up quick, gave him a good appetite, made him sleep fine and he's been gaining in weight right along since the first few days, taking it."

To avoid inferior imitations of California Fig Syrup, always look for the word "California" on the carton.

It pays to prevent fires in forests and woods. Foresters measured tree growth for 13 years on two plots of longleaf pine in North Carolina, one plot being burned over each year and the other being kept free from fire. Nurse—Your wife has been delirious all day, Mr. Jones. She does nothing but repeat your name and ask for money.
Mr. Jones—Hah! Delirious? She's not delirious!

Satire can be severe; but it need not slay.

Report of Woman's Club Conference

her husband, Mr. Ogden Reid, made this conference possible. Mrs. Reid, after a very pleasant greeting, said that this conference had been called together to "channel public opinion." She then introduced Mr. Owen D. Young, Chairman of the Young Committee for International Settlements, who opened the conference.

Mr. Young said that the machine which is such an important factor today is not a detriment, but a solution must be arrived at as to how a greater demand can be made for the machine's increased output.

Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, Consulting Engineer, spoke on "The Newer Efficiency." Mrs. Gilbreth claims the distinction of being the only woman who is an officer in the American Engineering Society. She was also a national delegate to the International Engineering Conference held in Europe. Mrs. Gilbreth said that efficiency means wide and sensible planning to the new and current thought; that one cannot think of the home as apart from business and industry; that the home is not only a place to come to from business but that it is the buying power of the world; that to plan efficiently, one must be physically adequate, one must have habits of health, must be emotionally controlled and socially adept. She said also that the mother is the consumer, guide and manager of the home; that planning is interesting and continuous and welcoming in all its changes as they come.

Dr. Douglas Thom, Director of the Habit Clinics of Boston, spoke on "The Child of the New Day." He said that in this day treatment of problem children rather than punishment is stressed; that we have a new child to deal with in these times; that the child's attitude towards customs and traditions has been modified; that there is more dissatisfaction with the old order of things; that most children do not want to be like their parents; that while parents are more concerned about security, youth is primarily concerned about experience; that one child is playing a greater part than ever in the interest of the world; that children will profit by doing things rather than seeing or hearing; that the new era should be concerned about the motivating force behind the conduct of the child.

Dr. Flora Rose, head of the College of Home Economics of Cornell University, spoke on "Maintaining the Standards of Living in the New Day." Mrs. Rose said that no one is profiting by this depression; that the world is losing; that the wealth of nations is deteriorating; that one of the things we need to keep in mind is to regard ourselves as thinking, moving and changing people; that the one thing to watch in this depression is the physical health of the people.

Mrs. Irita Van Doren, Editor, spoke on "Books." She said that leisure alone does not give peace, but leisure well spent brings with it a greater contentment. She mentioned several books as well worth reading during leisure hours, among them being: The Fountain; The Sheltered Life; Sons; Van Loon's Geography; D. H. Lawrence Letters; Mary Austin's Biography; Ann Vicker; and Ellen Terry's Memoirs.

Fannie Hurst, popular author, spoke on "The Submerged Race." She compared the people in this depression to a phrase taken from the music of Debussy, namely, "Cathedrals Under the Sea." She said that no matter which way these poor articulate people turn, like the "Cathedrals Under the Sea," there is no escape for them. She told a story to show the trend of the times. At a British regatta a couple of American millionaires were having some fun. They were tossing pennies into the water and the children were jumping in after them. When the pennies gave out they tossed nickels, when the nickels gave out they tossed dimes, then quarters, then half dollars, and finally when all the silver gave out, one of the millionaires with a magnificent gesture took out a twenty dollar gold piece. As he started to throw it someone in the rear cried "Stop, stop, don't throw that. The King might jump." She said that it is indeed a changing world when even kings and dictators are jumping.

Walter Damrosch, composer and orchestra director, spoke on "What You can do to help music." He urged everyone to encourage home talent by having it appear at local affairs and paying for it, and also to let the children take music lessons.

Huger Elliott, Director of Educational Work of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, spoke on "Appreciating American Art". He said that art should not be high brow but that it should be in some form which would be within the range of all.

Mrs. Robert G. Mead, head of the Girl Scouts in New York, said that Girl Scouting has its part to play in planning leisure. Efficient living, she said, is dependent upon morale which is just another name for contentment and satisfaction. Girls' lives, she said, are made or marred by the use of leisure time. Girl Scouting tends to help girls along these lines.

Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, President of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, gave greetings from the New York Federation.

Dr. James T. Shotwell, Co-Author of the Kellogg Pact, spoke on "New Dangers on the Horizon." He said that human relations rest not upon reason but upon "the historic projects of the times; that the world is one-tenth emotional and sentimental and one-tenth reason; that emotion and sentiment make politics; that the chief danger in the international world is the failure of highly civilized nations to educate the political institutions to the demands of the ever changing economic world; that there cannot be justice without peace; that the machinery of peace must be adequate to achieve justice; that there are three institutions for securing justice among nations, namely, 1. Arbitration; 2. World Court; 3. Conference and Consultation. In closing, he said that justice is that recognition of the rights of others which impinges on each nation.

Dr. Mary E. Wooley, President of Mount Holyoke College and a delegate to the World Disarmament Conference at Geneva, spoke on "Woman's Part and Power in the Peace Movement." She said that the international situation does not grow less serious as months go by; that it is more critical in these times; that it is our duty to help win the peace; that she learned at Geneva that there is an intense desire for each nation to assume its own responsibility in affairs and not shift the responsibility on to somebody else's shoulders.

Dr. Irwin Edman, Associate Professor of Philosophy at Columbia, spoke on "The Youth Movement in the World Today." He said that the youth of today is groping for an upward and outward movement which will raise it out of the chaos into which the world seems to have thrown it. That is why the younger generation is so eager to embrace such movements as Hitlerism, Fascism, Communism, and other isms. Often times they don't know what it is all about but they seem to think that perhaps new movements may bring them a chance to adjust themselves to the changing order which has sprung up all about them.

William Hard, Radio's Political Correspondent, spoke on "The Temper of Europe Today." He said that the Europeans used to think that America was a source of energy which never failed; that it was a bottomless reservoir from which prosperity and good times flowed endlessly; but they have awakened to the fact that America can also fall ill to the perils with which other nations are threatened. He said that the Europeans are gaining confidence in themselves and that it is better to co-operate with a Europe that has confidence in itself than with a Europe which did not have confidence in itself. He said also that although he is a journalist, he considered journalism a very bad thing at international conferences because it often tends to retard the aims towards which these conferences are striving, the reason being that because of the publicity the nations do not say what is really in their minds or what they really feel. They do not want to commit themselves to the public. They merely issue statements for publication. He said that the Europeans are waking up to the fact that they cannot change conditions for the better in Europe by conquests; that the spirit of Europe is not aggressive. To sum up, he said, the gradual abandoning of physical force and the gradual awakening of moral force is making Europe a better country to work with.

Mrs. August Belmont said that the most important question before us now is Unemployment Relief but one bad feature of this relief is having too many scattered organizations in one community doing the same work. There should be mergers of these organizations, all working together and not separately. She spoke on the government's share in giving surplus wheat and cotton to be turned into flour and clothes for the needy.

Walter Lippman, Author, spoke on "International Readjustments." He said that there are four central problems of the modern world; that a little philosophy is often a good cure for a headache; that a problem arises when things change unexpectedly and other things have to be substituted. The first problem, he said, arises out of the fact that modern inventions and machinery have altered the means of supporting life in this country. The solution would be to learn how to manage an economic system based upon the possibility of plenty. The second problem arises out of the fact that we are the first generation in all history where the mass of the people actually exercise political power. The difficulties of democracy are enormous. The solution would be how to make democracy a responsible form of government. The third problem is how to make a suitable and civilized world in which men can live and strive for the future in competition with other countries. The solution would be to adjust national policy in an era of international adversity. The fourth problem is the problem of the individual himself who tries to take his part in the solution of these matters. It is the problem of retaining serenity of spirit without loss of practical energy.

President Hoover addressed the conference by radio from Washington. He spoke on "Home and the Child." He summed up that the consideration of the future is consideration of the depression upon the children.

John G. Winant, Governor of New Hampshire, spoke on "New and Old Values." He said that the real mark of progress is when children excel their parents. Governor Winant is the author of the "New Hampshire Plan" which is a state method of work sharing. Not the machine, he said, but the consumption falling below production has brought about unemployment.

Colonel Robert Isham Randolph, head of the Secret Six of Chicago, spoke on "Crime and Leisure." He was one of the persons who brought about the conviction of Al Capone. He said that the indifference of the people themselves toward crime is one of the reasons why crime is not more under control that it is now. He said that leisure is doing something well worth while with your spare time. Idleness is not leisure. "The devil finds work for idle hands to do."

Dr. William A. White, Director of St. Elizabeth's Hospital at Washington, D. C., spoke on "Public Responsibility Toward the Mal-Adjusted." He said that mental disease definitely shortens life; that the public responsibility is to segregate the mentally ill in State Hospitals; that struggle and work bring out the best in man but prosperity lets down the bars and leads to destruction.

Colonel William J. Donovan, Former Assistant Attorney General of the U. S., spoke on "The Mounting Cost of Government." He said that what is called poor government is due to the laxity of intelligent participation in the affairs of government by the people themselves. This indifference leads to higher costs in the performance of the duties of government which returns as a boomerang to the individual in higher taxes. He said that efficient government is the art of enabling people to live together in peace and with some degree of happiness. Leadership is the essence of a representative democracy. The real purpose of democracy is to educate the people in government. Government should be a happy social order of the people by the people themselves.

Dr. Virginia Guildersleeve, Dean of Barnard College, spoke on "Education for the New Day." She said the recreation or the wise use of spare time is a refreshment of the spirit, which is necessary for all to be able to carry on; that a hobby is very essential and a fine use for leisure time; that radio as a means of education depends upon what people hear over it. She closed with the remark that happiness is a by-product of useful work.

This wound up the conference. Following the afternoon session, tea was served in the lounges of the hotel.

This conference was a most interesting one and I was very happy to have had the privilege of attending it, and trust that I may have been of some service in reporting it to you.

Respectfully submitted,
ISABEL LEFKOWITZ.

MEDWICK STAR IN STADIUM CONTEST

Base hits resounded hard and often at the City Stadium Sunday as the Carteret A. A. led by Joe Medwick, of the St. Louis Cardinals, defeated the Lehigh A. C., with Billy Urbanski, Boston Brave shortstop in its make-up, by 12-8 before almost 2000 fans. Four pitchers were used. Three of them were hit quite lustily, but the fourth, Mickey Migletz, who finished for Carteret, was very effective.

Two Joes, Sabine, burly right-hander from the North Amboy section, and Baranowski, of South Amboy, started on the mound. Sabine was nicked unusually hard and was forced to vacate at the close of the fourth inning. George Urbanski, brother of Billy, took up the burden, was touched for six hits in two frames and ended up by pitching no-hit ball for two innings.

Baranowski gave three hits during the first six inning but tired in the seventh when a double by Armstrong, a walk by Zalnick and a hit batsman, Timinski, and Steve Mizerak's slashing triple with the bases loaded gave the Lehighs three runs. Steve Mikula then dispatched a circuit smash into the center field stands for two more runs. Medwick came in fast to take in Bill Urbanski's line drive ending the rally.

Baranowski walked two batters to start the eighth and hit a third to fill the bases. Migletz came in at this juncture and nipped a rally in the bud.

Zalnick lifted to short left, G. Urbanski rolled easily to Migletz, who tossed to Beisel for the third out.

Carteret went out in order in the first when with one out, a double play, Sabine, Urbanski to Johnson, retired the side.

Medwick led off in the second with a stinging single to right, stole second and scored on Tadge Witczak's double into the stands. Stutzke duplicated Witczak's blow and another run was chalked up for Carteret.

Smolenski's double, two infield errors, Medwick's double against the right field bleachers, his steal of third and an infield out gave Carteret three more runs in the third.

Four hits, a double by Baranowski, and singles by Beisel, Medwick and Mitroka, produced three more runs for Carteret in the fourth, giving the locals an 8-2 lead.

Three doubles, one each by Medwick, Stutzke and Cleary, in the 6th, combined with a walk to Smolenski and an infield out added three more runs to Carteret's total. Urbanski was pitching for the Lehighs at this time. He was nicked for two more runs in the ensuing session on an error, a fielder's choice and successive two base hits by Beisel and Medwick.

Going into the last half of the seventh, the Lehighs trailed, 13-3, but the North Amboys staged a rally of their own and succeeded in cutting the lead to four runs.

The fans were treated to some fast base running particularly by Medwick and Urbanski. Joe stole two sacks and Billy one, but Urbanski thrilled the spectators with some nifty stepping in the sixth when he hit a towering fly beyond first base. Beisel misjudged the ball. Billy raced to second but Beisel's throw was wild; Urbanski continued running, circling the sacks before the ball was relayed to the infield.

Before he stepped to the plate for the first time up, Urbanski was presented with a smoking stand, the presentation having been made by Supervisor of Recreation Charles T. Kochek, who was pinch-hitting for Commissioner Albert G. Waters, who was delayed by motor trouble in North Jersey. The present was the gift of the Lehighs.

Think What Electricity Does for You at a Cost of Only a Few Cents a Day

It has banished the broom, the kerosene lamp, the wash board and their attendant labors and inconveniences.

And at a cost of only a FEW CENTS A DAY!

For these FEW CENTS A DAY you have the always ready services of an electric system costing millions of dollars to help do your cleaning, your lighting, your washing and ironing and dozens of other household tasks.

And from these FEW CENTS A DAY comes the wages of thousands of employes required to provide this adequate and dependable electric service.

With no other FEW-CENTS-A-DAY expenditure can you buy so much comfort, convenience and relief from fatigue. Prices of food, clothing, rent and other commodities have had their ups and downs during the past twenty years—some more than doubled.

But the average charge for Public Service electricity in the home has had no ups in all that time—

Public Service has reduced its rates for electricity in the home six times in the last few years and it is now cheaper than ever

Cashes Checks For Depositors Trust Co. Aids In Clear- ing Defunct Bank

A local institution, the Carteret Bank and Trust Company, has been the cause during the week of bringing much joy and comfort to many people in Woodbridge. It appears in the neighborhood of 11,000 depositors were in the National Bank and Trust Co., at Woodbridge, which closed its doors approximately a year ago. The institution has since been in the hands of a receiver appointed by the Federal Government at Washington and up to this week the depositors have been not only without interest on their money but without a payment of any part of it, it is understood.

The receiver's job, it seems, was to realize as much as possible of what assets the bank appeared to have in order to work out the best possible solution for the depositors so that they might get something out of it. The first 25c dividend was recently announced.

Payments on the deposits commenced on Monday. Through the courtesy of a local bank, the Carteret Bank and Trust Company, it was possible to commence payment to the Woodbridge depositors. It appears some $326,000 will be paid out when the total is handed over. On Monday alone, it is reported, the first day, no less than $47,000 was handed over to Woodbridge depositors which up to that time had never seen a cent. All this money well over a quarter of a million dollars, is being handled and paid over through the courtesy of the Carteret Bank and Trust Company, which is cashing the checks of the receiver without any charge whatsoever to the depositors of this Woodbridge National Bank. The Carteret Bank and Trust Company has set up its own representatives at the Woodbridge National Bank and has been making payment since Monday, assisting both the Federal representative and the 11,000 depositors who have been without their money since the time of the closing of the First National Bank and Trust Co. of Woodbridge.

The news that the receiver was able to declare a 25c dividend was a pleasing one to the community as was the fact that a bank in an neighboring town was willing to do a friendly act.

TO HOLD HALLOWEEN PARTY

The Hebrew Social Alliance of the Chrome section has made arrangements for a Halloween party at 30 Roosevelt avenue, October 29. Members of the Alliance and their invited guests will attend. The Alliance will organize a basketball team and will practice twice a week on the high school court.

Communion breakfast was held Sunday by St. James Club of St. Elizabeth's Hungarian Roman Catholic church. The speakers were: Rev. Father C. H. Chany, Andrew and Martin Cinege, Alex Sankson and Stephen Toth.

GIVES BORO PROGRESS

MAYOR JOS. A. HERMANN

Three Taken To Co. Workhouse Given Sixty-Day Terms On Burglary Charge

Three young men of the borough were taken to the county workhouse last Friday afternoon, when they were unable to pay fines of $100 each imposed by Recorder B. W. Vogel at Woodbridge on a breaking and entering job.

The men are: George Onder, 23 years old, of 72 Union street; John Nelson, 19, of 194 Randolph street and Alex Seconde, 18, of 50 Pershing avenue.

Onder was picked up early last Friday morning by Patrolman Deaton of the Woodbridge police department, when he became suspicious of the man's activities about the garage of George Lukacs, of Rahway avenue. It was revealed that a radiator was stolen from the garage and the door was broken open.

After being questioned, Onder related his story and two hours later Nelson and Seconde were picked up. They are alleged to have confessed.

In default of the fines, the men were sent to the workhouse for sixty days each.

JOINING THE PARADE

This week saw a number of additions to the big parade of municipal salary reductions.

Among the reductions were the following:

Lyndhurst—10% for all school employees.

Sayreville—10% for all school employees.

Hillside—5% to 15% for all school employees.

Hillside—5% to 20% for all township employees.

Kearny—Board of Education 6% to 10%.

Irvington—Board of Education employees 10%.

Red Bank—All municipal employees reduced 10%.

Kenilworth—School teachers and all others on the public payroll will be paid in script, due to the fact that the town has not got the cash.

Mayor Reviews Boro Progress Created Economy With No Loss Of Efficiency

At a meeting of the Democratic organization held in the Borough Hall on Saturday, there was generous pledges of support by party workers in a general round table discussion. Further plans for the balance of the campaign were gone over and suggestions made by not only the leaders but the men actively in the field attempting to canvass a vote favorable to the present administration.

Mayor Joseph A. Hermann, whose term of office expires on December 31st, reviewed what was the high spots of the accomplishment of his administration. Mr. Hermann maintained he increased municipal efficiency largely through reorganization. He contended that economy had been brought about without creating graver problems.

Councilman John E. Donahue discussed the problems of the Overseer of the Poor in attempting to take care of the needy locally.

Mayor Hermann also touched upon this work and said everything possible was being done in this direction. Other speakers included William D. Casey, C. C. Sheridan, Sr., Joseph Shuteilo, Jr., James Kelly, Louis R. Brown, Valentine Gleckner, Frank Csele and Miss Margaret Walsh.

There was a delegation from the newly formed colored club. William Rettick and Nathan Edwards of the Colored Club also spoke.

21 Births Are Recorded Here

Twenty-one births were recorded in the borough during the month of September. The names of the infants and the addresses of their parents follow:

The Polish-American Club will hold a sauerkraut supper at Falcon's hall on Sunday night October 16.

PLEA FOR REFERENDUM

DIRECTOR LEWIS COMPTON

Boroites Get Court Awards Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Elko Win Damage Suit

Harry Elko, by his parents, George and Anna Elko, as next friends, was awarded a verdict for $1,000, and his mother a verdict for $250 against Harry Sofka of Carteret and the Breyer Ice Cream Company by a jury in Supreme Court, recently.

In another action growing out of the same circumstance which was tried simultaneously before Judge Frank L. Cleary, the jury rendered a verdict of no cause for action in a suit for $10,500 brought by Sofka against the Breyer concern.

The suits grew out of a collision between Sofka's car, in which Mrs. Elko and her son were riding, and a truck owned by the ice cream company at Hazelwood avenue and Lawrence street, Rahway, on June 24, 1931. Damages of $10,000 each were sought for injuries by Mrs. Elko and her son, while Elko asked $6,000 for his medical and other expenses.

Elmer E. Brown represented the Elkos and Attorney John C. Stockel the ice cream company. Sofka as defendant in the first action was defended by Attorney Gerald McLaughlin of McCarter and English and Attorney John A. Lynch, while as plaintiff in the second he was represented by Attorney Francis A. Monaghan.

Testimonial Banquet Given To Bishop Zuk

A testimonial banquet in honor of Bishop J. A. Zuk, of the Ukrainian churches of America, who was recently consecrated to his post, will be given on Sunday night, at the Slovax hall.

The event is being arranged by the Ukrainian Business Men's Association, assisted by the Ukrainian Women's league. Borough officials and prominent men of the community have been invited.

Bishop Zuk will be welcomed to the borough Sunday by members of the parish. He will celebrate mass at 10:30 A. M., assisted by the Rev. Father John Fudniak, the pastor of St. Demetrius church and the Rev. Father Michael Lyslak, pastor of the Ukrainian church in Perth Amboy.

Miss Alice Barker has enrolled as student at the New York College of Music.

Urges Passage of Referendum Director Compton Says Necessity Is Urgent

In a letter recently sent out by Lewis Compton, Director of Municipal Relief for Middlesex County, in regards the $20,000,000 Bond Diversion Referendum, Mr. Compton calls attention to the following:

Municipal Directors should continue to use every possible means of keeping before the people of their respective municipalities the urgent necessity of the successful passage of the $20,000,000 bond diversion referendum for relief purposes.

Winter is close at hand. The relief funds will be exhausted by mid-December. There is but one alternative and that is the successful passage of the referendum, which will permit not the issuance of new bonds but the diversion of $20,000,000 worth of bonds already approved for highway work to relief purposes.

Relief Directors should avail themselves of every possible opportunity to speak on this subject before luncheon clubs, Parent Teachers' Associations, Church Gatherings, and also every possible opportunity. Fullest publicity should also be given this situation in the local press.

There is organized opposition in this State to the passage of this bond diversion referendum emanating principally from those parts of the State where there is either no relief load or else a very small one. The general apathy of the public in connection with relief work is also a very definite obstacle to be overcome. The New Jersey Taxpayers' Association as a State organization has by formal resolution opposed the passage of this bond diversion referendum.

All kinds of lobbies were in existence last winter in opposition to various proposals to raise money to finance the relief needs of this state. It would appear that now is the time when a little lobbying should be done in behalf of the unemployed. This I believe to be a proper function of the relief administration.

To Honor Turk and Beigert

On Monday evening, October 17th, 1932, the Young Men's Democratic Club and the Young Women's Democratic Club, will sponsor a "Beigert and Turk Night" in the Democratic Headquarters at 86 Washington avenue.

Mr. Mathias Beigert and Mr. Phil Turk are candidates for the Council. Both of these men are well known in Carteret. The speaker of the evening will be Assemblyman Elmer E. Brown, majority leader of the House of Assembly, who is well-known in Carteret and throughout the State. Local and out of town candidates and speakers will be present. All the organization are cordially invited to attend, and refreshments will be served by the Young Ladies and men. A large crowd is expected to come and hear the various issues.

CHECK BRUSH FIRE

Both fire companies were called out at 4:20 o'clock Tuesday to check a brush fire in the rear of Duffy street, when several of the structures were threatened. No damage was reported.

MUNICIPAL BONDS

The Borough of Carteret has paid a tremendous burden due to issuance of municipal bonds for various past "improvements."

The Carteret News has pointed out that the interest and the payment of bonds, even on the installment basis, tends to strangle the taxpayers. That is exactly what has happened throughout the country today. In Kenilworth during the week the teachers and all other employees were notified they would be paid in script. In other words, the municipality is promising to pay but it does not know when.

Of course, the bondholders come first. The bonds with the interest are first mortgages on the town. So far 36% of the income from taxes of this year in Kenilworth has gone to pay installments on bonds and interest on the bonds. This has left only 12% of the taxes to pay employees and maintain the town generally. The result is the employees cannot now be paid.

Chickens do come home to roost.

Freeholders Give Taxpayers Audit Statement Of County Finances Shows Good Administration

In this week's paper, the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders, under the able leadership of Director Lewis Compton, makes a statement to the taxpayers in Carteret of the financial condition of the county government.

As a taxpayer you should be interested in this financial exhibit since 19c every local tax dollar goes to the county. Carteret paid to the county in the past year over $120,000.00 in taxes.

CONGRATULATION

The Carteret News takes a great deal of pleasure in congratulating the County Government on its thorough-going clear statement of its finances in the semi-annual audit published January 1st to June 30.

It, in itself, is an exposition of county government and should be read by every taxpayer in the county.

In another column in a news story we have covered the subject and suggested that you, Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer, read the same and go over the audit. It is well worthwhile. Every governmental unit should follow this fine example.

A careful reading will indicate a business-like set up and statement has been made for the benefit of the taxpayers for the six months from January 1st to June 30th. Not only does this show balance sheets for the various accounts but it gives a detailed statement as to the taxes receivable and received from the various municipalities. This statement, under Exhibit "A" Schedule Five indicates that the complete June taxes of the county were not received from the several municipalities. More than $1,700,000.00 was not received by the county up to June 30th.

No governmental unit in the State of New Jersey has ever gotten out as complete and detailed a statement of the monies received from the taxpayers, how much was spent, what it was spent for and how much was on hand as the statement gotten out by Director Lewis Compton's Board of Freeholders. This in no little measure is due to Compton's leadership and desire to give free and full publicity to just where the taxpayers' money goes.

In putting out such a statement the Board of Freeholders are setting a splendid example for the municipalities of the county and the State Government itself.

The audit tells you, as a taxpayer, the sources of revenue of the county government and exactly how much and from where the money comes. It tells you what the County's present indebtedness is and how the County itself stands in relation to this debt.

It sets forth for you the various improvements that are going on under County auspices. It tells you how much is paid out on each improvement and how much remains to be paid out.

In its relationship to the various municipalities in the collection of taxes and the handling of funds for the municipalities, the statement is very clear. It tells you, Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer, exactly how much is received from your municipality and how much is paid out to your municipality under the various funds.

For instance, it tells you that Carteret's apportionment of school funds for 1932 was $35,131.37 and that at the end of June $8,151.37 was due. This, you will find under Exhibit "B" Schedule Eight.

As a taxpayer locally and as the payer of State taxes through gasoline taxes, you will probably be interested in knowing how much the municipality received from the motor vehicle fund. The audit shows, under Exhibit "B" Schedule 10, that Carteret's apportionment for the last quarter of 1931 and the first quarter of 1932 amounted to approximately $5,000.00.

Not only does the audit show in detail the expenditures under these various trust funds but it summarizes the income in each case. For instance, if you want to know just how much is received by the County from the State for school funds or from the gasoline tax, you will find it under Exhibit "B" Schedule One, under Cash Receipts. There you will find that Middlesex County received over $680,000.00 from the State in school funds, whereas it received approximately $82,000.00 from the Motor Vehicle Department for gasoline taxes in just six months. It is interesting to note that, while the County received $680,000.00 from the State in school funds for distribution to the municipalities and county purposes, the amount paid by the municipalities to the State is but $223,000.00. In the same way there is made clear to you in this audit what is received under every other account and what is disbursed.

Carteret B & L Ass'n Has 301 Shares Due

The Carteret Building and Loan Association has now commenced to pay out to Borough residents sums due on 301 maturing shares in the Association. These are to be paid off at $200 a share. It will mean a total payment by the end of the present month of $60,200.

This series started 11 years ago and in that time the various holders paid in $136 per share. It is understood that a new series of shares, the 48th, will open in December.

The Carteret Building and Loan, which was organized in 1901, has as its President Edward J. Heil.

The Directors include: C. C. Sheridan, Max Glass, Andrew Christensen, George A. Dairymple, S. C. Dairymple, Isidore Brown, Thomas Devetrex and Charles Ohlott.

The Counsel for the building and loan is Francis A. Monaghan.

Request Service Change

During September employees of Public Service Electric and Gas Company completed nearly 140,000 separate operations to carry out requests for changes in electric and gas service received from customers moving.

In the last four days of the month when the moving rush was at its peak, 38,010 orders were completed, 10,000 more than were handled in the corresponding four days of 1931, a period also marked by heavy moving activity.

The unusually large number of people who were changing their places of residence in the territory served by Public Service Electric and Gas Company is indicated by the fact that the orders completed during September were placed by 70,911 customers, 8,518 more than in any previous month.

TO HOLD SMOKER

The Polish Citizens' Club will hold a smoker at its clubrooms, on Union street, Sunday night, October 23rd. The committee comprises William Nadolski, Anthony Marciniak, Mr. Malczewski and Boleslaw Milk.

A sauerkraut supper will be held by the Polish American club at Falcon's auditorium on Sunday, October 16. The same club will hold a Halloween social at Falcon's hall, October 16.

FINED

In the police court Tuesday night, Steve Szekele, of 59 Locust street, was fined $5 on a disorderly conduct charge.

Out of his eyes the tenderness died. They grew hard and cold as ice. Involuntarily he straightened his shoulders. Then he sat down on the edge of the cot to wait.

Wilson stopped in the doorway of the office, taken by surprise. The woman he saw was not the one he had expected to see.

Ann Gifford, pallid to the lips, came forward eagerly.

"Can you save him?" she asked.

"We'll try," he promised.

"He didn't do it. I did. I can't let them kill him. It's awful." Her eyes closed for a moment, so that he thought she was going to faint. But she caught at the back of a chair and steadied herself. "I want to give myself up. If they must hang somebody, why—"

The young man's eyes picked up two others in the room, Jim Yerby and Phil Stark. He passed the question of her guilt as immaterial for the moment. The mob was in a hanging temper and would disregard any evidence she might offer, no matter whether true or false.

"You boys here to help Mike?" he asked crisply.

"That's whatever, Wils," Yerby answered promptly for both.

"Good," Wilson turned to Mike. "If Miss Gifford's story satisfies you, why don't you turn Stone over to me as deputy to slip him outa town? I'll be responsible for him."

The jailer rasped his chin dubiously. "That ain't a bad idea either, if it's not too late. You mean for the rest of us to stay an' hold the jail."

"Make a bluff at it, yes."

"Question is, have they got the jail surrounded? They've got a dozen men with rifles strung out in front." This came from Phil.

"I just got in the back way, by the creek bed," Wilson said. "But we'll have to hurry. Get Stone, Mike—an' don't waste a second."

The Irishman nodded and left the room almost on the run.

To young Stark his inherited enemy gave orders. "Get Miss Gifford away from here. I'll have Mike let you out the front door. There won't be any trouble with the guards outside. They'll let you through, except maybe to ask some questions. Take her to the hotel. If yore sister isn't there they will know where she is at. Get hold of my brother Lyn an' tell him to come up the creek with what men he has gathered. When we hear an owl hoot twice we'll know he's there an' open the back door for him."

Ann demurred. "I don't want to go. I'd rather stay here so I can go out and tell the mob he didn't do it. I mean, if you and he don't get away."

"That would sure do a lot of good, about as much as tryin' to persuade a hungry tiger not to make its kill," Wilson scoffed. His harsh voice softened. "If you want to help, there's a way. Go to the hotel and tell yore story. Or wherever Miss Stark is now. She's likely gathered a few good citizens. Stir 'em up to help."

"Well," she agreed doubtfully.

Rand came into the room with Stone. The prisoner's face was hard and impassive as rim-rock. He looked round the room and nodded to those present.

"Ready?" asked Wilson.

The deputy sheriff handed a revolver to Stone. "Me, I believe this young lad's story. But I'm askin' you to give yoreself up whenever Hank calls for you, Dave."

"Yes," the Texan promised.

Rand led the way to the back door through the corridor. He unlocked the heavy door and stepped outside. A bullet flattened itself against a boulder two feet from him.

"Nothing doing, Mike," a voice called from the brush across the creek. "We've got you covered good an' plenty."

The deputy stepped back into the corridor and closed the door. "Too late. They've got you both sure," he said.

"Yes," agreed McCann. "No chance." They returned to the office. "They're watchin' the back way," Rand explained. "Now what about Miss Gifford? Do you reckon she had ought to go?"

Stone and McCann answered "Yes," simultaneously.

"The sooner the quicker," Yerby added.

"We'll call out first an' tell those in front she is coming, so there won't be any chance for a mistake," McCann said.

Ann looked piteously at the Texan and followed Mike without a word of protest. Her heroic gesture to save the man who had come to play so large a part in her life was under a veto of general masculine opinion. No doubt their view was a common-sense one, that the mob would listen to no explanation she made, but none the less she longed to try what still seemed to her the only simple way that might save bloodshed.

To the watchers outside, the deputy sheriff explained in a shout that a woman was leaving the jail accompanied by a friend.

"Let 'em come straight down the walk an' we'll meet 'em both, Mike," some one answered. "Hands in the air all the time an' no shenanigan. We're not takin' chances."

Phil and Ann were let out and the door locked behind them.

Hands up, they moved forward to meet the guards. The man in charge of the jail blockade did not intend to let any trick be played upon him. He had heard of prisoners escaping dressed as women.

When he recognized Ann he took his hat off. But he held her for a short examination.

"What you been doing there, ma'am?" he asked.

"I went to give myself up. This afternoon I heard Mr. Stone had been arrested for killing Tom McArdie. I shot him myself."

The man laughed, grimly. "That's a new play, hidin' behind a woman. I wouldn't hardly have expected that of Dave Stone."

"But that isn't true," Ann cried. "I did shoot him. Jasper Stark and that Giltner saw me riding away afterward. Ask them. They can't deny it."

"We can't ask them. They've lit out somewhere, an' that's funny, too. Know anything about it?" he asked suspiciously.

"No. But it's true, Mr. Stone hadn't anything to do with shooting Tom McArdie. I did it. I shot him because—because of what he did to my sister. I was coming home from one of our camps when I met him. He tried to make up to me, so he could come and see—come and visit at the house. We quarreled—and I shot him. You don't believe me, and it's the truth before God," she cried desperately.

"No, ma'am, we don't believe you. We think you're tryin' to save Dave Stone," the leader said, not unkindly. "No man confesses to a killing he didn't do. That wouldn't be reasonable. We'll tell Dave you done yore best for him. If you'll take my advice you'll light right outa town. It's no place for you tonight."

He turned to Phil. "Who's up at the jail with Rand? Anybody else at all?"

"Four others."

"Who?"

Phil looked him hardily in the eye. "I've forgot their names."

"Meanin' you won't tell?"

"Meanin' just that."

There was a short silence. "How come you mixed in this, Stark?"

"If Dave killed McArdie it was in a fair fight an' he was justified. I know that. Dave never shot anyone without givin' him a chance."

"He's just a kid, Phil is," someone spoke up. "You know how kids are about gunmen."

"I wouldn't call Dave a gunman exactly," Phil protested. "He's absolutely square—an' he's game."

Ann broke down and between her sobs begged for the life of her friend. She kept repeating that Stone did not kill McArdie, that she had done it herself, that he was sacrificing himself because he was trying to protect her. The net result of her passionate entreaty was that in their minds she convicted herself only of being in love with the Texan.

Phil escorted her, still shaken with sobs, to the hotel. They passed groups of hurrying, excited men. The question they heard repeated several times was as to what had become of Jasper Stark and Giltner.

Ann found the hotel a nucleus of activity for the few who opposed mob law. Julia was here, and Sam Sharp and Lyn McCann. But the leader was a lean grizzled brown man, a trifle bow-legged, with hard eyes and shaggy brows. Peter McCann had been enlisted by Julia to support his son Wilson. With sharp incisive questions he drew from Phil the situation at the jail.

"You say yore brother an' Giltner are there, too?" he asked after the boy had told the facts.

"Yes, as prisoners," Phil answered a little sulkily. He did not enjoy surrendering command to these McCanns, as he had been forced to do both at the jail and here. "Yore son got 'em there somehow. Arrested the two of 'em, one at a time."

"Walked into their crowd an' took them away?" asked Peter incredulously. "He couldn't do it. No single man could."

"All right. He didn't do it, then," snapped the boy. "All I know is that Mike Rand says he did an' claims to have Jas an' Giltner locked up in cells for inciting riot."

Peter's eyes were shining. If this was true—if Wilson really had carried through this cutting out adventure and arrested the leaders of the mob—he certainly would be proud of his boy.

Ann had been talking to Julia, who now interrupted McCann by leading the owner of the sheep ranch to him.

"Do you know Miss Gifford, Mr. McCann?" she said by way of interruption. "She has something to tell you."

Again Ann told her story of the trouble with McArdie that had led to his death. McCann listened and believed. It was possible that Stone's story was true, too. Perhaps she had missed the range rider and he had been killed later in a fight with the Texan. Or perhaps, which was just as likely, the little gunman had made up the story to protect her. In any event, it was clear to him that Tom McArdie had earned his doom and that he had not been murdered but shot down after due warning.

There were half a dozen men in the room in addition to Phil and the owner of the Flying VY. To them Peter gave instructions.

"There's two ways of doing this job, boys. One is for us to get inside the jail an' stand off the mob. We can do it, but there might be bloodshed. The other way is for me to step in an' take the leadership in this job. That last is how it will be. You boys will sit in among the crowd an' talk me up as boss of this rodeo. They're millin' around out there and don't hardly know where they're at now. Jas Stark an' Giltner have gone. So I'll take charge. When I make a play you back it strong."

"But—what are you going to do?" Julia asked.

Peter looked at her, flushed and bright-eyed and quivering with life. She was a lovely picture of youth, and at sight of it his eyes for a moment played tricks with him. The girl he saw was the one he had loved and lost twenty-odd years before.

"I'm figurin' on playin' their game. But we'll change it some. We'll be vigilantes and not lynchers. That calls for a trial. Don't you worry, Jessie. It'll work out fine."

Julia understood now, when inadvertently he had called her by her mother's name, much that had puzzled her in Peter McCann's attitude. In his eyes, while he had been staying at the Circle Cross, she had more than once seen an expression she could not fathom. But she knew now what it had meant. She was very like her mother, and when he looked at her the hatred for her family was no longer in his heart. The memory of Jessie Farwell made it impossible.

"Can you save him that way?" Ann asked.

"If you'll come through with yore story clean, if you'll tell what Tom McArdie did to ruin the lives of yore family."

Ann shrank back, white-faced and trembling. "I couldn't—before everybody."

"Just enough so they'd understand," he said gently.

Julia put her arms around the other girl. "I'll be with you, Ann," she whispered. And to McCann she said: "Leave it to me."

The old cattleman nodded. He judged her competent to handle that end of the situation.

CHAPTER XI

Dunwig's Park

Mesa boasted a band of six pieces, called upon for music on all patriotic occasions such as ball games and Fourth of July celebrations. The man who played the big drum was Medford, clerk at Basford's emporium. Him the owner of the Flying VY pressed into service.

They repaired to the steps of the courthouse.

"Let her go, son," McCann ordered. "Kindsa slow an' steady."

With heavy measured strokes Medford beat the drum. The sound of it filled the night. It arrested the attention of every man and every group within hearing. All knew it was a call to gather for concerted action. Within three minutes the courthouse square was full.

The slow reverberation of the drum died down. Peter McCann began to speak. The gift of winning an audience was native to him, perhaps inherited from the ancestors who had come across from the Emerald Isle.

Before he had been speaking three minutes he was not only one of the mob but its accepted leader. His assumption, to begin with, was that Stone must pay the penalty of his crime. But Mesa was, he claimed, a law-abiding community. It did not intend that killers should come in and shoot down its citizens. All it wanted was to make sure of the fact before it proceeded to summary justice. To that end a court must be organized and the accused man tried, if he was found guilty of dry-gulching Tom McArdie, of murdering him without giving the range rider a chance for his life, he ought to be executed promptly.

"What's the sense in wastin' time on a trial when he admits he did it?" a voice shouted. "We'll hang him first an' you can try him afterward."

"Come up here, Kelly Brown," the big voice of McCann boomed. "Don't hide back there, but come up and tell me that to my face."

The man was hustled forward, against his desire. He was one of the hangers-on at Pedro's place, and his reputation was not good.

Peter caught him by the arm and dragged him up to the top step. "Now tell us yore idea of what's the right thing to do," he ordered.

"Well, he's guilty, ain't he? What's the use oratin' about it?"

"I'm talkin' about a trial. You say hang him first an' try him afterward. Is that giving him a square deal?"

"Did he give poor Tom a square deal?" the man asked doggedly.

"That's what we're here to find out. How about the time you were arrested for blotting the Circle Lazy H brand? Would you have enjoyed being hung first an' tried afterward?"

A laugh went up at Brown's expense. "Better give him a trial, I reckon," he conceded sullenly, caught in a trap from which there was no escape.

When McCann appealed to the amused crowd a few moments later his suggestion was carried by a large vote. After all, there would be more entertainment in trying the Texan before they hanged him.

A committee was appointed to guard the prisoner when he should be brought out, after which Peter McCann went to the jail alone, waving a white handkerchief.

The deputy sheriff admitted him. McCann followed the officer to the room where Stone, Yerby, and Wilson were waiting. He explained the facts briefly.

Rand shook his head. "No, sir, I ain't givin' up my prisoner to be tried by any mob. If you want him you'll have to come an' take him."

"How about it?" asked the ranchman, appealing to Stone. "I named the committee that will guard you. Good men, all of 'em. They'll stand put. Question is, have you got a case good enough to stand a fair trial? But I'll tell you this straight: It's that or lynching, and you take yore choice."

"I killed him because he needed killing. I'm willing to stand trial on it any time. That's why I gave myself up," the Texan said quietly.

"Seems to be up to you, then, Mike," the older McCann said bluntly. "Will you bring him out for trial? Or shall we break in an' get him?"

The deputy surrendered. "All right, I'll bring him out, but I'll be beside him all the time."

A huge bonfire had been lit in the square and by the light of it Stone was tried. Fletcher, the only lawyer in the town, acted as judge after a formal protest against vigilante proceedings. A cattleman named Haskell prosecuted, Peter McCann called upon someone to offer himself as attorney for the defendant.

After a pause his son Wilson spoke. "I reckon I'm no lawyer, but if Dave will stand for me I'll do my best."

The Texan nodded imperturbably. "Suits me."

There were only five witnesses, Jasper Stark and Giltner, released from solitary confinement, told of finding the body and of Stone's suspicious actions. Wilson cross-examined them very briefly, asking the same questions of each.

"Did you mention yore suspicions to anyone then or later?"

Both of the witnesses remembered one or two to whom they had spoken their doubts, but the persons named were hangers-on at Pedro's place, loafers of no reputation in the community.

"If you thought Stone killed Tom why did you tell Sheriff Le Page about Miss Gifford?" young McCann asked Jasper.

"I figured she might be in it with him. I hadn't a thing to go on but suspicions," he growled.

"Have you anything more to go on now?"

"He up an' confessed, didn't he?"

"We'll hear his story. I'm askin' you for yours now," Wilson cut back curtly.

"Well, he'd told us he was allowin' to bump off Tom on account of being jealous of him."

"When did he tell you that?"

Bermudians Still Seek Spanish Treasure Trove

Spanish treasure may yet be found in the Bermuda islands if ancient records and traditions still current among the people are to be believed. Most of it must have been buried prior to 1600, when the islands were colonized, at the time when Spanish ships, both pirate and authorized, were carrying stores of wealth from Central and South America.

The early settlers in Bermuda were considerably excited over the possibility of recovering some of the gold, and in 1603 made a determined effort to discover it. Several witnesses before the governor spoke of remembering a triangular heap of stones on one of the outlying islands and a yellow tree to which an engraved brass plate was affixed, while others testified to a wooden cross which pointed toward a mysterious stone pile. One man swore on oath that he had seen a phantom ship cross the harbor and that "fire drakes" had alighted upon it. An earlier governor had attempted to find the treasure with the aid of a mystic white stone, but the expedition's work was stopped because some of the citizens "thought it not lawful to find it that way." Somewhat later a Bermudian purchased a whole island from the proprietors of the Bermuda company with a lump of ambergris, because he was sure that he had located the treasure trove.

Loose Language Recently a public speaker preparing to make an accusation about something of which he was ignorant began with the statement: "I venture the assertion." There is a phrase contradictory in its very make-up. An assertion is a positive affirmation. It is not a suggestion, a probability, a possibility or remote contingency; so it is not a venture into the realms of doubt—a mere personal and prejudiced opinion. Yet whenever one "ventures the assertion" he is getting ready, nine times out of ten, to make a wild and unfair speculation. He is merely expressing an unsupported opinion in a noncommittal way. It is a funny phrase, and it ought to be abolished for incompetency.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Jumper Frock a Smart Campus Item

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION has re-discovered the Jumper or guimpe frock, if you so prefer to call it. Now that this interesting type of dress has been put on the map again, Joy reigns in the realm of campus, school room and office, for was there ever or could there ever be any style of frock more practical than the one which can change its sleeves and its neckline effect at a moment's notice simply by taking unto itself a different blouse or guimpe?

Most of the fashion columns and pictures and cables from Paris are delivering the message of contrasting sleeves and no doubt the revival of the jumper frock is directly traceable to this influence. As one designer expresses it, "they make the frock"—such as, for instance, sleeves of tissue metal cloth or those which are muchly be-spangled or embroidered which sound a brilliant note for some of the handsomest velvet, satin or crepe dinner gowns shown in the new collections.

Which all goes to show that the call for contrasting sleeves seems to be "opportunity knocking at the door" of the jumper frock to become formal when it so elects. Which is exactly what has happened—formal as well as informal Jumper or guimpe dresses. The velvet gown cut low to the waistline with suspender-like straps over the shoulder worn with a generously sleeved blouse or guimpe of exquisite lace is one of the new numbers on the program of stately evening costumes. The Jumper frock of black rough crepe shown to the left in the picture is a most practical type for the campus, since it permits of variety and freshness of appearance by merely substituting different blouses. In this instance the blouse with its stylish wide-at-the-shoulder sleeves is made of crepe so as to simulate shirting.

Plaid to wear with his same black crepe frock is a timely suggestion, for the outlook is for a "plaid season." Designers are doing very interesting and novel things with plaid, and they especially sponsor the jumper frock worn with a plaid blouse. Perhaps there is none more attractive than the blouse made of plaid velvet, and the best of it is, it's "different" and, it goes without saying, extremely flattering.

Another argument in favor of contrasting guimpes is they make possible the transforming of formal evening frock into a less formal afternoon type. The picture to the right is a good illustration of this. One of its clever points is that the dress wraps around and ties at the side to the back so that when off it can be laid flat and folded for traveling—ideal for the college girl's wardrobe. A new color combination this season and one which is becoming very popular is pink with the new dark red wine shades. For the jumper frock this color alliance is very effective, the dress, of course, being in a deep wine shade with pink rough crepe or a triple sheer weave for the blouse. Another attractive idea is the blouse of lace dyed the same color as the dress which it posed over it.

GAY COLORS MARK NEW SPORTS SUITS

The new sports clothes for fall will appear in every color of the well-known rainbow. Especially the knitted things.

Of course, the dark browns and hunter's greens, the wine reds and navy blues won't be crowded off the fashion map. But they are to be joined by a riotous array of colors.

The new knitted sports suits, many with long belted coats and others in the popular swaggar suit styles, will appear in multi-colored stripes, plaids and gay solid colors.

Bright shades of red and green will be prominent on the sports fashion map. For instance: Emerald, pea green, rust pimento, cherry red and the lighter wines.

The dark sports suits will be brightened up by gaily striped sweaters and blouses.

SATIN SLEEVES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The frock of rough-surfaced crepe which has satin sleeves is playing a stellar role in the new autumn fashions. Usually the sleeves are very wide at the armhole or they are apt to be leg o' mutton style or some styling along generous lines which makes them conspicuous for according to the dictate of style creators, sleeves must be made the center of attraction. The scarf of satin tied in a soft bow at the neck adheres to the new high-about-the-throat silhouette.

"Down-in-Front" Effect Feature of Late Hats

The new down-in-front hats are most alluring, most amusing. The hat itself is set rather high up on the head, but a soft little feather fancy or a soft little bow comes down over the brow at one side.

They are most becoming, these new hats, and far more becoming to many women than the off-the-forehead hats ever were.

Velvet and wool jerseys are used for some of the new little hats that are shown now in Paris. They are light and soft and altogether most charming. And they are made, of course, in all the smart color combinations.

Chiffon Quite Correct for Wear in Evening

Quite correct is printed chiffon, even if some women have declared themselves against prints for evening. A pretty evening frock is of black chiffon with a small floral print in green, white and red. Wide shirtings give the waistline a wide belted look and the frock has a tiny vestee of atoncan lace and there are white velvet flowers just above the waistline.

Making a sensation these days are some most original feather boas. With a white chiffon dress one woman wears a boa of white coq feathers, wired to curve up gracefully over the shoulders.

Detachable Furs for Autumn Coats Latest

Coats coming out for autumn wear are cut on depression lines, which really means that it is going to be very fashionable to have detachable fur trimmings that can be used on various clothes. First fall fashions being seen on the rue de Paix indicate many separate caplets, draped collars and scarves and sets to be worn with several frocks and coats. Straight long coats, tied-on etc. and buttoned up ones are in the style cr-d.

President Hoover Speaks to Farmers—Roosevelt and Smith Bury the Hatchet—Insull Brothers Indicted—Japan Ignores Lytton Report.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

BOTH Republicans and Democrats derived great encouragement from developments of the week, and seemingly with the best of reason.

H. H. Lehman

The former hailed with glee the warm reception given President Hoover in Iowa. Before enthusiastic thousands the Chief Executive delivered in Des Moines his first speech in his campaign for re-election, addressing himself especially to the corn and hog raisers who have been showing such decided discontent that their shift to the Democrats was freely predicted. He declared the program offered by his rival would mean ruin to American agriculture and laid down one of his own that included the maintenance of high protective tariffs on farm products, the amelioration of the farm mortgage situation and the use of annual payments on the foreign debt to advance foreign markets for American farm products.

Both Mr. Hoover and Mrs. Hoover, who accompanied him on the trip, are natives of Iowa, and the people of the state gave them a cordial welcome. The President was so encouraged that on the way back to Washington he made back platform speeches in ten towns in Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Democracy's glee was caused by the reconciliation between Franklin D. Roosevelt, its Presidential candidate, and Al Smith, who had been holding rather aloof in the campaign. The hatchet was buried in the New York state Democratic convention where both Roosevelt and Smith were fighting to bring about the nomination of Herbert H. Lehman for governor against the stubborn opposition of Tammany Hall leaders. Going to the platform to place Lehman in nomination, Smith grasped the hand of his old friend with a smiling "Hello, Frank," and the governor responded with cordiality as the cameras of the press photographers clicked madly and the crowd yelled approval.

"Al, this is from the heart." And Al replied: "Frank, that goes with me, too." Tammany Hall was utterly defeated and Lehman was nominated, with W. M. Bray of Utica for lieutenant governor. Senator Robert F. Wagner was accorded a renomination.

The Republican New York convention nominated Col. William J. ("Wild Bill") Donovan for governor; F. Truette Davison, assistant secretary of war, for lieutenant governor, and George Z. Medaille for United States senator. At the notification ceremonies Colonel Donovan declared himself in favor of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

"MERELY a diary of a fortnight's journey through Manchuria" was the why Minister of War Sadao Araki characterized the report of the Lytton commission to the League of Nations when the Japanese cabinet met to consider it. Other ministers agreed that it was unworthy of Japan's serious attention, and the cabinet then made this curt announcement:

"The government has decided that the Lytton report does not constitute cause to alter its Manchurian policy."

Various responsible leaders in Japan gave notice that their country would continue its domination of Manchuria, and the world wonders just what the League of Nations can and will do about it. The Japanese war office issued a statement declaring that if the league acts in the spirit of the Lytton report, Japan will have no alternative but to withdraw from the league and oppose its action with the firmest determination. France has shown decided sympathy with Japan in the controversy and Great Britain has been rather lukewarm in her friendship for China. The United States, though not in the league, is a most important factor in the affair, and Japan insists that Secretary of State Stimson has again displayed his animosity toward Japan and is a menace to the good relations between Japan and America. This is because Mr. Stimson in an address before the Philadelphia Union League club said President Hoover had formulated a successful policy of nonrecognition for territorial gains made by force of arms, and added that the "open door" policy was necessary to preserve China's territorial and administrative integrity.

The Lytton report, insisting less on the responsibility for past actions than on the necessity for finding means to prevent their repetition, calls for the establishment of an autonomous demilitarized Manchuria an der Chinese sovereignty. The details of its status are to be agreed upon at an advisory Sino-Japanese conference following the recommendations of the league and with the league council sitting as arbiter.

It holds up practically to ridicule the Mukden incident of September 18, 1931, over which Japan jumped off to the occupation of Manchuria. It intimates the whole thing was planned. "But even in Japan," says the report in a tart passage, "appropriate means must be found for attainment of every end."

WHEN Samuel Insull, former public utilities magnate, and his brother Martin ignored the request of State's Attorney Swanson in Chicago that they return from France and Canada, respectively, to assist in the untangling of the affairs of the numerous corporations with which they had been connected, Mr. Swanson became indignant and promptly presented his cases against them to the grand jury. Within a few days that body returned three indictments charging embezzlement, larceny by baillee and larceny; (charges for the arrest of the brothers were issued and steps to bring about their extradition were taken.

The first indictment names Martin Insull alone. It charges that he abstracted by means of embezzlement, larceny, and larceny as baillee $377,720 from the treasury of the Middle West Utilities company and used the money to protect his personal brokerage accounts.

The second indictment charges Samuel Insull and Martin Insull jointly with using $66,000 of the funds of the Middle West Utilities company to protect brokerage accounts carried in the name of Washington Flexner, president of the Lincoln Printing company.

The third indictment names the brothers jointly on a charge of abstracting $104,222 from the treasury of the Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment company for the same purpose.

Samuel Insull in Paris and Martin in Canada both refused to comment on the news from Chicago.

PRESIDENT DE VALERA of the Irish Free State has brought about the dismissal of James McNeill as governor general, and it is reported in Dublin that he will not nominate a successor, either taking the position himself or cutting the Irish State entirely away from the British commonwealth. When he decided that McNeill should go the British government had no alternative to acceding to the demand.

Mr. De Valera on his way home from Geneva conferred with British cabinet members in London and it was agreed that the Anglo-Irish economic war, that started over the withholding of the land annuities due the British government, should be settled by direct negotiation. This was a victory for the Free State, for the British had previously insisted the dispute should be arbitrated by an empire tribunal.

GREAT BRITAIN took steps to break the disarmament deadlock caused by Germany's withdrawal from the Geneva conference when her demand for armament equality was refused. The British ambassador to Berlin invited the German government to send representatives to a four-power conference in London to consider the German demand and to pave the way for Germany's return to the conference. The other three powers would be France, Great Britain and Italy, and the United States would be invited to send an observer. The German reply was that it would be useless to hold the meeting unless Germany were first given certain guarantees that her demand for equality would be really fulfilled.

Norman Davis, acting chief of the American disarmament delegation, went to London to talk about fleet reductions proposed by President Hoover. On the way from Geneva he stopped in Paris to sound out the French on the Franco-Italian obstacle to making the London treaty a five-power pact.

IRAQ was admitted to a seat as a sovereign member of the League of Nations, the first country in the Arabian world to reach that status, and King Faisal is now an entirely independent monarch. Great Britain resigned her mandate over Iraq and was highly praised for her generosity by all speakers in the league assembly. There was an intimation that France should follow this example in regard to Syria, but the French at Geneva were noncommittal. Iraq was formed after the World War out of the former Turkish provinces of Bagdad, Mosul and Basra. Within its boundaries are vast oil fields, and the population is nearly three millions.

RESTED by their long summer vacation, the venerable members of the United States Supreme court resumed their labors and one of the first matters to come before them was of great importance to all states along the Great Lakes, including New York. Attorney General Gilbert Bettman of Ohio, acting on behalf of Ohio, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, presented an application for the appointment of a receiver, commissioner or United States marshal to run the Chicago sanitary district and carry out and make effective the decree entered by the court in April, 1930, restricting the withdrawal of water from Lake Michigan by the drainage canal. The purpose is to force Chicago to hasten the building of sewage disposal plants and thus reduce the diversion of water. Instead of the eight years allowed for building the works before the diversion is cut to 1,500 feet in 1938 it will require 37 years at the present rate of construction, the applicants' brief declared.

DOWN in Medicine Lodge, Kansas, there was an interesting three-day celebration in commemoration of the signing of a treaty in October, 1867. The pact was between the United States and the Kiowa, Comanche, Cheyenne, Arapahoe and Apache tribes, and it ended bloody warfare and permitted the unmoled construction of railroads and wagon roads to the Pacific coast. In return the Indians were allotted reservations on which they have made their homes ever since.

MEXICO'S government and the Catholic church are again at each other's throats. In a recent encyclical Pope Pius discussed what he called "the new and legal persecution" of the church and Catholics in Mexico and announced a policy of "formal co-operation" without renouncing principles or withdrawing past denunciations.

President Rodriguez

President Abelardo L. Rodriguez countered with a declaration that all the Catholic churches in Mexico would be closed to religious use if the Catholic church's attitude, "as shown in the encyclical" should continue. This attitude he called insolent and defiant.

Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, papal legate to Mexico, took part in the controversy and the chamber of deputies unanimously voted to ask President Rodriguez to deport him. The president immediately complied and the legate was put aboard a plane and shipped to San Antonio, Texas.

ONE of the heroes of the British conquest of the Sudan, Gen. Sir Rudolph Slatin Pasha, died in Vienna at the age of seventy-five. Born in Austria, he enlisted for service with the British army in the Sudan when he was twenty-one years old. Under Gen. "Chinese" Gordon, he led the British in their bloody war with the Mahdi, Arab chieftain. It was Sir Rudolph's prowess in beating back the dervish tribesmen in 27 battles which won him the title of "The Hammer of the Arabs." In 1885 he was taken prisoner by the Arabs and was held a slave for twelve years. After his escape he served under Lord Kitchener.

BRAZIL'S civil war, which had lasted for nearly three months came to a close with the unconditional surrender of the rebels in the state of Sao Paulo. Military police replaced the rebel government in Sao Paulo, capital of the state, and the great coffee port of Santos was reopened to commerce. The revolutionary army disbanded and its leader, Gen. Bertoldo Klinger, and other officers were held under arrest at the federal army headquarters at Cruzro.

CHILE went through another switch in government when Gen. Bartolme Blanche, provisional president, was forced to resign by a revolt against the military regime. He was succeeded by Judge Abraham Oyanedel who will serve until the election set for October 30.

Dr. Harmodio Arias was inaugurated as the fifteenth president of the republic of Panama, and pledged himself to economy and the payment of the nation's foreign financial obligations.

PARTIAL failure of the five year plan was admitted by the central committee of the Communist party of Soviet Russia at its annual meeting to formulate policies for the coming year. It decided that quality rather than quantity should be the watchword for 1933, and outlined this procedure:

Improvement of the cities' supplies of food and other commodities; increases in the production of goods for domestic consumption and elimination of the speculative spirit by the development of a system of controlled prices and the introduction of labels for manufactured goods to improve their quality.

THERE was more trouble in the Illinois coal fields and detachments of the National Guard were posted in several towns to curb the actions of the striking miners and their pickets. One of the peculiar developments was a strike of high school pupils in Kincaid because the Chicago school board had bought coal from a company operating under the $5 wage scale. In that town it was reported that a patrol of the militia was fired at though no one was wounded.

RED JACKET

I was talking, the other day, to a well-known and highly-educated Arapahoe. We were discussing famous Indians of history, and, when Red Jacket was named, I interjected that "there was an old scallawag."

Red Jacket

My Indian friend smiled; "He was a very brilliant orator," he said, and passed on to another name. So I shall give Red Jacket's history as I know it and let you judge for yourself.

When the Seneca entered the Revolutionary war, Red Jacket opposed the move, but joined with his tribesmen on the British side. An officer, possibly attracted by the eloquence of the Indian, gave him a red coat, and from this he took his name. When one coat wore out, he was given another, and this semi-uniform became the sign of the talkative Seneca.

Red Jacket enjoyed nothing more than haranguing his tribesmen, exhorting them to be brave and fight boldly and well. Yet he led them in retreat, and on one occasion, after promising to be in the thick of the battle, he was found behind the melee, cutting up a cow belonging to another Indian.

Brant named him Cow-killer, from such exploits; Cornplanter told his young wife to leave the coward; he went merrily on his way. His gift for oratory and a tenacious memory made him valuable to his people in spite of his worse qualities.

The fact that he wore a white man's coat did not prejudice Red Jacket in the white man's favor. "What have we here?" he exclaimed to a young Indian who had been educated by the white people; "You are neither a white man nor an Indian; for heaven's sake tell us, what are you?" This fight against the adoption of white customs of any sort, he carried to great lengths. Indeed, for an Indian to as much as use a chair in his cabin was an incentive for Red Jacket's contemptuous rallery.

His fight against the white man's virtues, however, did not extend to their vices, which he adopted with enthusiasm.

In spite of his propaganda against churches and industries, they gained hold on the Seneca people. His continual opposition made him unpopular with the white men and his own people alike, and at last 28 leading chiefs of the tribe signed a document deposing him as chief. He was accused, among other things, of sending falsehoods to the President; of creating dissension among his people; of stealing their annuities from orphans and the old; and—worst crime of all in Indian eyes—of hiding a deer which he had killed in time of famine, instead of sharing it with his people. This loss of power was later revoked.

Although he was doing what he could to thwart the Indian policy of the United States, Red Jacket nevertheless became one of a delegation which went to Philadelphia in 1792 to visit President Washington. The President gave Red Jacket a silver medal, and this paradoxical Indian kept it as a treasure, wearing it proudly and taking the best of care of it. It is hard to understand what thoughts prompted this, in the face of the steady opposition to white man's rule which he always showed.

Red Jacket's wife was one person who measured wills against him and won. He had threatened to leave her if she joined the church, but in 1827 she and several neighbors became Christians. Since he had made the threat, he felt bound to carry it out, and accordingly left his wife and plunged into a life of extreme dissipation. After a few months this began to pall. He thought of his home, as Bill Bailey in the song "thought about his pork chops," and back to the house he went.

His wife must have been fond of the old sinner, for she took him back, but she made it clear that there must be no interference with her new religion. Red Jacket meekly acquiesced, and it is said that sometimes he even aided her in her religious duties.

It is a little difficult to understand this long-ago Indian in view of the various lights in which he appears. History has given him a contradictory character, by turns heroic and ridiculous, and always—to me, at least—obscure.

And so, great man or scallawag, we leave him. One thing we know, he made his mark on the page of history, and many centuries will elapse before his name is forgotten.

Sticks Snout Through Nut

One of the creatures equipped by nature to penetrate the thorny protective covering of the chestnut is a small weevil known as the snout beetle because its head is extended into a snout-like organ considerably longer than its body. This little pest perches on top of the burr and with its long snout bores a hole through the outer covering into the nut itself where it deposits its egg. The small white worm which is hatched from the egg has a plentiful food supply in the meat of the nut.

OLD CROSS RELIC OF RUTHLESS AGE

Once Faced Execution Spot in Edinburgh.

In the Memorial chapel of Old St. Paul's church, Edinburgh, an iron cross hangs on the wall. Its presence there strikes a strange note in the midst of so many beautiful and sacred objects, selected and placed with much reverent care, for it is rough and almost battered in appearance; it has no beauty to make it desirable. Even its proportions (some 17 inches by 9) are not those we are accustomed to associate with a sacred symbol. It is a poor thing, a thing that has been treated with violence; it has lost even God, for having been once a crucifix the figure has been wrenched away.

So it hangs there, a very fitting symbol of the love that gave up all, that descended below the lowest depth of human anguish and desolation, that went to the gallows for mankind.

It is the cross that at one time faced the gallows in the Grassmarket, and it was the last object on which the eyes of the condemned rested before they met their death.

The place where the Gallows Stone once stood, at the east end of the Grassmarket, is now marked by an arrangement of stones representing a St. Andrew's cross. The crucifix was imposed upon the wall of a house which stood near-by, but has since been demolished.

Prisoners were brought down from the Tolbooth prison, the old Heart of Midlothian, which was near St. Giles. After the Tolbooth had been pronounced too unsanitary and too unsafe for parliaments and kirk-sessions, it was still, in that ruthless age, considered fit for use as a prison. It was demolished in the first quarter of last century, when the Calton jail was built, which in its turn has now given way to the still more suitable buildings at Slateford.

The condemned were brought by the West Bow (Victoria street) to where the gallows had been set up in a hole in the stone.

Executions were conducted there from the seventeenth century to 1784. It is therefore not unfitting perhaps that the cross should hang where now it does, in Old St. Paul's church, which, founded by those who were ejected from St. Giles' with Bishop Rose, remained as a stronghold of Episcopacy through times when to be Episcopal was generally to be also Jacobite, so that some of those who suffered for their share in the rising of 1745 may well have worshipped within its walls.

Certainly very many of those who met their death there suffered for conscience's sake, for it was the place of the execution of some hundred Covenanters; who were condemned for their religious, as also for their political, opinions.

The callous jest of the judge who said "Then let them e'en glorify God in the Grassmarket!" refers to the stinging of an execution—another proof of the power and human appeal of the ancient words.

So this iron cross may well be called a martyrs' cross. Yet perhaps its most sacred association is that it watched over the last moments of those who had failed altogether with life and could say only, "We died justly."—Montreal Family Herald.

FORTUNATE

New York State is fortunate in the type of men nominated by the Republican and Democratic parties for Governor. They are both well equipped.

It is to be noted that only a crisis made it possible to force their nominations in the respective parties over the heads of the so-called "bosses."

Anytime the people get aroused they can kick the most powerful bosses in the ash can.

Lehman was nominated in spite of Curry of Tammany Hall. With his Mayor resigned and his candidate for Governor dropped by the party, Curry was beaten on every move.

Macy, the Republican leader, opposed Donovan but Donovan went to the people and won.

Any boss can be beaten anywhere when the people get aroused in spite of all last minute cooked up deals.

All Currys deals failed. Lehman was nominated largely because of Al Smith, who believes his party should govern economically and not graft.

Curry or no Curry—Walker never will be elected. Al Smith, the ablest Democrat in his State, will not stand idly by and see his city in its trying hour sacrificed.

CORRECT

Nearly two years ago The Carteret News predicted Lehman would be nominated for Governor by the Democrats of New York.

During this week, after a bitter contest between Al Smith and Curry, the so-called boss of Tammany Hall, Lehman was nominated by the Democrats as their candidate for Governor.

It is no secret that Smith opposed Curry's leadership and Jimmy Walker's carefree administration of the great metropolis' complex problems.

With Smith opposed, Walker cannot win.

The people are with Smith.

You just cannot fool all the people all the time even in Carteret.

WOMAN'S CLUB ACTIVITIES

By Isabel Lefkowitz

"All the world's a stage" they say "And the people in it actors."

But yesterday the Woman's Club confined its part of the world to the stage in the Presbyterian Church on Emerson street, where, following a covered dish luncheon which opened the club's fall activities, a one-act play entitled "Do You Remember" was enacted. The play portrayed a trip down memory lane by two elderly sisters who were looking through their album. It introduced styles in dress and music of the days of our parents and grand-parents. Several of the costumes worn were more than fifty years old. The members in the cast were as follows: Mrs. Leo R. Brown and Mrs. E. Lefkowitz, two elderly sisters; Mrs. C. Morris, grandma; Mrs. C. Sheridan, Mamie, the prima donna; Mrs. H. Harrington, Etta, the postmistress; Mrs. T. J. Nevill, Katie the seamstress; Mrs. T. G. Kenyon, Johnnie the organist; Mrs. C. Slugg and Mrs. R. Brown, Luella and Vivian, gossip; Mrs. Louis Lebowitz, Lucy, the bride; Mrs. T. Cheret, Charlie the bridegroom; Mrs. L. Ruderman, Frederick, the sport; Miss Lillian Donnelly, Nellie, the belle; Mrs. A. Chodosh, mammy. Mrs. D. Lasner introduced the play with an old time melody "Do You Remember." During the play she sang "Seeing Nellie Home." Mrs. T. Burke accompanied throughout at the piano. Vocal solos were also given by Mrs. C. Sheridan who sang "Last Night the Nightingale Woke Me," and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" which was sung by Mrs. A. Chodosh. Mrs. Kenyon sang "Abide With Me" and accompanied herself on a tiny parlor organ. Mrs. Kenyon was also director of the play.

Taxpayers' Audit

19% of your taxes go to the County, you should be interested in reading this most complete statement. Not only is it a most thorough-going set up, clear in every respect, but it is an education in itself of the functions of the County Government. It readily visualizes for you the various avenues of activity of your County what it costs for each, the sources of revenue, the disbursements and the balances on hand.

An entertainment and dance will be held by the German-American Citizens' Club on Sunday night, October 30. The committee comprises John Haas, Kurt Hoffman, Valentine Gieckner and Carl Laster.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOTES

Continuing the program of Prayer and Penitence for the month of October the pastor will speak on Sunday morning on "Consecration". The subject for the Juniors will be "Pay Dirt." At the Vesper service in the evening the delegates who attend the State Christian Endeavor Convention this week will give "Echoes from the Convention."

On Wednesday evening at the "Church Night" the theme will be "Seed Time and Harvest." The hour for this service beginning on Wednesday evening will be changed from 8:00 o'clock to 7:45.

On Thursday evening October 20th will be the Harvest Home Supper served jointly by the Ladies' Mission Band and the Mother-Teacher Association. There has been various dates printed in the press regarding this supper, varying from the 13th to the 22nd. Probably due to those reporting confusing this with other events. So it is requested that everyone note that the date is the 20th.

Beginning this week the time for the rehearsal of the Senior Choir will be changed from Thursday evening at 8:15 to Friday evening at 8:15. The Junior Choir will continue to rehearse at 7:15 on Friday evening.

There will be no meeting of the Girl Scouts on Friday evening of this week. The next meeting will be one week from Friday, October 21st.

Buses have been engaged from the Carteret Bus Service to take group of delegates to the State Christian Endeavor Convention in Somerville on Saturday. The intermediates are to take box lunches with them. Lunch will be provided for the Juniors. The buses will leave the Presbyterian Church at 8:15 and will return leaving Somerville about 3:45. All Juniors who plan to go and who have not reported to either Mrs. Doody or to the Pastor should report to Mrs. Doody not later than 8:00 o'clock on Friday evening.

ELECTRICITY

Gives a Lot for a Little

WHEN you receive your next electric bill, jot down the list of electrical appliances and the number of lamps used in your home.

Then compare the amount you pay for electric service with the total of your household expenses.

You will be amazed at how small a proportion of the whole goes for electricity and how much value is received for so little money.

Figure if there is any other expenditure for which you get so much.

When you push the button you have at your command electricity to do your washing or your ironing; to clean your home or to light it and you have rid yourself of labor and drudgery in favor of comfort and convenience.

Board of Chosen Freeholders, County of Middlesex,
 New Brunswick, N. J.
 Honorable Gentlemen:

We have completed the audit for the period from January 1, 1932, to June 30, 1932, of the accounts and records in the offices of the following County officials:

WILLIAM A. ALLGAIR, Treasurer.
CHARLES FORMAN, Surrogate.
GEORGE CATHERS, County Clerk.

The reports of the Surrogate and County Clerk are submitted under separate cover.

WE HEREBY CERTIFY, that in our opinion, the accompanying exhibits, schedules and comments set forth the true condition of the financial affairs of the County Treasurer, and Board of Chosen Freeholders, for the period under review. A copy of this report and those of the Surrogate and County Clerk will be filed in the office of the Honorable Walter R. Darby, Commissioner of Municipal Accounts of the State of New Jersey.

Respectfully submitted,
LEVINE & LIPMAN,
 (Signed) by Nathan Lipman.

COUNTY OF MIDDLESEX, STATE OF NEW JERSEY

COMMENTS

Scope of the Audit
 Our examination embraced all the accounts and supporting records in the office of the County Treasurer with the exception of those of the Sinking Fund Commission, which are audited separately by the Department of Municipal Accounts.

Your audit was conducted throughout in strict conformity with the rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner of Municipal Accounts.

May we direct your attention to Exhibits A, B, and C, the Balance Sheets of the Current, Trust and Capital Divisions of Accounts. It is suggested that these and the supporting schedules be read with our comments in order that a complete understanding may be had of your financial affairs.

Current Division
 At June 30, 1932 cash on deposit in the Current Account amounted to $304,665.62. Refer to Exhibit A-1.

All cash entered in the cash receipts book was traced to the various depositories, and was accounted for to our entire satisfaction.

We made a detailed and careful examination of all checks drawn and all vouchers paid during the period under review. We proved and reconciled all bank accounts and balances in the Current, Trust, and Capital Divisions of Accounts, and are satisfied that the figures displayed on the various exhibits correctly set forth the condition of affairs.

All vouchers for the period were carefully scrutinized for receipt, amount, and confirmation, and were traced into the voucher register, which was added and proved. All checks drawn were likewise examined and compared with the voucher register, in order to prove correct payment.

The Treasurer does not keep separate bank accounts for each section of accounts. All funds are deposited together. However, the proportion applicable to each division is easily ascertainable, and the results are entirely satisfactory.

It is our opinion that with the exception of several minor bookkeeping errors, all accounts on the Treasurer's books were correct. Kindly refer to Exhibits A-1, A-2, B-1 and C-1 for a full analysis of cash and reconciliation of bank balances.

An item in the amount of $8,000.00 described as Sheriff's Cash Loan, on Exhibit A, was cash advanced to the Sheriff by the Treasurer. This money should be refunded at the expiration of the Sheriff's term. The transaction occurred prior to January 1, 1930 and is usual and customary.

Exhibit A-7 will give you an analysis of accounts receivable at the beginning and close of the period. The 1931 taxes Receivable at June 30, 1932 amounted to $249,872.75 for Municipal Taxes and $871.51 for Bank Stock Taxes. Refer to Exhibit A-6. At June 30, 1932 your records indicated $1,723,349.51 due from municipal and bank stock taxes out of the 1932 apportionment. Refer to Exhibit A-5.

The following items were funded in the 1932 Budget. Refer to Exhibit A-4.

Emergency Appropriations	3,392.67
Deficit Miscellaneous Revenue Anticipated 1930	6,943.05
Courts Account Overexpended	15,000.00
Welfare Accounts Overexpended	25,600.00
Anticipated Revenue as budgeted to be received during the balance of 1932 amounts to $259,033.05. Refer to Exhibit A-3.

There has been expended on the Stone Quarry for the first six months of 1932, $6,102.36 (Exhibit A-1). This is shown on the Balance Sheet at this date as a deferred asset pending final allocation at the close of the year.

The cost of permanent registration in the Township of Woodbridge was $4,028.00. As this charge was not included in the 1932 budget, because when the budget was prepared the cost had not been fully settled, payment is covered by an emergency resolution. This item must be included in the 1933 budget, and we show it on our balance sheet at June 30, 1932 as a deferred asset. Refer to Exhibit A-3.

The deferred assets amounting to $32,683.39 at June 30, 1932 represent funds in the South River Trust Company and the First National Bank and Trust Company, Woodbridge, which banks are in the process of liquidation. Refer to Exhibit A-5.

Accounts Payable Reserves amounted to $39,454.76 at June 30, 1932. Refer to Exhibit A-10.

The Emergency Notes Payable at the beginning of the year were liquidated entirely during the first quarter of 1932. Refer to Exhibit A-9.

Surplus Revenue at January 1, 1932 amounted to $60,005.90.

The budget for the current year anticipated $60,000.00 leaving a balance of $5.90 at June 30, 1932. Refer to Exhibit A-11.

The Trust Account was paid $295,398.37 during the period by the Current Account, representing the sum due it at January 1, 1932.

The Unexpended Balances of appropriations at June 30, 1932 amounted to $1,606,094.95. Refer to Exhibit A-4.

Miscellaneous Revenue not anticipated and received during the current period amounted to $4,177.05. This account will be transferred to Surplus Revenue at the close of the current year.

At June 30, 1932 Tax Anticipation Notes Payable amounted to $595,000.00 and Tax Revenue Notes Payable amounted to $325,000.00. Refer to Exhibit A-9.

May we suggest that you give particular study to Exhibits A-3 and A-4 the statement of Revenues and Expenditures.

Trust Division
 All cash in this division was proved in a manner similar to that in the Current Division, and the item needs no further comment at this time. At June 30, 1932, the balance of cash in the Trust Division was $143,434.69. Refer to Exhibit B-1.

Taxes Receivable from Municipalities amounted to $871,315.24 at June 30, 1932. Refer to Exhibits B-2.

Bank Stock Tax Receivable totalled $13,618.58 at June 30, 1932. Refer to Exhibit B-4. The balance due from the Current Account at January 1, 1932 was entirely paid at June 30, 1932. Refer to Exhibit B-1.

The debit balance in the Emergency Unemployment Relief Fund at June 30, 1932 was $74.92. Refer to Exhibit B-1.

The Employees Trust Fund held a debit balance of $15,755.23 at June 30, 1932. Refer to Exhibit B-5.

At June 30, 1932:
 The Balance of Motor Vehicle fines amounted to $19.50.
 The Cash Balance in the County Detective Pension Fund was $293.81 and the cash balance in the Court Attendants Pensions and Retirement Fund was $2,401.60. Refer to Exhibit B-6.

There remained an old balance of one cent in the State Institutional Tax Account.

The County was indebted to the State of New Jersey for:

State Road Tax	$281,962.96
State School Tax	602,296.31
Soldier's Bonus Bond Tax	30,213.66
The County was indebted to various municipalities for:
State School Funds (Exhibit B-3)	67,275.46
Bank Stock Tax Payable (Exhibit B-9)	27,748.38
Motor Vehicle Fuel Fund (Exhibit B-10)	30,677.37

The credit in Township and Borough Aid Account amounted to $1,309.60.

CAPITAL DIVISION
 The verification of Capital Cash has been commented upon in the Current Division. Cash on deposit in the Capital Division at June 30, 1932 was $54,459.26. Refer to Exhibit C-1.

At June 30, 1932:
 Deferred Charges to future taxation totalled $6,519,000.00. Refer to Exhibit C-3. Improvements in progress amounted to $911,054.34. Refer to Exhibits C-5 to C-10 inclusive for a complete analysis.

Uncompleted Contracts totalled $56,818.49. Refer to Exhibit C-4. Surplus Revenue year 1937 is explained as follows:

During that year the United States Government distributed certain funds to the various states, who in turn made distribution to the counties. Middlesex County received $56,593.76 at that time, and the money was used for public purposes. However, we understand that this was not a gift, and should the amount be called for, it would be necessary for the County to pay to the State the amount received. Therefore, the item is shown on the Balance Sheet as a liability, and correspondingly as a deferred charge.

The debit balance in the Township and Borough Aid Account amounted to $427.36. Refer to Exhibit C-11.

The contractor who was overpaid $510.00 in 1930 refunded during the current period $42.71, which when added to his previous payments of $460.55 leaves a net balance receivable at June 30, 1932 of $306.74. This should be paid to the County Treasurer.

The balance in the Emergency Unemployment Relief Account at June 30, 1932 amounted to $4,408.85. Refer to Exhibit C-12.

During the period $20,000.00 was received from the Sinking Fund Commission for the reduction of Term Bonds falling due and $21,000.00 worth of Term Bonds were presented and paid. Therefore we show $1,000.00 as being receivable from the Sinking Fund Commission at June 30, 1932.

The balance due on Uncompleted contracts at June 30, 1932, totalled $56,818.49. Refer to Exhibit C-4.

The balance of Temporary Notes 3% Reserve were $18,153.43 at June 30, 1932.

Temporary Improvement Notes Payable totalled $925,000.00; Serial Bonds payable totalled $5,871,500.00; and Term Bonds totalled $647,500.00 at June 30, 1932. Refer to Exhibit C-2. In connection with our examination of the Serial and Term Bonds we made a careful audit of the bond ledgers, and found that the balances shown on Exhibit C were correct.

At January 1, 1932 payments suspended on improvements (5% retained) amounted to $2,172.85, payments through the Cash Book during this period (Exhibit C-1) totalled $1,712.30. The unexpended proportion at June 30, 1932 was $460.55.

The $2,000.00 Term Bonds Cash Payable Reserve at January 1, 1932 was entirely used to pay Term Bonds (1931) presented during the first three months of 1932. (Exhibit C-1).

The balance in the Fire Loss Account on one of the County trucks amounted to $22.60 at June 30, 1932.

The Treasurer received $27,518.00 in 1931 as insurance in the matter of the Court House Fire. We hold this item on the Balance Sheet as a reserve pending completion of alterations, at which time it will be credited to the total cost.

At January 1, 1932 Bond Issue Expense Reserve amounted to $2,380.97. Payments during the current period amounted to $1,899.00. (Exhibit C-1). The Reserve at June 30, 1932 totalled $481.97.

Summation:
 We wish to extend our thanks to Mr. Allgaier, Mr. Hamley and Mr. Galvin and their staffs; also to the members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders for the continual cooperation given us during the course of examination.

We found the records in the office of the County Treasurer, and Clerk of the Board of Chosen Freeholders to be in excellent condition.

Girl at the Top in Health Tests

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West, are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion.

A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Allgire, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test."

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

Sound Dietary Idea

Bacon, in his Regiment of Health, says: "Beware of sudden change in any great point of diet, and if necessary enforce it, fit the rest to it; for it is a secret, both in nature and state, that it is safer to change many things than one." And again: "It is a safer conclusion to say, 'This agreeeth not well with me, therefore I will not continue it.'"

THE CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE days were growing shorter and the nights cooler. The leaves of the Green Forest, except those on the pine and the spruce and the hemlock trees, were turning red and yellow and brown and dropping to carpet the ground and rustle beneath unwary feet. As often as possible Peter Rabbit slipped over to the pond of Paddy the Beaver to see if Mr. and Mrs. Quack and the ten young Quacks were still there, and each time he found them growing more and more uneasy. He knew that it would take very little to start them on their long journey to spend the coming winter in the far away Southland—the sight of other ducks flying overhead or a sudden fright.

Just at dusk every evening they flew over to the Big River to feed among the rushes there, Mr. Quack leading. His wing, which had been broken by shot from a terrible gun in the spring, was as sound and strong as ever. In fact, Mr. Quack was quite himself, big, strong and handsome. As for the young Quacks, they were full grown now and eager to try their wings in long flights and to see the Great World. Very early every morning they returned to the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest to spend the day resting, sleeping and perhaps playing a little. At least, the young Quacks played.

One afternoon Peter slipped away from the dear Old Brier Patch over to the Green Forest and hurried straight to the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Peter had something on his mind. Just by chance he had peeped out of the dear Old Brier Patch in time to see a man passing, and under one arm he carried a terrible gun. There was no doubt about that. Peter knows a terrible gun when he sees it. He watched the man out of sight and he disappeared in the direction of the Big River. Right away Peter thought of the Quack family. Just supposing that hunter should be hiding near where the Quacks usually ate their evening meal! Peter shivered a little at the thought of what might happen. Mr. and Mrs. Quack ought to be warned and there was no one to do it but himself.

Peter started early enough, but as is his way he had to stop ever so many times to look at things which aroused his curiosity. When he had satisfied it he would scamper lipperty-lipperty-lip as fast as he could until something else stopped him. So it was almost the Quack dinner time when at last, quite out of breath, he reached the edge of the pond of Paddy the Beaver. He was greatly relieved to see all the Quack family still there.

"Oh," he panted. "I'm just in time." "Just in time for what?" asked Mr. Quack.

"To warn you that it isn't safe for you to go to the Big River tonight," cried Peter. "I saw a hunter with a terrible gun going that way this afternoon and he may be there yet."

If Peter expected that his news would excite the Quack family, he was mistaken, very much mistaken. In fact, it wasn't news at all. "We saw a hunter over there last night, and so we knew that the time has come for us to go," explained Mr. Quack. "We're ever so much obliged to you, Peter, for trying to warn us, and we're glad you've come in time to say good-by. Perhaps we'll see you again next spring. Take care of yourself and don't let Reddy Fox catch you." "Good-by and good luck," cried Peter and Paddy the Beaver together.

Mr. Quack swam out to the head of his flock. Very faintly from far away there came the bang of a gun. As if this was a signal, Mr. Quack shot into

HOW TO COOK RABBIT

THERE are few people who do not like the gamey flavor of wild things. However, the following recipes may be used for the tame rabbit as well. For those fortunate enough to have several rabbits on hand and who wish to keep them for later use, the following is a good recipe:

Pickled Rabbit.

Prepare the rabbit as for roasting. Place in a stone crock or jar and cover with one pint each of vinegar and water, one onion (into which stick three cloves), two bayleaves, half dozen allspice, one dozen pepper corns, one dozen chili peppers cut into halves. Let the rabbit remain in this liquid for three days, turning it occasionally. Drain and stew it, or braise it. To braise it cut one-eighth pound of salt pork into slices to cover the bottom of the baking pan. Place sliced onion, carrot and turnip and celery over the pork. Lay the meat on this and dredge with seasoned flour. Cover and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. Pour one pint of stock over the meat, dredge again with flour, salt and pepper. Cook very slowly closely covered for two hours or longer. During the last half hour cook uncovered to brown the meat. Serve on a hot platter. Strain a portion of the gravy over the rabbit and the rest; serve in a gravy boat. Keep the pan from the bottom of the oven with a grate or ring all during the cooking.

Belgian Hare.

Clean and split a hare, season with salt and pepper and lard with strips of fat salt pork across the back and the legs. Place in a baking pan with a small amount of brown stock and carrot, onion and celery cooked in a little fat. Baste the hare often with the stock in the pan and bake forty-five minutes. Add one cupful of cream, the juice of a lemon and one tablespoonful of cornstarch made smooth with cold water. Baste and cook twenty minutes longer, then serve the sauce, strained.

the air, and behind him rose all the other Quacks. There was a shrill sound of whistling wings, which grew fainter and fainter until it could no longer be heard. High in the air twelve black specks grew smaller and smaller and then disappeared. Mr. and Mrs. Quack and their ten children had started on their long, terrible journey to the faraway Southland.

Peter felt a lump in his throat. "I do hope nothing will happen to them," he said in a husky voice.

"If it were not for the hunters with terrible guns, nothing would, for Mr. Quack is smart enough to keep them from all other dangers and he has brought his children up to mind. They're as well trained a lot of young ducks as ever I've seen, and I've seen a great many," replied Paddy. "But I dread those terrible guns," he added.

I WILL

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

FEW things are done because we can, Or not because we can't. To will is something greater than To wish, to only want. We do not lose because the day Was dark, or high the hill; We do not win because we may, We win because we will.

Men lose who might have won success, Who "couldn't," yet they could. Men win who nothing more possess Than hope and hardhood. Because they can't men do not lose, Because they can, achieve; The winners win because they choose, And nothing else believe.

Who thinks that he can fail has failed Before he makes a start, But "can't" has never yet prevailed Against a dauntless heart. The man who "can" may be too sure, Who "can't" is weaker still; But no misfortune can endure Before the man who "will."

Trees That "Migrated"

Millions of Years Ago If you want to see what the forests of California and Oregon looked like millions of years ago, just take a trip to South America. There, on the slopes of the Venezuelan Andes, you may see living trees that closely resemble species once native to the western coast of North America, a Carnegie Institute of Washington expedition to this South American region has revealed. This discovery, made by Prof. Ralph W. Chaney of the University of California and Dr. Erling Dorf of Princeton university, was based on a comparison of the foliage of the South American trees with leaf prints of the ancient west coast trees that are found as fossils in the rocks of today. It upholds the theory that the forests that once existed in North America were pushed south as the climate became increasingly cold and dry.—Detroit Free Press.

Population Movement

The United States Department of Agriculture estimates that 1,472,000 persons left farms for towns and cities in 1931, and that 1,679,000 persons moved farmward. The gain in number of persons living on farms was 648,000. For the year 1930 it was estimated that 1,766,000 persons moved from cities to farms and 1,727,000 persons moved from farms to cities—these two movements almost balancing each other. There was a slight decrease in the number of persons going to farms in 1931, and a considerable decrease in the number going to cities.

Bacillus of Tetanus

During the World War the well cultivated fields in the north of France were found to teem with the bacillus of tetanus, whose ravages among the wounded would have been appallingly heavy but for the timely use of that antoxin which was available, thanks to the researches of Baron Shibasaburo Kitasato many years earlier. The story of Kitasato, a pioneer of medicine and a microbe hunter, is told by Dr. Claude Lillingston in Hygeia Magazine.

The Parade

"Do you enjoy a parade?" "Immensely," answered Senator Sorghum. "All that the crowd expects to hear is the band, and nobody would be so silly as to try to heckle the music."

SUMMARY OF IMPROVEMENTS IN PROGRESS

THE FEATHERHEADS

By Osborne

On the Funny Side

AS NEAR AS POSSIBLE

Two young men were in earnest conversation on matters regarding the fair sex. "How could you be so deceitful as to tell Miss Prim she was pretty?" asked Cuthbert. "I wasn't deceitful at all," replied Basil. "But, my dear man," said Cuthbert, "you don't mean to say you think she is actually pretty?" "Of course not," replied his companion. "What I told her was that she was as pretty as she could be."—Stray Stories.

HARD TO BELIEVE

Mr. Slowwit—I'er-er-am going to tell you something that er-er-will no doubt surprise you. L'er-er-think— Miss Kutting—Well, that is a surprise. Funny I never noticed it before. How long have you been thinking?

But They Are Doing It

"Where are you going in such a hurry?" "Just taking a train for Hollywood. Got a wonderful idea for the movie people." "So?" "Yes. They've been overlooking a golden opportunity in the making of films. I'm going to advise them to add the name of the third assistant janitor."

Experience Speaks

Father—Why won't you marry Fritz? Daughter—I will only marry a man who knows life and has learnt its sorrows. Father—I see, a widower.—Deutsche Illustrierte (Berlin).

Mere Bagatelle

Landlady (discussing world's troubles)—I suppose we must be prepared for anything these days. Boarder (eyeing his helping)—Yes—or at any rate for hardly anything!

A Coming Executive

Father—So you want to marry my daughter, eh? Have you any business judgment? Suiter—Well, sir, I'm trying to get into your family, am I not?—Answers.

STERN, COLD FACT

"Most of our ills are purely imaginary." "Yes. But when you eat mushrooms and develop toadstool symptoms there is usually something more than imagination to be reckoned with."

Color Scheme

A little girl, three years old, was asked what kind of ice cream she would like to have. After hesitating a few minutes she replied: "I think vanilla would look best on my dress."—Detroit News.

Calling It Even

Mr. Mayem (with his lawyer's bill in hand)—Sir, this charge is outrageous! His Lawyer (blandly)—But so was the charge against which I defended you.—Stray Stories.

A Bedtime Story

Mrs. Kitten—I heard Jones and his wife fighting last night. Mrs. Cat—Is that so? Mrs. Kitten—Yes, they were fighting over the radio. Mrs. Cat—Goodness! What won't they broadcast next!

Not Exactly

"Don't you agree that Time is the greatest healer?" "He may be—but he's certainly no beauty specialist."—Moustique.

GEORGE WASHINGTON
GENERAL AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE ARMY OF THE UNITED COLONIES

JOHN ADAMS OF MASSACHUSETTS

THE Fates were at work. At the proper moment John Adams rose and nominated Colonel George Washington as General and Commander in Chief of the Army of the United Colonies. His selection was made unanimous.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S PISTOLS

THIS Second Continental Congress convened in Philadelphia in May 1775, in Independence Hall with John Hancock of Massachusetts as president. Again Washington was a delegate, saying little, thinking much. This time the people were not for peace. All efforts toward that end had been given up as last and sterner measures were needed.

Beat Emerson 12 To 0 In Last Home Game

Coach Frank (Mac) McCarthy's Carteret H. S. eleven closed its home season here Saturday with a 12-0 conquest over Emerson High of Union City, its second of the still infant season.

The touchdowns were made by "Chappy" Thatcher, the diminutive quarterback, and Tony Szulimowski. The Blue and White's first score came near the end of the first quarter. An exchange of kicks gave Carteret the ball on its own thirty-seven yard line.

Trivanovitch carried to midfield on the next play and then passed to Thatcher, who ran forty yards through a broken field in as fine an exhibition of open field running witnessed here in many a game for a touchdown. In the second period Carteret took a punt on Emerson's thirty-one. Thatcher advanced the ball eight yards and Kosel's pass was good for twenty yards. Szulimowski skirted around right end for the second and final touchdown of a well played game.

Towards the close, Emerson threatened to cross the local's goal but with the ball on Carteret's fifteen, a pass was grounded over the end zone, giving the Blue and White the ball.

Thatcher again was the leading ground gainer and was given brilliant aid by Szil Szulimowski and Mike Trivanovitch. In the line, Spewak and D'Zurilla played noteworthy parts.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25¢ at all stores. ©1931, C. M. Co.

1,022 Persons Given Aid Here

According To Report Read Before Mayor and Council

At the Council meeting held on Wednesday, John Donahue, Chairman of the emergency aid committee, said that the Borough now was aiding 356 families. He listed the total receiving relief as 1022. It appears practically all of this comes from State Relief and a resolution was introduced asking the State for even more than the usual allotment, this time $6000.00.

Bids on stone and tar were received for Longfellow Street, which it was announced some time ago was to be paved with state aid.

The lowest bidder on stone was reported to be F. R. Upton of Newark and for tar the Union Building and Construction Company with $1770.00.

A letter was received from the Motor (Vehicle Department) for the request for a light at the junction of Lawrence Street and Hazelwood avenue had been referred to the engineering Department.

PLANS PROGRAM FOR ARMISTICE

Includes Parade To Be Followed by Dance.

The Armistice Day program of the local Post of the American Legion was worked out at the meeting held at its rooms on Tuesday night. Armistice Day, November 12th, falls on a Saturday this year and the Carteret Post No. 263 of the American Legion program calls for a parade followed by a dance in the evening. The celebration is to be in charge of William E. Hagan, who was named chairman. On the committee assisting him will be John Phillip, Harold Gleckner, John Katusa, Harold Edwards and William Sak.

At the meeting it was announced that arrangements were under way for a joint card party with the Woman's Auxiliary of the Legion. It is expected by the next meeting of the Legion that the date will have been fixed by the committee and be announced at that time. The committee in charge of the card party includes Clifford Cutter, John Katusa, Harry Gleckner and William E. Hagan.

Dayton Hopper of Pershing Avenue is gravely ill at the Perth Amboy General Hospital.

NO OFFER FOR BONDS

Despite its comparatively preferred position, the City of Linden did not receive a bid for its bonds either for municipal purposes or school purposes following recently advertised attempt to sell same.

CHILDREN CASH BANK'S CHECKS

Woodbridge Dismiss Its Schools for Occasion.

The schools in Woodbridge are to be dismissed this afternoon in order to let the children get their dividend payments from the bank. The dividend payment is being made from the Woodbridge National Bank and Trust Company by the Federal receiver.

The bank has no facilities now, of course, for cashing the checks.

Through the courtesy of the Carteret Bank and Trust Company the citizens of that community who bank at the Woodbridge National Bank and Trust Company are receiving payment of their dividends directly.

It is understood that over $300,000.00 has been paid out and by Saturday over 11,000 checks will have been cashed by those acting for the Carteret Bank and Trust Company.

The Carteret Bank and Trust Company has cashed all these checks without a single charge of any account.

Without this courtesy to a neighboring community by the Carteret Bank and Trust Company, the 11,000 accounts would have to do the best they could wherever they could to cash their checks, probably paying a premium in most cases.

The Carteret Bank and Trust Company, provided the cash, over $300,000.00, and the tellers to take care of the disbursements.

The Federal receivers and the community in general in Woodbridge seem to be highly appreciative of the courtesy and neighborly act of the Carteret institution.

See "BACK STREET" at the RITZ THEATRE, Thursday or Friday.

SCHOOL FIGURES

According to the report filed last week with the Board of Education, enrollment in the schools showed a decrease in the elementary classes of 161 and an increase in high school enrollment of 90. The decrease in the elementary schools is equivalent to approximately five classes.

The total enrollment was given as 2,756 for September. The attendance percentage is listed as 97.48.

BISHOP VISITS LOCAL CHURCH

St. Demetrius Church Is Honored by Rev. Zuk.

The largest affair ever held by the Ukrainians in this community was celebrated Sunday commencing with a visitation at St. Demetrius Ukrainian Church in the morning by the Right Reverend Joseph A. Zuk, Bishop, with appropriate ceremonies inside and out and followed later in the day by a banquet at Slovak Sokol hall under the combined auspices of the various Ukrainian organizations.

The occasions was the canonical visitation at St. Demetrius Church by Dr. Zuk who is bishop of the Eastern Orthodox and Apostolic Church of North America and formerly pastor of St. Demetrius Ukrainian Church of this Borough.

The congregation headed by John Ginda, M. Pawlik, John Gural, Stephen Kutcy and representatives of many Ukrainian societies greeted the Bishop in behalf of the parish and turned over to him the key to the church and welcomed him with a ceremony of bread and salt, an ancient custom of faith. The Bishop and his associate clergymen passed through a floral arch and were greeted on every side inside the church with profuse floral decorations.

The school children dressed in white strewed the path of the Bishop with flowers. Following the general greeting outdoors by the trustees and representatives of the various organizations, the Bishop celebrated a pontifical mass assisted by the Very Reverend Michael Lysiak, pastor of the Ukrainian Church of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin of Perth Amboy; the Very Reverend Father Boris of Brooklyn, and the Reverend Father John Hundiak, the new pastor of the local Ukrainian Church. There was an overflow attendance at the church which included not only members of the church and those belonging to the various Ukrainian societies, but numerous other leading citizens of the community.

In the afternoon a banquet was held at Slovak Hall under the auspices of the Ukrainian Business Men's Association and the Ukrainian League. Among the speakers at the banquet were Mayor Joseph A. Hermann who welcomed the Bishop in behalf of the community. Other speakers were Reverend Father Andrew Ivanshyn and Reverend Father John Hundiak, now the local Ukrainian pastor.

John Ginda, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the church, presented the Bishop with a purse of gold. Following presentation, Bishop Zuk responded to the various addresses expressing his appreciation of the reception received. The recently elected Bishop makes his home in Carteret and was pastor of St. Demetrius Church until he was elevated. The local church here is designated the Cathedral of the Ukrainian Diocese of the United States and Canada.

At the banquet the Ukrainian flavor was evident on every hand. Ukrainian folk songs were sung by a choir of the local church led by Alexander Lawrei who is director of the choir.

Edward J. Walsh officiated as the toastmaster at the banquet.

SLATED FOR POST IN GRAND LODGE

John S. Olbricht Candidate for Office.

The local Foresters Court Carteret No. 48, of America have now got the movement under way to bring to this Borough the office of Grand Chief Ranger of the organization.

The Chief Ranger is elected at the annual convention which will be held next year at Atlantic City in the latter part of May.

The local Court's candidate is Grand Sub-chief Ranger John S. Olbricht, who has been active in affairs of local Foresters for many years. "Botehy" as he is better known, has been Fire Chief and held office of one kind or another in the Fire Department for a number of years.

The local organization has now got the movement well under way and will probably contact other Courts and carry on pre-convention campaign work prior to the May meeting. Very likely Assemblyman Elmer E. Brown, who recently joined the Foresters, will be put forward as one of the spokesman nominators for Court Carteret choice of Chief Ranger.

MAYOR HERMANN EXPLAINS ISSUES

At the Democratic rally held at the Nathan Hale School, when a card party was staged, Joseph A. Hermann, running for re-election for Mayor, gave out a statement as to why there was no reduction in tax rate in 1931, the first year of his present term.

The Mayor alleged that no reduction in rate in 1930 was possible due to the overexpenditures of his predecessors.

He claimed they had left on the doorstep of the incoming administration approximately $45,000.00 of deficits for 1930 which should have gone into the direct cost of government in 1930.

This he said was made up of over-estimates of anticipated income and underestimates of the amount it was expected to spend.

The present Mayor insisted that his predecessor had spent more than was in the budget creating a deficit on that account.

Added to this, the Mayor claimed, was a deficit due to the failure of the Borough to receive the amounts for licenses and other fees estimated by the Mulvihill administration.

The present Mayor insisted that under the circumstances he did a good job to hold the rate in 1931 the same as in 1930. In short he contended that he carried on the government as efficiently as the previous administration and at the same time absorbed $45,000.00 of over-expenditures and underestimates of the previous outfit that did the spending.

See "BACK STREET" at the RITZ THEATRE, Thursday or Friday.

ONE MORE

The second pay day has gone by for Board of Education employees of Garfield without any pay. Three weeks ago they received $10 on account. Members of the faculty are owed for half of April, all of May, June, September and the first part of October. There is no other present source from which the municipality can get immediate cash. Tax payments for the second half are not due until December 1st.

MAHOGANY MILL MAY BE LOST

Slump in Industry May Cause Consolidation.

One of the worst hit industries in the United States today is that of the mahogany furniture lumber industry, so that it was not surprising when the news was announced today of a merger yesterday of three companies representing four mills, including the I. T. Williams & Sons plant at Carteret.

Details have not been worked out sufficiently to know which of the plants will be retained after the plans are worked out as to which it will be more economical to operate for such little business as exists.

The continued drop in demand for the products on any scale making it impossible for the retention of all the properties as going units under present conditions and present outlook induced the consolidation.

It is understood each of negotiating companies attempted to hold on as long as it could but it clearly developed that with even a fair increase in trade over what has existed for the past four years would be insufficient to keep the four mills in operation even at a small loss.

The consolidating companies are the I. T. Williams & Sons, Otis Mahogany Company and Astoria Mahogany Corporation.

The latter has a mill at Astoria Long Island in a position to take care of the New York City trade, in fact closer to it than the Carteret Mill of I. T. Williams and Sons.

The Otis Company has a large Mill at New Orleans well situated to care for such business as may exist in the middle West or the South, better situated from a freight angle than the present plant of the I. T. Williams and Sons here for such trade. The Otis Company also has a big mill at Peru from which place from time to time lumber has been sent to Carteret for milling. This would mean that the consolidated company could do its milling of Peru mahogany right at the source to take care of such business as might exist in South America and abroad.

The Borough has been looking forward to the I. T. Williams plant taking its share of the pick-up in employment when conditions improve and the loss of the plant in these times would be a bad blow.

See "BACK STREET" at the RITZ THEATRE, Thursday or Friday.

Two in Accident

Two Borough residents figured in an automobile accident, one on the delivering end and one on the receiving end on Tuesday, when a light delivery truck driven by Steve Alach hit William House at Roosevelt avenue and Edwin street.

Alach, who resides at 16 Chrome avenue, alleged that House stepped directly into the path of the car without warning.

The injured man was taken to the office of Dr. Samuel Messenger who treated him for cuts on the scalp and both hands. The vehicle belonged to the Nonpareil Laundry Company of Perth Amboy.

Engineers Give Time Extension

Sixty Days Time Granted To Municipalities To File Report

AL TELLS 'EM
Al Smith went to Tammany Hall's den on Wednesday night and said:
"The Party must reduce expenses in the city. Here is the place to say it and you are the people to tell it to."
—That a boy—Al—What a President you would have made.

The Rahway River Commission which appeared at Washington at a hearing on September 26th, was granted a time extension of sixty days to enable it to prepare and submit additional data concerning reported commerce on the river and savings that would occur to business in the district due to the proposed deepening and widening.

There were several proposals given consideration in connection with the requested deepening and widening of the Rahway River. The first proposal was for a 12-foot channel, 120 feet wide, from the mouth of the river to the Route No. 25 Highway Bridge, to cost with maintenance, over one million dollars. Report of the District Engineer called for a contribution by the interested municipalities of twenty-five per cent of this cost before any action should be taken by the Government.

Another proposal was a 10-foot channel from the Staten Island Sound to about 1000 feet above the Sound Shore Railroad bridge. This channel was to be 120 feet wide up to that point. From that point it was to be 100 feet wide to the vicinity of Lambert's Dock for the purpose of forming a turning basin. The idea here was that such barges as should go up as far as Lambert's Dock in Linden would have an opportunity to turn around in this basin as dredged out. The same, of course, would apply to any barges used on the Carteret side.

A third proposal was an eight foot channel, 120 feet wide, which was to run 1,000 feet above the Sound Shore Railroad. From that point it was to be 100 feet wide to a point just above Lambert's Wharf, widening out at the bends for a turning basin. The estimated cost of this was about $35,400 with $8,000 additional for maintenance provided. In this connection the municipalities were to construct at least one wharf suitable for barge traffic within a half mile of the head of the improvement and furnish free of cost to the United States suitable areas for disposal of dredged material.

It is believed that the municipalities affected seeking some aid for the widening and dredging of the Rahway River will concentrate on one of the latter proposals, which would be without cost to the municipalities for actual dredging work but would require expenditures for docks, one in each municipality, and other equipment.

The method in vogue in the past in the War department is to obtain (Continued on Editorial Page)

NOT SO BAD

As noted in a news story of the Carteret News last week, there were 28 births recorded in this Borough in the past month, the month of September.

The addresses indicate that the new Carteret natives are pretty well scattered as to location in the municipality.

According to the census figures, the death rate in the municipality has dropped from 5.5 per thousand in 1929 to 4.3 per thousand in 1931.

So all in all this is a splendid showing for Carteret. It indicates the stork is still on the job and that our municipality had a comparatively low death rate.

It would appear to indicate but 44 deaths in Carteret in a year based on the probable existing population. This is not the only time that the Federal figures have indicated that Carteret is a healthy community. A few years back the Census Bureau made the statement based on the combined birth rate and death rate, this was the most healthy community in the United States. This in spite of some of the hot air about what a terrible place Carteret is to live in. It is apparently one of the most healthy places in the United States.

What is more the official figures indicate that with a remarkable low death rate and with a comparatively small population and a small area in which to grow, Carteret is no place for the proposed cemetery grab. The real estate crowd that is trying to unload on the backs of the already over-burdened taxpayers would have a cemetery here of 170,000 graves.

CHAPTER XI—Continued

Stark clutched at the railing of the porch to steady himself. He moistened his lips and the Adam's apple in his throat moved up and down spasmodically. "You got a nerve to ask me that, you d—d murderer," he got out at last.

Not for an instant did Wilson release his fear-filled eyes.

"Were you with Gtner between ten o'clock and eleven the morning yore father was shot?" he repeated steadily. "I don't remember right now whether I was. Why?"

"Where were you at that time?" Jasper, sweating blood, appealed to the judge. "Do I have to stand for his insults, Mr. Fletcher?"

"Not unless they have a hearing on this case. You'll have to show the connection, Wils."

The defending attorney smiled. He had got all the effect he wanted, all he could reasonably hope for. "I reckon I'll withdraw the question, Mr. Fletcher. Far as I'm concerned the witness may step down."

Limply Jasper descended. He felt himself the focus of a battery of eyes. As his glance dodged evasively from one to another he knew they raked him with a new-born suspicion skillfully planted in their minds. Beneath the shock of it he quailed.

Ann Gifford was the third witness. Julia stood beside her while she testified. It was impossible for her to tell her story without emotion, especially that part of it which referred to her sister Nora.

Once Julia, her arms around the young woman, interrupted in a low voice. "Does she have to tell this here, Mr. Fletcher?"

The lawyer answered gently. "A life is at stake. I think she had better tell what she knows."

So Ann told the story, from the day when her sister first met Tom McCardle to the morning when she shot at him and left the man for dead. The impression of that story upon the tense crowd packing the square was remarkable. She told the facts in the simplest possible way, but many of those listening were convicted of guilt. The tragedy that had filled the lives of these girls had been made possible because the men and women who lived near had ostracised them. She told how Stone had tried to be her friend and how in the bitterness of her despair she had pushed him from her with the others.

"Did you see Jasper Stark after Tom McCardle was shot?" Wilson asked.

"Yes. He came to the ranch. He had been there several times to see my sister Ethel, but I did not know it till one day I found him with her. He was bullying her to marry him with the threat that if she didn't he would send me to the penitentiary for killing Tom McCardle."

"What did you tell him?"

"Told him I wouldn't buy his silence at the price of my little sister's unhappiness, and if he wanted to tell what he knew he could."

"What did he say?"

"He started toward her in his bullying way. I drew a revolver and drove him off the place."

There was a murmur of approval that passed through the crowd like a breeze.

"Had he offered to keep still about you if yore sister would marry him?"

"Yes."

From Jasper Stark, at the outskirts of the crowd, came a hoarse denial. "That's a lie."

them along which they passed among murmurs of approval.

The only remaining witness was Dave Stone himself. He looked round, quiet-eyed and fearless, waiting for the examination to begin.

The story he told was the same one he had narrated to the sheriff. Haskell questioned him briefly, then waved a hand to young McCann.

Wilson led him again through an account of the shooting.

"Did you fire in self-defense, to save yore own life?" he asked at last.

The Texan hesitated. "I did an' I didn't," he said. "He was reachin' for his gun when I started for mine. It was him or me, one. Lookin' at it that way, I'd call it self-defense. But before that, if I hadn't told him what a low-down onery lobo wolf he was, I reckon there wouldn't of been any gun play. I expect I called for a show-down when I served notice I'd kill him if he troubled the yore women at the sheep ranch any more."

"When you fired, was his gun out?"

"Yes, sir. In the clear."

"He reached for his first?"

"That was the way of it. I beat him to the draw."

Wilson passed to another point. "Did you tell Jasper Stark or Carl Gtner that you intended to get Tom McCardle?"

"No."

"Did you say anything like that at all, anything about having quarreled with him?"

"No. I never had a word with him in my life till the time I shot him."

"Good friends, were you?"

"No, sir. The Texan's denial came cold and hard.

"Meanin' what?"

"Meanin' that I knew he was a cur an' suspected what he had done to that 'll girl at the sheep ranch. He knew where he stood with me an' kept his distance."

"Is there any reason why Jas Stark or Carl Gtner might want you outa the way?"

"Yes."

"You know something about them. That it?"

"Yes."

ing to Dunwig's park were not over-welcome. They had to come well recommended as bad citizens. The Starks were not that, in spite of the lawless streak in them.

"Don't worry about Jas," his companion said, hastening to reassure Dunwig. "He's all right." The particular emphasis he gave the words meant that he was all wrong.

"Better fall off an' light," their host suggested.

They cared for their horses and entered the cabin.

Before he slept that night Jasper was committed to a new course of crime. He did not pledge himself to it of his own choice, for he felt it was dangerous. But Gtner knew too much about him. It was too late to draw back now. He had forfeited the option of being his own master.

For almost a year there had been systematic rustling in the hills. The cattlemen had at first been loath to believe it. Even after the evidence was too plain to deny, they had been inclined to think the offender must be some Mexican nigger. But of late the number of missing cattle pointed to organized robbery. Someone was running stock across the border and selling it.

It was a mark of Jasper Stark's decision that his reluctance to joining the rustlers was due to no moral scruples. Yet he had been brought up in a country where the crime ranked as a capital one. All the teaching of his youth reinforced this view. A rustler was a slinking coyote of the desert, to be shot down or hanged if caught red-handed. He had hotly argued this more than once. Now he had slid into that company of the furtive-eyed who must ride crooked trails and look upon all honest folk as potential enemies.

"We'll make a stake, settle our scores with Wilson McCann an' maybe Dave Stone, too, then light out for Sonora," Gtner predicted.

With a few drinks under his belt it was easy for Jasper to believe that this would come true. He would get away from this part of the country where he had been forced to get in so bad and he would make a fresh start in another land. He would have enough to buy a hacienda, maybe not a large place but a comfortable one, he would marry a soft-eyed senorita, and the years of his life would unroll as a pleasant vista of happiness. So he deluded himself, as so many of us do, with the hallucination that the joy of living comes from outward circumstances rather than from within.

The method used by the rustlers of Dunwig's park was a simple one. They stole only cattle running in the hills within a day's drive of their holding place. Most of their work was done at night. No brands were altered till they reached the safety of the pasture ground at the end of the hidden canyon. Here the rustled stock was kept until a dark night made it comparatively safe to rush them over Horse Thief pass and down across the border.

To avert suspicion, Gtner and Jasper bought a few mining tools and some dynamite for blasting. Occasionally they rode down to Mesa and spent a day or two there. Both at Pedro's place and at the Gilt Edge they heard stories of the rustling that was depleting the herds of the cattlemen.

"The Cattlemen's association doing anything about it or just shootin' off its mouth?" Jasper asked when the subject was mentioned at Basford's emporium.

Simp Shell answered. "I understand they've put it in the hands of a committee to investigate. Wils McCann is at the head of the committee, an' he's some go-getter, that boy is."

Simp's bland smile denied any specific personal meaning to this. "An' yore brother Phil is a member of it, too. The talk is that they mean business."

"Since when has Phil been kow-towin' to Wils McCann?" Jasper demanded angrily. "If my father had been living Phil wouldn't be doing business with the McCanns. That's a cinch."

"You got the wrong angle to this thing, Jas," the fat man told him amiably. "The time for feuds in this part of the country is past. I've not heard that Phil an' Wils have shook hands, but if so they surely have done right. They're both mighty nice boys, an' there's no reason in the world why they shouldn't be friends."

"Except that Wils McCann killed Father," Stark retorted harshly. "You can claim that Father served notice he was aimin' to shoot McCann. I'm no denyin' that. But that don't make it right for Phil to have any dealings with the man who waylaid Father."

"No—if Wils did," Simp said evenly. "I've been hearin' Dave Stone's story. It's right interesting. By his way of it Wils comes pretty near havin' an alibi."

"Why not?" Jasper asked truculently. "Ain't it up to one killer to stand by another? Didn't the McCanns save him after he killed Tom McCardle? You're certainly easy, Simp."

Jasper turned on his heel insolently and swaggered away.

CHAPTER XII

On a Hot Trail

Peter McCann stood before the open fireplace in his living room frowning at Joe Walters, one of his cowpunchers. He looked like a grim gray judge of the old school finished in brown leather.

"I won't have it, Joe," he said harshly. "While you're workin' for me you'll obey orders. Any time that

Eagle Long Associated With Pomp and Majesty

The Persian monarchs adopted the eagle as a symbol of monarchy, the Assyrians carved it in stone along with their other emblems of power, as did the Egyptians also. Poets of antiquity termed it the king of birds as the lion was dubbed the king of beasts.

From the time when a Tuscan embassy visited Rome, on a message of kindness and encouragement to a young nation, bearing among other gifts a splendid royal scepter surmounted by a carved ivory eagle, such majestic figures, first of wood, then of metal, were the standards borne by the Roman legions. Napoleon Bonaparte, in boastful emulation of those conquerors of the world, replaced the oriflamme and other battle flags of France with gilded eagles, which, however, disappeared with the Napoleonic dynasty.

Russia, Prussia, Spain, Poland, Sicily, and Sardinia had already made the eagle their national bird, as did later the United States.

Nor can the respect this powerful and rapacious bird evoked from mankind generally be wondered at, when its size, its powers of flight and of attack, its dignity in repose and on the wing, its ferocity and its beautiful parental care of its young are taken into account.

Brief Assyrian Greatness
The Assyrians were warlike, ruthless and cruel, and although great organizers, gave little time or thought to interior decoration that did not emphasize the greatness of their kings. Assyrian furniture was heavy and dull. Its decorations consisted largely of scenes which pictured the vengeance inflicted upon the enemies of their kings. A table supported upon the backs of slaves or vanquished foes was the Assyrian's idea of beauty. Scenes depicting frightful punishments and sufferings were not uncommon on articles of household, palace or temple use. But it was a short-lived period and gave nothing to the furniture arts, not even to the Greeks, whose glory heightened over the dying shadows of Assyrian greatness.

Counting a Million
The time it would take to count a million coins would depend upon the person. In the counting room at the Treasury department the silver is usually weighed rather than counted. An estimate has been made, however, that counting at the rate of 1 a second and 8 hours a day, it would take a person about 35 days to count one million coins.

don't suit you, why, you can ride down the road. I'll not have you pull yore picket pin. I'm boss on this ranch."

Walters looked down resentfully at his dusty hat. He was on the carpet, and his defense had been brushed aside. He felt this was not just, for it was a perfectly good one. But the old man was so bullheaded there was no use talking to him. Yet it had not been very long since Walters had been shot and wounded by some of the Circle Cross outfit and McCann had offered a thousand-dollar reward to find out who had done it. Now Walters was having the riot act read to him because he had knocked down one of the Stark vaqueros. Sure enough times had changed.

"I wasn't lookin' for trouble," he explained again. "Not none. That bird was full of forty rod an' ran on me aplenty. What's a fellow to do?"

"Weren't hogtied, were you? Nothing kept you from walking out of the Gilt Edge when he started, was there?"

"Want me to stick my tail between my legs an' run away every time some guy gets biggity with me?"

"You got my orders, Joe. If he belongs to the Circle Cross, duck trouble. I'm putting an end to this feud an' that is the only way to do it. I'd take the same medicine myself I ask you to swallow. If it don't suit you, get yore time. That's short an' sweet."

Walters grumbled but surrendered. He knew when he had a good job and he had no intention of giving it up.

Peter McCann wrote a note to Phil Stark and in it asked him to meet him at Garcia's water hole, a half-way point between the ranches. The answer came in a feminine hand. It was signed by Julia. She said that Phil was away on business connected with the Cattlemen's association but she would keep the appointment in his place.

Comes the Bride in Lovely Velvet

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

According to fashion's prediction it's to be "all velvet" for many a lovely autumn bride. The glory of velvet will also be reflected in the realm of the bridesmaid, in that this picturesque individual is to wear most ravishing headgear (brimmed or brimless) together with little jackets and other such fantasies as neck ruffles, girdles, bows and muffs made all of velvet in as delectable colors as fancy can picture.

The whereof of this flair for velvet for the smart bridal cortege is easily accounted for in that the call of the new modes is for the most beautiful and luxurious fabrics that it is possible for human ingenuity to devise. Naturally fashion turns to velvet as the exponent of all that is coveted in the way of sumptuous weaves for, we ask you, was there ever a material which so perfectly interprets the desired note of elegance as velvet?

One of the charms of velvet as a medium for the wedding gown is that it shows handsomest when it is styled with utmost simplicity. The wedding gowns pictured bear out this statement. The classic simplicity of these models instantly makes its appeal to discriminating taste.

A very interesting feature about these gowns is that an entirely different type of velvet is employed in the making of each. The exquisite gown to the left in the picture declares in favor of the new dull-surfaced white velvet. The suppleness and draping qualities of the velvet yield graciously to the soft puff treatment of the sleeves and at the neck of the directoire bodice. The cap is trimmed with petals made of the same dull velvet.

Shown to the right is a bride who chooses white transparent velvet for her gown in a simple princess line unadorned—enhancing her own loveliness by the luster and quality of the fabric. The wide-at-the-shoulder sleeves and the high neckline are details to be noted. She carries a little prayer book instead of a bouquet.

Speaking of velvet-hatted bridesmaids, an early this-season wedding scene took on glowing autumnal colorings in that the attendants wore, captivating little hats made of ruddy brown velvet. Their frocks were of yellow crepe topped with short taffeta jackets in nasturtium shades. The bouquets of dahlias which each carried were in the superb golden and bronze and deep red tones for which they are noted.

As to the members of the smart set who witnessed the ceremony, they flaunted velvet on their heads, about their necks and on their hands which is literally true, for the majority wore velvet hats, for as every woman knows when it comes to dressy millinery, velvet is ever first choice. Some of these chapeaux were quite wide-brimmed, for the large velvet hat which Bruyere launched at the beginning of the season has met with flattering success. Perhaps the most striking effects were the ensembles of beret, box-pleated neck ruche, pocketbook and gloves all of velvet.

The new velvet gloves must be seen to be appreciated. They are really charming. Of course they must be worn at the right time and with the right costume.

COLORFUL HATS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Take your choice. Your evening silhouette this fall and winter will make you look either like a floor lamp or a pencil.

Brocade and lace dresses usually follow the lampshade silhouette with huge sleeves, full and loose to the wrist, or to the middle of the lower arm, or sleeves puffed above the elbow. Some sleeves are stiffened with horsehair.

The pencil silhouette is achieved with skin-tight costumes, designed with straight lines marked by a slight flare at the bottom. Usually these models have a draped bodice and covered shoulders.

For daytime, a leading American designer says all skirts in dresses are cut with a straight back and bias front. Skirt lengths are generally wraparounds. Skirt lengths are about eight to ten inches from the floor. The wide-shoulder line and bloused back distinguishes the waist of daytime frocks.

Fashionable Interested in Sleeves and Gloves
Those new sleeve lengths that Chanel is showing in her winter collection are causing quite a lot of varied comment. They are impressive for the first sight of them makes a phrase something like this pop into your mind, "Just a minute till I rise out this pair of hose and I'll be with you!" For you feel sure that the mannequin has just shoved her long sleeves up her arm to a couple of inches above the wrist to keep the cuffs from getting wet, and forgot to pull them down again!

But they do have their virtues. Gloves, on occasion, come up to meet them and their being different like that gives us all something to talk about.

Dr. Morse's INDIAN ROOT PILLS Mild & Gentle Laxative

Light in Darkness A state health officer in Virginia relates in the Survey the story of a farmer who was delivering vegetables to the public sanatorium. A patient salutes him.

"You're a farmer, ain't yuh?" The farmer allowed that he was. "I used to be a farmer once," said the guest of the state.

"Did yuh?" "Yes. Say, stranger, did yuh ever try bein' crazy?"

The farmer never had, and started to move on.

"Well, you oughta try it," was the former farmer's parting shot. "It beats farmin' all hollow."

End Colds Quick

HE was an easy victim to colds—and they hung on so long—until she suggested the use of N.R. tablets. He seldom catches colds now. When he does they are quickly broken up. This safe, dependable, all-vegetable corrective—Nature's Remedy—strengthens and regulates bowel action as no other laxative can—carries away poisonous wastes which make you susceptible to colds, dizzy spells, headaches, biliousness. Works pleasantly, too. No gripping. Try a box. 25c—at your druggist's.

"TUMS" Quick relief for acid indigestion, heartburn. Only 10c.

Fought to the Death

A battle to death between two strange combatants was revealed near Longmont, Colo., when the bodies of a porcupine and a rattlesnake were found in South St. Vrain canyon. The victims were lying only a few feet apart when discovered. Apparently the poison fangs of the snake had sunk into the porcupine just as quills had reached a vital part of the reptile.

How to Treat Pimples

Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, but do not rub. Wash it off in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water.

Indian Wampum John Fitzpatrick says that wampum was made of a comparatively rare shell of great beauty, which was pierced longitudinally and strung upon deer skin thongs. These strings were woven into bands or belts, and the size of the belt was generally proportioned to what the Indians considered the significance of the occasion.—Washington Star.

Efforts to Bring Insull Back From Greece for Trial—New Canada Tariff in Effect—Big Political Guns Are in Action.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHEN Samuel Insull, the former utilities magnate under indictment in Chicago, was about to take a plane from Italy to Greece in his flight from justice, he wrote to his wife: "I am feeling as if I were going on a real adventure." He was. From Saloniki he hustled down to Athens and within a few hours of his arrival at the Grand Bretagne hotel he was taken into custody by the Athens police. At first he was merely detained on a question as to his passport; then, at the formal request of the American consul, he was arrested and taken to jail, where he was given a comfortable room. By the next morning his legal representatives had got to Premier Venizelos, at whose instance the attorney general examined the affair, found there was no legal basis for Insull's detention and ordered his release. The convention of extradition between the United States and Greece was not in force, the instruments of ratification not having been exchanged. Twenty-four hours later Insull was told he was free to go where he pleased, so far as Greece was concerned.

Samuel Insull.

There was a possibility of Insull's being handed over to the United States on the strength of a former treaty, and the whole matter was to be laid before the court of appeals in Athens. Of course the American government was determined to try in every legal way to bring him back for trial. Consul Morris in Athens was instructed to keep close track of him. Developments in the Insull affair, far too numerous to be detailed here, included the decision of the banking committee of the senate to investigate the collapse of the Insull utilities system. James E. Stewart, federal operative who had charge of the committee's inquiry into the New York Stock Exchange last summer, went to Chicago vested with broad powers to inquire into all phases of the situation.

Martin J. Insull, indicted with his brother and who was arrested in Orillia, Ontario, was released under bail pending extradition proceedings.

UNCLE SAM is now getting a large dose of the tariff medicine he has been giving the rest of the world for many years.

At midnight of Wednesday the new Canadian tariff increases against United States products went into effect in accordance with the trade agreement between Canada and the United Kingdom, Southern Rhodesia, the Irish Free State and South Africa, reached at the recent imperial conference. The principal items on which Canada has raised the tariff against the United States are:

- 1. Iron and steel products. Includes steel plates, steel sheets and also structural shapes.
2. Anthracite.
3. Leather products of all kinds, and Gums of many varieties.
4. Chemicals of all kinds.
5. Toilet accessories, including perfumes, soaps and bath salts, in which there has been a huge trade between the United States and Canada.
6. Cotton goods.
7. Processed and fabricated steels, such as cutlery, machinery and wire products.
Previously these and all other American products had been entering the Dominion under Canada's general tariff rate. Canada has been the best customer of the United States, but now much more of her trade will go to Great Britain.

AS THE Presidential campaign drew toward its close major parties unlimbered their biggest guns and the oratorical battle grew loud and fierce. For the Republicans Calvin Coolidge opened the week with an address at a rally in Madison Square garden, New York city. He came out squarely and forcibly for the policies of President Hoover and said he was convinced the public welfare required that gentleman's re-election. The former President attacked the Democratic leadership in congress for attempted raids on the federal treasury, assailed Franklin Roosevelt for failing to announce his stand on the soldier bonus question, and warmly praised Mr. Hoover for his moves to maintain "sound money."

Former Senator Jim Reed of Missouri, selected by the Democrats to reply to Mr. Hoover's Des Moines speech, went to that Iowa city and attacked the President in his well-known scathing manner, dwelling at length on both his policies and his personality. He declared the Chief Executive's address was "a series of incorrect statements and unjustifiable deductions," and especially contradicted Mr. Hoover's statement that only the steps taken by the administration kept the country from going off the gold standard.

Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, himself no meek orator and denouncer, answered Reed on that gold standard matter, accusing the Missourian of flagrantly misstating the facts and citing figures that he said upheld the assertions made by Mr. Hoover.

The President himself, still in his new fighting mood, made his second big speech Saturday evening in Cleveland, and there was a chance that he would yield to the importunities of his followers in the Middle and Far West and deliver several more addresses before election day. His opponent, Governor Roosevelt, was busy in his own state during the week but found time to make a radio address over a nation-wide hookup in reply to a questionnaire on the subject of federal relief to those in distress, increased appropriations for public works as an aid to employment, unemployment insurance, and child welfare. It was announced that Governor Roosevelt's next trip would be through the South and Middle West, though why he should go into the southern states is a puzzle.

SENATOR DAVID A. REED of Pennsylvania, who went to Europe in the summer at the direction of President Hoover principally to find out the attitude of Great Britain and France on the Manchurian question, returned and immediately reported at the White House. To the press he denied categorically that any bargain or secret agreement had been made by the United States with either Great Britain or France on the course to be taken in handling the Lytton report and other developments in Japan and Manchuria.

The Chinese National government has announced that it accepts the Lytton report as a basis for negotiations, but a large group of influential and powerful Chinese has declared against it, asserting that "it is suicidal for China to place further reliance in the League of Nations, which is exposed to impotence and inability to uphold right and justice."

DICTATOR JOSEF STALIN has taken steps to scotch the plot to bring about his downfall, which was mentioned in this column some weeks ago. The Communist party of Russia has expelled from its ranks as traitors Leo Kameney and Gregory Zinoviev, two once powerful friends of Lenin, and they were locked up in Lubianka prison. Twenty other Bolsheviks were ousted along with them. Kameney was formerly commissar of the Moscow district and president of the people's commissar and is a brother-in-law of Leon Trotsky, the foe of Stalin. Zinoviev used to be commissar of the Leningrad district and president of the Communist Internationale. Both were accused of plotting against Stalin in 1927 but were forgiven when they abjectly apologized. The decree of the central executive committee of the Communist party says that both commissars were discovered by the Gaypayov or secret police to be falsifying documents in order to compromise the work of the party's control committee.

EUROPEAN powers are still intent on bringing about disarmament—each for the other fellows—and their various plans seem as far apart as ever.

Norman H. Davis, American delegate to the disarmament conference in Geneva, is striving to reconcile the various demands as applied to naval strength, and was in London during the week trying to find a compromise between the British thesis of many and small ships within global tonnage figures and America's desire for fewer and bigger ships. Mr. Davis, however, did not confine himself to naval matters, but discussed disarmament generally with Prime Minister MacDonald and Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty. He also met Sir Walter Layton, England's leading economist, and talked about the coming world economic conference.

Premier Herriot of France also was in London, conferring with Mr. MacDonald on Germany's demands for arms equality. He has devised a disarmament plan providing for a consultative pact which would include the United States, and he consulted Mr. Davis about this.

CAPT. WOLFGANG VON GRONAU and his three companions who were making a round-the-world flight came to grief in the Indian ocean. But their radio was working after their plane was forced down by a broken water pump, and the British steamer Karagola responded to their call and rescued them, taking them and their flying boat to Raungoon.

NORTHERN Ireland is having serious trouble with its unemployed. For two days a mob of ten thousand jobless men raged through Belfast, fighting the police and setting fire to many large buildings. After one man had been killed and more than thirty seriously wounded, the disorder was quelled. But in a few hours the rioting was resumed with increased fury and it was necessary to call on British troops. The Enniskillen Fusiliers and the king's royal rifles were sent in a hurry.

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

SACAGAWEA

A Shoshoni girl of about fourteen, busy in camp with the humble duties of an Indian woman, would scarcely seem born to be a leader of white men. Certainly, her thoughts did not run along this line. A stalwart husband, babies playing around her feet, and the daily life that her mother and grandmother before her had led—this, she would have said, was her future.

Suddenly, a war-party of Hidatsa bore down upon the camp. There was little time for defense or flight. Sacagawea found herself on a horse—one of the Shoshoni horses—racing back to the Hidatsa camp between guards. She was a trophy of the raid, just as were the horses and the Shoshoni scalps.

Charbonneau, a French-Canadian voyageur living among the Hidatsa, saw the quiet captive maiden. She seemed strong, she was modest, and pretty as Indian girls go; he bought her to add to his household, a wife and slave combined. What Sacagawea thought, we will never know. Perhaps she was pleased to be chosen by a white man; perhaps she remembered longingly some youth at the Shoshoni camp. She did not say; she quietly assumed her new duties.

Then Lewis and Clark came to the village on their famous expedition and engaged Charbonneau as a guide and interpreter. Sacagawea went along to attend her husband, but by and by the white men noticed that it was the woman who knew the way, and the woman who could speak the many Indian tongues: The cowardly Charbonneau was just another greedy mouth—a worthless braggart, who talked much but did little.

As they ascended the Missouri river, amid adventures with bears and other unpleasant happenings, an accident occurred which periled the very life of their expedition. Charbonneau was at the helm of a canoe containing papers, instruments, medicines, and "almost every article indispensable for the success of our enterprise." A squall came up, and the boat turned partly around. The guide, losing his head, managed to almost overturn the craft, and many of the precious contents were spilled into the river. The leaders were on shore; the men in the boat were busy trying to right her. What could save the valuable cargo? Let the explorer himself answer:

"The Indian woman to whom I ascribe equal fortitude and resolution with any person on board... caught and preserved most of the articles which were washed overboard."

ANNOUNCEMENT was made by the Reconstruction Finance corporation that it had deposited $6,000,000 with the Treasury department as capital for its agricultural credit corporations at Minneapolis, Minn., and Wichita, Kan. Both these regional concerns were expected to start immediately making loans to farmers and stock raisers in their respective districts. The loan agencies in Columbus, Sioux City, Spokane and Salt Lake City already had their funds.

ALL candidates for the house and senate are being polled as to their views on prohibition by the Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform. The replies so far tabulated show that 347 candidates of all parties are for straight repeal, 42 are evasive and 23 are opposed to repeal. Out of 223 replies from Democratic candidates, only one was opposed to straight repeal. Out of 170 replies from Republican candidates, on the other hand, 105 were for repeal, 42 evasive, and 23 opposed to repeal.

DR. ALEXANDER FLEXNER, director of the new Institute for Advanced Study which is to open in a year and will be located in or near Princeton, N. J., announces that Prof. Albert Einstein, discoverer of the relativity theory, has accepted a life appointment as head of the school of mathematics. The eminent scientist will occupy a home in Princeton with Mrs. Einstein; will be in residence at the Institute annually from October 1 to April 15, and will make a yearly visit to Germany.

Announcement was made also of the appointment of Prof. Oswald Veblen, generally recognized as one of the leading American mathematicians and until now professor of mathematics at Princeton university, as a professor in the Institute's school of mathematics.

The Institute, it is announced, will be exclusively a postgraduate university, entirely separated from the "collegiate" activities of existing American higher education. It will be devoted to scholarship and research in the spirit of pure science without outside distractions.

IN THE presence of high government officials and Communist party leaders, soviet Russia formally opened at Dneprostroy the largest hydro-electric plant in the world. The development represents an investment of 220,000,000 rubles (nominally $110,000,000) and will have an ultimate capacity of 750,000 horsepower with an annual production of 2,500,000,000 kilowatt hours of electricity. It will supply electricity for 10,000,000 people in an area of 70,000 square miles, including the Donetz coal basin and the huge Dnepropetrovsk metal works.

During the ceremonies Col. Hugh L. Cooper of New York, who designed and supervised the construction, and six members of his staff were decorated by the government.

HUNGARY has a new premier, Julius Goemboes, and there is not a count or a baron in his cabinet. In his first address to parliament he promised to restore liberty for the people, freedom of the press and the secret ballot. What was more remarkable, this man who has been notorious as Hungary's greatest Jew-baiter, renounced his anti-Semitic views.

"I want to tell the Jews I have revised my opinion of them," he said. "I realize now that they showed the same heroism and patriotism during the war and after as other Hungarians. Those Jews who are willing to share the fate and responsibilities of Hungary I welcome as Magyar brothers."

VORWAERTS, the Social Democratic newspaper of Berlin, accuses former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of plotting to overthrow the German republic and restore the monarchy with the help of Chancellor Von Papen, General Von Schleicher and President Von Hindenburg. It says the prince is to be proclaimed regent of Germany at a propitious moment, and that at the same time former Crown Prince Ruprecht of Bavaria will be proclaimed head of a Danubian kingdom. "A product of pure phantasy," says the government at Berlin.

Relief From Neuralgia In Few Minutes

Quick Dissolving Property of BAYER ASPIRIN Starts Relief 3 or 4 Minutes After Taking

Think of a headache going in three or four minutes. The pains of neuralgia, neuritis or rheumatism being eased, often, in that little space of time!

Due to important, scientific developments in the famous Bayer Aspirin laboratories, millions of people are enjoying this almost unbelievably quick relief from pain.

That is because Bayer Aspirin dissolves almost instantly in the stomach. And thus almost INSTANTLY starts to ease pain. The average headache, for instance, eases in as little as four or five minutes. Think of what a time saver this is to busy people.

Remember it is Genuine BAYER Aspirin which provides this unique property. So see that you get the real article when you buy. See that these three words "Genuine Bayer Aspirin" are on any box or bottle of aspirin that you buy. And that the name "Bayer" is stamped in the form of a cross on any tablet that you take.

Remember that when you buy. And remember, too, that Genuine Bayer Aspirin cannot harm the heart. Take care you get the genuine.

Scotland Yard Housed on Site of Royal Home

Scotland Yard, the popular name for the headquarters of the Metropolitan police in London, for many years was located in Great Scotland yard, a short street off Whitehall, London. The name Scotland Yard was derived from the fact that at one time this had been the site of a palace built for the reception of Scottish kings and chieftains when they visited London. The last of the Scottish royal family to reside in this palace was Margaret queen of Scots, sister of Henry VIII and wife of James IV, who fell at the battle of Flodden field. During the reign of Queen Elizabeth it fell into ruin, but some time later was replaced by government offices. It became the residence, among others, of John Milton, who stayed there while acting as Latin secretary to Oliver Cromwell; Beau Fielding, the poet, and Inigo Jones, the architect. It was also the home, for a time, of Sir Christopher Wren and of Sir John Vanburgh. Early in the Nineteenth century it served for a while as the Marshalsea court, and in 1829, when Sir Robert Peel planned a new police force, Scotland Yard was made the principal station of the force. In 1890 the headquarters were moved to New Scotland yard on the Thames embankment, close to Westminster bridge. These new premises were designed by Richard Norman Shaw (1831-1912), and are considered to be his finest work. As a rule the "New" is dropped, and the headquarters are generally known by the old familiar term "Scotland Yard."

Amusing "Frog Races"

The frog races are an annual affair called the "Calaveras County Frog Jumping Contests," held on or about May 20, at Angels Camp, Calif. This little town is the scene of Mark Twain's classic jumping frog tale, and it is probably this story that has suggested the present contests. The last contest was attended by at least 20,000 people and the scene was highly reminiscent of frontier days. A frog named Budweiser again won the world record and broke his former record by the tremendous leap of 13 feet 5 inches.

Supercilious Youth

"When that young man asked you to marry him," said Mr. Cimrox, "why didn't you tell him to see me?" "I did," replied his daughter, demurely. "He said he had already seen you and that he didn't find your appearance especially objectionable."

Safety First

"Did you tell Mr. Beinlich that he is father of triplets?" "No, he is still shaving."

Misfortune is good for genius; but lesser minds it may sour.

Mother of 7—Still Young

THE woman who gives her organs the right stimulant need not worry about growing old. Her system doesn't stagnate; her face doesn't age. She has the health and "pep" that come from a lively liver and strong, active bowels.

When you're sluggish and the system needs help, don't take a lot of "patent medicines." There's a famous doctor's prescription for just such cases, and every druggist keeps this standard preparation. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a little every day or so, until every organ in your body feels the big improvement. The next time you have a bilious headache, or feel all bound-up, take this delicious syrup instead of the usual cathartic. You'll be rid of all that poisonous waste, and you haven't weakened the bowels. You'll have a better appetite, and feel better in every way. The constant use of cathartics is often the cause of a sallow complexion and lines in the face. And so unnecessary!

Would you like to break yourself of the cathartic habit? At the same time building health and vigor that protects you from frequent sick spells, headaches, and colds? Get a big bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin today. Use often enough to avoid those attacks of constipation. When you feel weak and run-down or a coated tongue or bad breath warns you the bowels need to be stimulated. Give it to children instead of strong laxatives that sap their strength. It isn't expensive.

OF COURSE

Mr. Hoover recently properly resented Mr. Roosevelt's cheap attempt in his campaign swing in the West to blame every one's pains and aches on the President.

The fellow who plunged in real estate and now has it on his hands, never asked Hoover about buying it.

The same applies to hundreds of thousands, who bought stocks and lost billions of dollars.

This applies to the business man, too, who greedy to get it all extended his business in every direction, unmindful of the fact that there are economic limits to which any business may be prudently expanded.

Mr. Hoover was not responsible for their plunges any more than for those of the average person, who bought the most expensive luxuries without any thought of tomorrow.

The picture, "Will Rogers in Back to Earth," well illustrates what has been taking place. The nation as a whole was incurring debts on the basis of its hoped for future income rather than on its actual earnings.

Mr. Hoover also resented Roosevelt's suggestion that the President had done nothing to better conditions. No one with the slightest common sense will swallow that line of talk.

About nine months ago bank after bank crashed. The values of stocks, in which billions of the people's money was tied up, were melting from day to day. No one dared buy anything for fear their savings or stocks would be gone in the morning.

Gradually—for this is a tremendous country—the conditions in regard to the banks improved. Stocks stopped melting away. Here and there signs of returning confidence began to appear.

The first job was to stop it before the country was ruined completely.

There are many indications that in some directions the decline has been halted.

Whose work did this? Certainly not Roosevelt's! Why in New York State the number of unemployed is appalling. Roosevelt has failed in a constructive way there to improve the situation. Why then turn him loose on all the forty-eight States?

There can be no great upswing in business and employment until government costs, taxes, come down. Though Roosevelt has been Governor of New York in 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1932—all years of declines in business—the cost of New York's State government has increased steadily and so, of course, has the taxes of the people there.

If he failed there, is that a good reason for putting him at the head of the largest business in the world, the United States Government?

Let us not forget that Roosevelt has had experience in New York where he did not make a great Governor.

Is it wise to place a man with his record and lack of experience at the head of the National Government in our present crisis?

Mr. Hoover has had the toughest job in the world the last three years. He may not be the world's best. However, he has wrestled with our problems night and day and now has summoned to his aid the leading Americans of all parties.

So, that, regardless of what water may have gone over the dam, the situation now is that the country's leaders are working shoulder to shoulder under the Hoover regime to find a way out. This includes such really big Democrats as Owen D. Young, Newton D. Baker and more recently Calvin Coolidge and Alfred E. Smith on the new railroad investigating board.

Are we to kick over all this experience when we need it most to experiment with a non too strong Roosevelt and a Garner, who, if anything, is worse?

Do we want such people as Kingfish Huey Long, John Hylan, William Randolph Hearst and McAdoo, who wrecked the railroads, to take charge in this, our country's day of trial?

GARNER

Who is Mr. Garner?

He is the Democratic nominee for Vice-President.

As all our readers know the Vice-President becomes President on the death or removal through impeachment of the President.

It is important then that we know something of the candidate.

Mr. Garner has been a Congressman for 31 years.

His wife has been his secretary.

They have both been on the public payroll for all that time with free transportation at the people's expense to and from Texas.

In the last session Mr. Garner was elected Speaker of the House due to the fact he was the oldest member in point of service among the Democrats.

Recently it developed that in addition to his wife he has regularly had a son at home in Texas also acting as Secretary and on the Government payroll.

As speaker of the House of Representatives, Garner is allowed an additional Secretary and his other son was added to Uncle Sam's payroll.

So Garner, his wife, and three sons all get paid by the American people simply because Garner is a Congressman.

What is more, although Garner is on the Democratic ticket as a vice-presidential candidate, he is running in Texas for Congress.

You see it is the Congressional job which has brought home the family bacon for thirty-one years. He figures he is sure of his Congressional seat in the election but not the Vice-Presidency.

As the country knows, when the tax bill was up in Congress early in the year, Mr. Garner let the bill flounder and be cut to pieces, failing to supply that constructive suggestion one would expect from one who had been on the job for 31 years. As Speaker, it was his function to advise on the bill.

SIXTY DISASTERS IN 1932 ADD TO NATION'S DISTRESS

Red Cross Spends $2,760,000 To Help Victims of Catastrophes.

In a year of great misfortune caused by economic depression, in which the American Red Cross assumed heavy burdens of relief for the unemployed, the organization also responded to emergency needs in 60 disasters in the United States and its insular possessions.

During the twelve months ending June 30, 1932, the Red Cross gave aid to 75,000 families totalling 338,000 individuals, with expenditures of $2,760,786. These people were in distress because of drought, flood, forest fire, tornado, snowstorm, mine explosion, or other similar great disaster.

Wants Rahway River Dredging Data

statistics and information of actual traffic on the waterway so as to indicate that the investment by the Government will really bring about a saving. In any large investment purely local as the Rahway River, it is customary to have contribution to the cost by the municipalities benefiting.

The first part of the dredging up to Lambert's dock, due to the soft mud, is comparatively small.

As it is now the only traffic on the river at all is in barge loads of masonry material that go to Lambert's Wharf. A few in Linden and some in Rahway who allege they would use the river if it was dredged and widened. The improvement as far as Lambert's Dock would take care of most of Linden and much of Carteret.

Above that point there are no industries on either side of the river and none in Rahway. Extending the improvement beyond the Highway Bridge is impossible due to the location of the bridge there. At the time the bridge was located the War Department had public hearing and asked for objections. That was the time for Rahway, if it was interested in having the river dredged beyond that point, to come forward.

Now the highway bridge is located there and it will necessarily limit any development beyond that point. Up to that point the river winds in and out and the dredging would be costly from Lambert's Dock on due to the amount of rock.

A dance of the Junior Luther league is to be held at the German Lutheran Hall on Wednesday evening, November 16th. Arrangements are in charge of Miss Alma Wohlshlager and Harold Malwitz.

Prolonged drought caused the Red Cross to go with help to 53,000 families in the northwest. Here in 144 counties in North and South Dakota, Montana, Nebraska, Washington and Iowa the Red Cross spent $1,980,000 from its own treasury to feed and protect people through the winter and spring.

Other grave disasters were floods in southeastern states, where the organization spent $192,000 from its treasury and $66,000 local contributions to help 13,000 persons.

More than 50,000 people were homeless from floods in tributaries of the Mississippi river and again the Red Cross faced a long relief task, aiding these people. The national organization gave $108,000 and local contributions were $10,000.

The Red Cross always maintains a state of readiness to meet these sudden emergencies, and funds and other essentials to this work are supplied, in part, by the annual roll call, held each year from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day. Every citizen can support this worthy activity through joining as a member in the local Red Cross chapter.

The Mesdames T. Murray and J. Hagan will be in charge of arrangements.

DEMOCRATS IN BUSY CAMPAIGN

Sponsor Many Social Events in Drive.

The Democratic Party in the borough is staging an increasing number of affairs for the purpose of canvassing the voters of the Borough and getting them out on Election Day to support the party's candidates. The past week was especially active.

On last Friday evening Commissioner Mathias Beigert of the School Board and candidate for Councilman on the Democratic ticket entertained the workers in the third and fourth ward districts at his home.

On Saturday night Commissioner Mathias Beigert entertained a large crowd of Hungarians at his home at which Stephen Jacobs acted as the toastmaster. Among the speakers were Mayor Joseph A. Hermann and members of the council.

On Sunday a card party was held by the Young Democrats at headquarters on Washington Avenue, was in charge of Miss Margaret Walsh as chairman.

On Monday the Young Men's Democratic Club and the Young Women's Democratic Club staged a testimonial affair at the headquarters at 86 Washington Avenue in order to focus attention on the candidacies of Phil Turk and Mathias Beigert candidates for Council. The chief speaker was Elmer E. Brown.

On Tuesday a large card party was held at the Nathan Hale School auditorium at which door prizes and a large number of other prizes were awarded.

TO START CLASSES

Announcement is made that the classes in the Hebrew School will open next week in the Synagogue of Loving Justice. Both Carteret and Chrome children are invited to attend. Rabbi M. Chasin will be the teacher.

RETURN FROM PENNSYLVANIA

Mrs. Laura Crane and Mrs. Andrew Christensen returned home on Sunday after a week's stay at Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

The Boy Scouts of America, Troop 82, attached to the Presbyterian Church, will hereafter meet on Saturday afternoons instead of Tuesdays. Sunday School service in the M. E. church will be held at 2:30 following which the members will attend the anniversary service in the M. E. Church in Woodbridge.

TURN ON THE LIGHT!

WHEN a lamp fails it can be replaced easily. When sight fails, it can never be replaced. A few cents will keep every lamp socket in the home filled with an appropriate lamp. A fortune cannot repair sight that has been dimmed through the strain of trying to work or read in poor light.

Your favorite arm chair loses its attraction if there is no light near it. The living room should be so lighted that when all members of the family are gathered in it, every one can see clearly and comfortably.

Mazda lamps are inexpensive. Nearly everyone can have a supply on hand. No need to change a lamp from one socket to another; no need to risk the dangers of unlighted stairs or vestibules.

MISS E. GREGOR GUEST OF HONOR

A Hallowe'en birthday party was given by Miss Edith Gregor, of 74 Fitch street, on Saturday to which were invited a host of her young friends. Saturday was the celebration of Miss Gregor's fifth natal day. Among the invited guests were:

Marie Medwick, Charles Gregor, Billy D'Zurilla, Edward D'Zurilla, Dorothy Haas, Alice Ginda, Gene Ginda, William Makoski, Dorothy D'Zurilla, Jennie Hamadyk, Nicholas Hamadyk, Donald Krissak, August Hunderman, Marjory Salaky, Thelma Zucker, Jonas and Kathleen and Joan Kozusko, Edith Gregor, Ralph Gregor, Mrs. W. D'Zurilla, Mrs. V. D'Zurilla, Mrs. Ginda, Mrs. Gregor and Mrs. John A. Kozusko, of Perth Amboy.

All the color and atmosphere that breathes Hallowe'en time was in evidence at the party and no little ingenuity was evidenced in the decorations which exhibited spooky pumpkins, bats, owls and ghosts peering appropriately from behind curtains, drapes and pictures. Other floral decorations set off by beautiful colored autumn leaves, cornstalks and richly colored tinted flowers lent a very pleasing background to the affair. Singing and dancing had its full share on the program as did specialties by some of the more talented youngsters.

HEBREW LADIES GIVE CARD PARTY

The Economy Garage show rooms was the background for the card party held on Monday by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Congregation of Loving Justice. Those in charge of the affair included Mrs. J. Harris, Mrs. Thomas McNally and Mrs. R. Weiss.

A number of attractive prizes stirred interest including a smoking set donated by Mrs. R. Weiss and a hand made pillow by Mrs. McNally. Among the prize winners were:

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOTES

By the Pastor

"Decipleship" will be the theme of the sermon at the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning. The pastor will speak to the Juniors on "Little Things." The Vesper Service at 7:45 will be featured by a Drama "Winning the Fight." In connection with this there will be special musical numbers by the Senior choir. The Pastor states that this will be one of the most impressive services held in the church since he has been here.

The choirs will meet for rehearsal on Friday evening. The Juniors at 7:15 and the Seniors at 8:15.

The attendance at the "Church Night" this week was the largest thus far. The service will be on Tuesday this coming week, carrying out the plan of alternating between Tuesday and Wednesday. "Faith's Adventure" will be the theme.

On Wednesday evening, November 2, the Recital by the Sherry School of Music will be presented in the High School. The main artist will be Mrs. Ola Bidwell Sherry. The following press comment is typical of the comments which her work is getting. "This was the third entertainment during the past year given by this talented whole-souled artist in this community. There is not a tiresome moment in the whole evening's program. She passes from one mood to another, equalling winning and sweet in each, carrying the mood of her audience with her, making it appear the easiest thing in the world to do many things and do them equally well."

On Sunday evening October 31 the congregation of the Presbyterian Church will join with the Hungarian Reformed Church in a Reformation Day service at 7:30. The address will be delivered by Rev. D. E. Lorentz and be interpreted into Hungarian by Rev. Hegy. There will be special music by the choirs of both churches.

V. F. W. ARMISTICE DANCE

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, Star Landing Post, No. 2314, have made arrangements for an Armistice Day dance on Thursday, November 10th, at Rapp's Garage. Arrangements are in charge of August Freeman.

Gives Hallowe'en Party

Among the many giving birthday parties to their young friends during the Hallowe'en season was Miss Rita Schuck of 99 Longfellow street, who celebrated her birthday anniversary at her home in a background appropriate to pumpkin time.

Among the invited guests were: Thomas Dunn, Marion Fitzgerald, Ann Marie Dunn, Kathleen, Elsie and Rita Schuck, Lois Dascher, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Schuck, and Myrtle Barker. Entertainment was provided and refreshments served.

CARTERET WOMAN'S CLUB

By
ISABEL LEFKOWITZ

"The time has come", the Walrus said.
To talk of many things;
Of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—
Of cabbages—and kings."

The Woman's Club has tried its hand at many things, among others, music, painting, cook books, hobby shows, unemployment bureau, plays, flower shows—and now, at its next meeting on Thursday afternoon at 2:00 in the American Legion rooms, a program on "Pottery" has been arranged. There will be a display of American pottery and a talk by the writer on same. The display pieces will be for sale and should make good holiday gifts. This is just a suggestion as the samples can all be returned to the factory.

The balance of the cook books will be ready for distribution at this time.

The cast is busily engaged rehearsing for the play to be produced by the Woman's Club at the High School on Thanksgiving Eve.

Dues should be sent to Mrs. J. Weiss, acting Treasurer.

Carteret 3-0605 is the number of the club's Employment Bureau. Mrs. J. Weisman, chairman, has full and part time applicants for fall house cleaning.

Mrs. Samuel Harris, Mrs. T. J. Nevill, Mrs. Charles Green, Mrs. William Hagan, Mrs. Emil Stremian and Mrs. E. Lefkowitz, attended the N. J. S. P. W. C. Autumn Conference on Thursday, October 20th, held in the Convention Hall at Asbury Park.

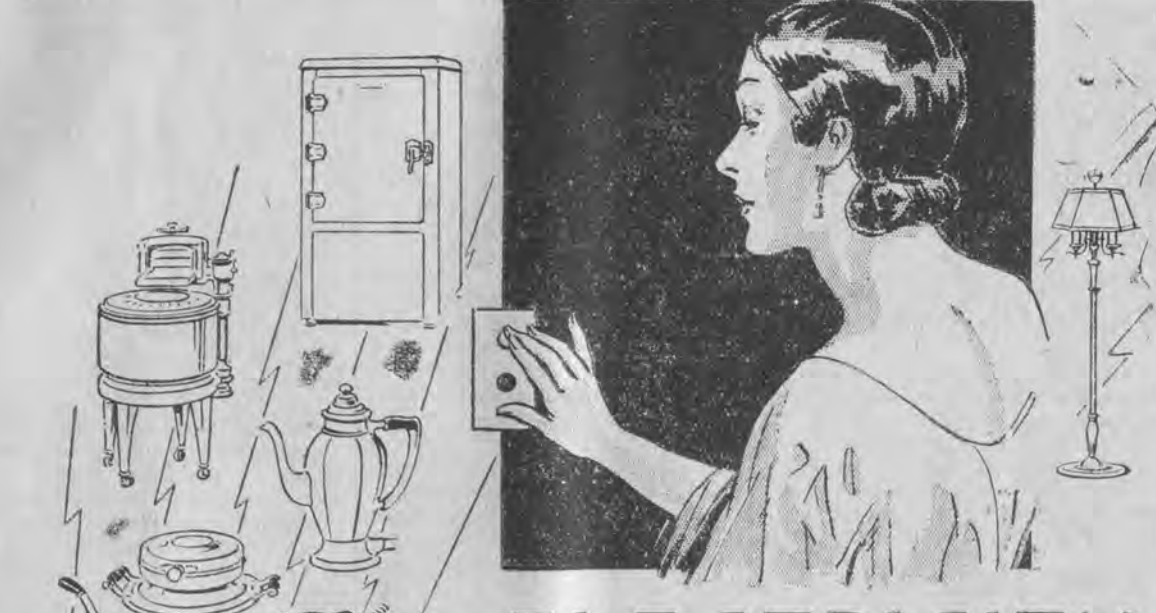

Mrs. Chauncey Marsh told of her trip to the bicentennial convention in Seattle, Washington. While there she said she learned the inside story of how starving Indians in New Mexico hoped to be supplied with provisions by airplane, which story at the time was front page news. This is the story. News came to the president of the New Mexico Woman's Club of the plight of the Indians. She appealed to the governor who appointed a committee of men to investigate. They reported that it was impossible to reach the Indians as the mountains were inaccessible. Some nurses hearing this asked to be allowed to try to get through. They tried and accomplished the impossible, what the men said could not be done. They crossed the mountains and reached the Indians. They reported back, however, that aid could not be sent the starving people that way. What was to be done? The governor asked the president of the Woman's Club for a suggestion. "Why", she said, "use airplanes", which was done with the result which everybody knows. Mrs. Marsh said the women of today had two strong virtues, curiosity and courage—curiosity into new adventures and courage to carry them forward. Mrs. Marsh is one of the Third District vice-president.

Mrs. Driscoll, another vice president, said that service, willingly done, is not drudgery. She said "Give to the world the best you have and the best will come back to you."

The speaker of the day was Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, Professor of Homiletics of the Drew Seminary. His topic was "Resources for Difficult Days". He said that during these difficult days new organizations need not be founded but that there should be passionate loyalty to existing organizations.

Mrs. T. H. Grimley, president of the N. J. Federation, presided.

ELECTRICITY

IS READY FOR WORK AT THE TOUCH OF A BUTTON

At the touch of a button electricity will go to work for you and help you do many arduous tasks better than they can be done in any other way . . .

It will give you light; it will help to launder your clothes; it will make cleaning rugs easier; it will preserve your food; it will wash your dishes; it will run your sewing machine; it will bring you entertainment via radio . . .

And at a cost of only A FEW CENTS A DAY!

Your enjoyment and use of many electrical appliances has been made possible by the continued reduction in rates for electricity in the home since it was first used fifty years ago.

Public Service has reduced its rates for electricity in the home six times since, 1922. Since January 1, 1929 rate reductions have saved our customers more than $3,000,000 per year.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

PETER RABBIT MEETS LIGHTFOOT

PETER RABBIT was on his way back from the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest. He had just seen Mr. and Mrs. Quack and their ten young Quacks start on their long, terrible journey to the far away Southland. Farewells are always rather sad, and this particular farewell had left Peter with a lump in his throat, a queer choky feeling.

"If I were sure that they would return next spring it wouldn't be so bad," he muttered. "It's those terrible guns. I know what it is to have to watch out for them. Farmer Brown's Boy used to hunt me with one of them, but he doesn't any more, and he won't let anybody else near the Old Brier Patch, with one or over here in the Green Forest. But even when he did hunt me it wasn't anything like what the Quacks have to go through. If I kept my eyes open I could tell when a hunter was coming, and could hide in a hole if I wanted to. I never had to worry about my meals. But with the Quacks it is a thousand times worse. They've got to eat while making that long journey, and they can eat only where there is the right kind of food. Hunters with terrible guns know where those places are and hide there until the ducks come, and the ducks have no way of knowing whether the hunters are there or not. That isn't hunting. It's—it's—"

"I Hope They Will Get Through All Right," Said He.

"Well, what is it? What are you talking to yourself about, Peter Rabbit?"

Peter looked up with a start to find the soft beautiful eyes of Lightfoot the Deer gazing down at him over the top of a little hemlock tree.

"It's awful," declared Peter. "It's worse than unfair. It doesn't give them any chance at all."

"I suppose it must be so if you say so," replied Lightfoot, "but suppose you tell me what all this awfulness is about."

Peter grinned. Then he began at the beginning and told Lightfoot all about Mr. and Mrs. Quack and the awful dangers they must face on their long journey to the far away Southland and back again in the spring, all because of the heartless hunters with terrible guns. Lightfoot listened and his great soft eyes were filled with pity for the troubles of the Quack family.

"I hope they will get through all right," said he, "and I hope they will get back in the spring. It is bad enough to be hunted by men at one time of the year, as no one knows better than I do, but to be hunted in the spring as well as in the fall is more than twice as bad. Men are strange creatures. I do not understand them at all. None of the people of the Green Forest would think of doing such terrible things. I suppose it is quite right to hunt others in order to get enough to eat, though I am thankful to say that I have never had to do that, but to hunt others just for the fun of hunting is something I cannot understand at all. And yet that is what men seem to do it for. I guess the trouble is they never have been hunted themselves and don't know how it feels. Sometimes I think I'll hunt one some day to teach him a lesson. What are you laughing at, Peter?"

"At the idea of you hunting a man," replied Peter. "Your heart is right, Lightfoot, but you are too timid and gentle to frighten any one. Big as you are, I wouldn't fear you."

With a single swift bound Lightfoot sprang out in front of Peter. He stamped his sharp hoofs, lowered his handsome head until the sharp points of his horns pointed straight at Peter, lifted the hair along the back of his neck, and made a motion as if to plunge at Peter. His eyes, which

Peter had always thought so soft and gentle, seemed to flash fire.

"Oh!" cried Peter in a faint, frightened-sounding voice, and leaped to one side before it entered his foolish little head that Lightfoot was just pretending.

"I—I didn't know you could look so terribly fierce," stammered Peter. "Those horns look really dangerous when you point them that way. Why—why, what is that hanging to them? It looks like bits of old fur. Have you been tearing somebody's coat, Lightfoot?" Peter's eyes were wide with wonder and suspicion.

HUSBAND'S DAY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THERE'S Mother's day and Father's day, Observed and honored by the young, And yet one fellow goes his way Unwept, unhonored and unsung. There's Ralsin day, to celebrate The raisin, with a reason, too; But there's a man, almost as great As raisins, who has something due.

A wife should have a day she thought About him as the Scripture bids; About him as her husband, not As just the father of her kids; One day of all the year all his, When each man's wife, from sea to sea, Would love him some for what he is, And some for what he used to be.

Of course, she thought of him at first, But now she thinks about the house, The parlor rug that looks the worst, The maid, the club, the pantry mouse, The church's work, the children's play, Some other fellow's worth or wit— There ought to be a Husband's day To think of husbands just a bit.

GOOD SOUPS

A SOUP is always a part of the meal that we feel should never be omitted. It warms the stomach and prepares it for the heartier foods that follow and is of itself a nourishment when prepared with cream and vegetables.

Squash Soup.

Mix together one cupful of boiled squash that has been mashed and put through a colander, two tablespoonfuls of minced celery, one teaspoonful of salt and sugar, one tablespoonful of onion juice, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and a pinch of mace. Prepare two tablespoonfuls of butter and flour mixed together. Add a little of a quart of milk, stir until well blended, then add the remainder and heat slowly. Beat the squash until light and mix with the other ingredients. Heat very hot and serve at once.

Mock Bisque.

Scald one quart of milk with three-fourths of a cupful of bread crumbs, one small onion stuck with six cloves, a sprig of parsley and a bit of bay leaf. Remove the seasonings and rub through a sieve. Add two teaspoonfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of canned tomatoes and cook fifteen minutes. Reheat the milk and bring to the boiling point. Add the tomatoes, stirring gently. Add one-third of a cupful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Serve with croutons.

Pea Soup.

This is so simple that a child may prepare it. Take one can each of pea soup and canned milk, or rich sweet milk if at hand. Mix well, heat and serve hot with croutons.

In the making of soups as in any other food preparation much depends upon the cook. All ingredients should be carefully measured, seasoning appropriate should be added. Mace, cloves, nutmeg, thyme, bay leaf all play an important part. The same ingredients blended with lack of care may be flat, stale and insipid, or a royal feast. A teaspoonful of sugar brings out the flavor of many of the vegetables and is an addition to most soups.

Mary Had a Little Lamb

By JANE OSBORN

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

IT WAS the summer after Mary Lester's sophomore year in the state university that she met Bob Lamb at a country house-party. Bob Lamb had just finished his junior year at a smaller college. It was perfectly clear from the end of the first day at the hospitable old farmhouse that Mary liked Bob and that Bob was keen about Mary. But Bob thought he had no right to speak about marriage—he had a year more of college and it would be still another year—whatever work he took up—before he could think of supporting a wife. But he did not hesitate to tell Mary of his feelings for her. For the time all he begged of her was that she would permit him to be somewhere near her. It was Mary's idea then, that Bob should transfer himself from the smaller college and enter the senior class of the university she attended.

So when Mary went back to college it was noised about that she had brought a "heavy suitor" with her. The girls in her fraternity house laughed at her and with her. Then one of them sitting at the piano began softly playing the strains of "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

The girls took up the words and Mary sat there blushing.

"But Bob's fleece isn't as white as snow," protested Mary weakly. "He has black hair."

"But he did follow you to school one day—you'll have to admit that," laughed one of the girls, and they went on singing their song.

Bob Lamb had been transferred from the fraternity in his own college to the chapter in the university where it was soon passed around that they had a girl to thank for the transfer.

"Nice girl—Mary Lester—a junior Gamma Sigma," informed one of the men. "Some one ought to drop a word of thanks to Mary—she did us a good turn."

One of the men who had listened to the remark began softly to whistle the notes of "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

Some one with a bass voice began croaking the words. A tenor took it up. Two others joined in and the impromptu quartette stood up with mock solemnity and chanted the song. No one meant to give offense but everywhere Bob Lamb appeared with Mary—at college dances, at concerts or just strolling around the campus—there was always some one nearby to warble or whistle the annoying tune. All Bob desired was just to be somewhere with Mary. Yet as the teasing persisted they saw less and less of each other than they had hoped would be possible by both attending the same college.

So after the end of Mary's junior year and Bob Lamb's senior year they felt that they had seen far too little of one another. Bob was going to New York to go into business with his uncle and Mary would be back at college for her final year—a thousand miles from New York.

Bob heard of a college camp somewhere in the next state. There was a tent colony for the men and another for the women—a study camp where serious-minded students went to study astronomy under the direction of a number of renowned astronomers. Neither Bob nor Mary had ever felt more than a passing interest in the study of the stars, but at least there would be opportunity to see each other at lectures and on observation excursions. They could sit together in the evening on mountain tops gazing at the stars. True, there would be the other students and the learned professors, but there would be no one to tease them. They needn't let anyone know that they had ever met before. It was Mary's idea that their names must not go with them. Some one might think of the stupid song about Mary and her little lamb. It would be simple enough in Mary's case. She could easily use her middle name, Ella. It took some maneuvering on Bob's part. Finally he took an old friend, Bill Ball, into his confidence and arranged to use his college certificate for enrollment.

For the first two weeks of the sessions at the summer camp everything went beautifully. Then it became apparent that Bob—now Bill Ball—and Mary—now Ella—contrived to sit next to each other on all occasions. One evening when the class of campers were starting off up the mountain side some one in the party began to hum the tune of the nursery song that had become so odious to Mary. It seemed as if everyone took up the air—whistling or warbling as they went. Then some one began singing the words.

"Ella had a little Ball, his fleece was black as coal— And everywhere that Ella went the Ball was sure to roll."

"Let's pretend we don't know they mean us," whispered Mary.

"That won't work," said Bob Lamb—rather Bill Ball. "Let's pretend to like it."

So they stuck it out—wherever they were seen together some one was pretty sure to take up the notes of the old song. And at the end Bob got a letter from his uncle—offering him a little more than he had expected by way of a beginner's salary. On the strength of this Bob asked Mary to marry him as soon as they left summer camp. Mary, in spite of a final year at college, was willing.

"Don't let's have a church wedding," she suggested. "The organist would be sure to play that hateful tune instead of the wedding march."

"PAUL REVERE'S RIDE" on April 18, 1776, is a dramatic part of the beginning of the Revolution. His house above, built in 1660, and the Old North Church where the signal lanterns were hung, are objects of awed interest to visitors of today. On his way to Boston, Washington was told of Bunker Hill. His only question was, "Did the militia stand the fire?" and on being told that they did, his answer was, "The liberties of the country are safe."

Connolly Wins Many Friends By His Clean Fight

Democratic Candidate For Surrogate Has Made Good.

The many friends in New Brunswick and throughout the county, of Frank A. Connolly, the Democratic candidate for Surrogate, are deeply interested in the success of his fight. They particularly appreciate the unselfish manner in which he is conducting his campaign, dwelling upon every occasion, as he does, on the importance to the citizens of the success of the entire Democratic ticket.

As one of the executives of P. J. Young's Department Store, the leading store in New Brunswick, Mr. Connolly has won for himself the respect and esteem of the business people who know him.

Since Mr. Connolly became one of the City Commissioners of New Brunswick, he has been in charge of the Department of Revenue and Finance and has done yeoman service in pulling the city through this great depression, without impairing the credit of the city, and while maintaining its service departments at the highest standards.

One of Mr. Connolly's achievements in the office of commissioner was the construction of Farrington Lake, which has placed New Brunswick in an enviable position as regards its water supply for many years to come. The citizens of New Brunswick recognized his service in this particular by a great civic banquet, presided over by President Thomas of Rutgers College, at which Mr. Connolly's work in this connection received high praise from many prominent citizens.

Mr. Connolly comes of an old New Brunswick family. His father, who is one of the nine remaining members of the Boggs-Janeway Post of the G. A. R., is said to have been the youngest soldier enlisted in the Civil War from the State of New Jersey. He ran away at the age of thirteen and enlisted in the Federal Army. After his relatives succeeded in getting him out of the army, he bided his time, ran away again, once more enlisted and this time was permitted to serve through the duration of the war.

Mr. Connolly is carrying on the tradition of his family by exemplifying in his life the highest type of Americanism and citizenship.

If elected he will give all his time to his office and promises to give the citizens the best service of which he is capable and his record shows that he is worthy of confidence.

CARTERET PLAYS LINCOLN HIGH

McCarthy's undefeated gridgers, will journey to Jersey City tomorrow and lock horns with the strong Lincoln High School Eleven.

This will mark the fourth engagement of the local high school football team, which has had a clean slate to date.

The Jerseyites are said to be a heavy and a formidable bunch of pigskin chasers. With an eye to this angle, McCarthy has been tuning up his reserves for replacement.

The lineup is expected to be as usual including Koesel, Trivanovitch, Thatcher, Szulimowski, Spewak, Costa, D'Zurilla, Galvanek, Godersstad, Prokop, Neimick.

Mrs. Lillian B. Greenwald, widow of the late Dr. Adolph Greenwald, was granted letters of administration on last Friday for the estate of her husband, who died on September 5th. The estate was reported valued at $12,500.

The St. Joseph's Parent Teacher Association are planning a card party for Wednesday afternoon, November 2d, which is to be in charge of Mrs. G. T. Gaudet. In addition to Mrs. Gaudet the committee includes Mesdames Mary Levan, Daniel McDonnell, Theodore Bishop and Kennedy and Maroney.

A FINE THING

Suggestion has been made in view of the large number of social affairs of one kind or another being held, that it would be both constructive and humane to have some small portion of all the receipts turned over to the Overseer of the Poor or the Director of Unemployment.

Why not? In most cases the public schools are being used free of charge instead of a hall for which rental is paid. If those attending have the benefit of the social get-together, why should not the receipts, in these times, go to aid those less fortunate through no fault of their own.

The Carteret News respectfully suggests to all social organizations that it would be a fine thing to have a portion of every ticket sold for any affair to be turned over in this manner.

Now would be an especially good time when all manner of affairs are being held primarily to aid political campaigns of one kind or another.

Costume Masquerade

A costume masquerade was held on Tuesday at Odd Fellows Hall by the Friendship Link Order of Golden Chain Lodge as part of the Halloween social. Frances Goz was awarded the prize for the prettiest costume and Mrs. I. Brown received the prize for the most unique costume.

At the meeting it was decided to hold a Halloween barn dance on Monday, October 31st, at the German Lutheran Hall.

The committee for this affair includes Mrs. Dora Jacoby, Mrs. Mark Harris, Mrs. William Heber, Mrs. Isadore Brown, Mrs. Albert Gardner, Mrs. Anna Chodosh, Mrs. Thomas Cheret and Mrs. Leo Brown.

LUTHERAN CARD PARTY

A card party will be held by the Ladies' Aid Society of the German Lutheran Church at the German Lutheran Hall on Wednesday, October 26th. The committee in charge consists of Mrs. John Haas, Mrs. Walter Ruddy, Mrs. Walter Snyder, Mrs. A. Wohlschlagel, Mrs. Elizabeth Staubach, Mrs. Kirchner and Mrs. Lena Knorr.

CHURCH PLANS BAZAAR

The Church of the Sacred Heart plans a week's bazaar beginning Saturday, October 22d. Present plans call for prizes to be awarded nightly. The various committees are being assisted by the Rev. Father Andrew J. Sakson.

PETE KELLER TO PLAY

The German-American Citizen's Club plans a dance and entertainment on Sunday, October 30th, at German Lutheran Hall. Music is to be by Peter Keller's orchestra and the committee will announce its list of entertainment.

OPENS DANCING SCHOOL

Miss Gloria Bauerband announces the opening of a dancing class at her home at 235 Roosevelt avenue.

MARRIED IN BUFFALO

Mr. and Mrs. Tobias Garber of this borough announce the marriage of their son, Dr. Harold Garber, to Miss Carolyn Goldstein of Buffalo. The ceremony took place during the week at Buffalo where both are residents.

ENTERTAINMENT AND DANCE

The Junior Luther League of the German Lutheran Church will hold an entertainment and dance on November 18th with Alma Wohlschlagel and Harold Malwitz in charge.

TO OPEN OFFICE HERE

Dr. P. R. Wexler will open dental offices in the Ritz theatre Building. The same formerly occupied by Dr. A. Greenwald.

At the Wednesday meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary Unit plans were made to visit the disabled veterans at Menlo Park on election day.

Magazines, plants and other appropriate evidences of thoughtfulness of the comfort of the boys will be taken along.

The committee appointed for the joint card party for the Post was Mesdames W. E. Hagan, W. D. Casey, Harry Gleckner, Walter Tomczuk, Walter Boyer, John Katuska, Walter Sak, John Cook and Miss Jane Cook.

Miss Ann Reilly of Chrome Avenue will entertain members of the Ladies' Sodality of St. Joseph's parish at her home tomorrow night.

Huge Boiler, More Than 100 Feet in Height, Requires Seven-Story Addition to Burlington Electric Station

TOWERING more than 100 feet above the ground a boiler, which is one of the largest steam making units in the United States, has recently been installed at Burlington Generating Station of Public Service Electric and Gas Company. In order to house the boiler it was necessary to construct a seven story addition shown at the right in the above photograph of the station.

In twenty-four hours this boiler can produce 14,400,000 pounds of steam at a pressure of 675 pounds. This is a greater capacity than the combined output of ten boilers originally installed at the station, which the new unit displaces.

The boiler is large enough to furnish sufficient steam to heat approximately 10,400 seven room houses.

Carteret Continues March of Victories

The Carteret High School football team added another scalp to its belt when it took into camp the eleven of Morristown High on the gridiron of that school on Saturday by a score of 7 to 0.

This victory makes the third in a row for the local eleven, which from now on will play all its games away from home.

The strong line of the blue and white constantly got through and broke up all the plays of the Morristown eleven before they got started. The result was that the offensive of the boys from Morris County was unable to take shape.

On the other hand Chap Thatcher, quarterback for the Borough boys, used his repertoire of plays in good fashion.

For the early part of the game the Carteret outfit was unable to work its way through to the goal line. However, its line plays mixed in with end runs finally opened the way for a touchdown by Koester. The line plunging of Mike Trivanovitch played a big part in putting the boys in a position for the final play on which Koester slipped across. D'Zurilla made the point from placement.

The lineup was as follows:
Carteret (7) Morristown (0)
Spewak.....L.E..... Vigilante
Galvanek.....L.T..... Dunn
Gudmestad.....L.G..... Sandell
Wiegonski.....C..... Roff

Touchdown—Koester. Point after touchdown—D'Zurilla (placement).
Referee—Silverman, Panzar. Umpire—Cavalero, Savage. Head linesman—Diffendorf's, Temple. Time of quarters—10 minutes.

At a meeting of the Hebrew Social Alliance held at the home of Mrs. B. Zusman, on Roosevelt Avenue, Miss Florence Brown was the speaker. This commenced the first of a series of four meetings to be held by the discussion group.

The book "Erave New World" was Miss Brown's topic.

It was announced following the refreshments the next meeting would be held on October 27th at the home of Miss Diana Abrams.

Among those in attendance were: Bertha Garber, Mrs. B. Zusman, Gertrude Zusman, Mr. and Mrs. Sandor Lehrer, Moe Levinson, Mrs. Moe Levinson, Anna Rosenblum, Anna Schwartz, Ruth Brown, Diana Abrams, Philip Jaffee, Madeline Wohlgermuth, and William Lebowitz.

The Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Joseph's Church will hold a Halloween party on October 29, in the evening, in the home of Miss Ann Reilly, in Chrome avenue.

MAN INLURED IN CAR ACCIDENT

Offender Is Fined $10, No License.

As a result of being struck by a car at Randolph Street and Pershing Avenue on Sunday night, George Yaworsky, 48 years old, of 99 Randolph Street, found himself in Perth Amboy Hospital.

It was alleged that Yaworsky was injured by a car driven by Albert Eskesen, 24 years old, of 69 Washington avenue.

The alleged offender was taken into custody by Motorcycle Policeman Robert Stanley and a fine of $10 imposed by Recorder Nathaniel Jacoby in the Police court on a charge of driving a car without a license.

Later it was reported that Yaworsky sustained only lacerations of the scalp.

LEAGUE CHAMPS DINED BY TURK

Honors Winning Team With Banquet.

Last night proved far from a quiet one for the Pastry Boys, winners of the Carteret Twilight League baseball team. They assembled at Phil Turk's, where Mr. Turk, the proprietor of the establishment made good his promise of a few months ago, that he would tender a banquet to the honor of the "evening champs."

Mr. Turk in no way failed in his promise and spread before the boys everything from "soup to nuts."

After taking care of the wants of the inner man, short talks were given by Mayor Joseph A. Hermann, Manager Skeffington of the Pastry Boys and the genial Captain Sullivan.

Joe Medwick, local big leaguer, passed over some of the rough spots that must be traveled on the road to fame. Others speakers included: Frederick Colton, E. J. Walsh, M. Beigert and Mr. Turk himself, who cited for the boys, during the course of his remarks that he has always been interested in all athletic activities. Mr. Turk declared that if the future Carteret is to be a better place to live in it must be accomplished by the furtherance of athletics among the youth of today.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 26c at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.

ELY EFFICIENT IN SHERIFF'S OFFICE

No business can be successful without system and a classification of duties to be performed by the personnel. Alan Ely, candidate for Sheriff this year, and present Undersheriff, was forcibly impressed with this fact when he assumed the duties of his present office at the instance of Sheriff Gannon, three years ago.

Previous to the advent of the present administration the work of the department was anybody's duty so long as they were members of the Sheriff's staff. There was no classification of functions with the result that unsystematic methods prevailed with ultimate loss of effort and efficiency. Being a business man Mr. Ely, unaccustomed to such administration set himself to the task of correcting the prevailing office functions.

The Undersheriff originated a complete system to cover the duties of the office and laid out a classification of work for every employee under his jurisdiction. The clerical force and deputies were assigned certain work and placed at the head of newly organized departments. Each person is held accountable for the efficient functioning of his respective classification. Department instructions, carefully worked out by Mr. Ely, were issued every member of the department so no misunderstanding might arise as to the duties devolving upon every member of the staff.

In reorganizing the office functions, Mr. Ely's former business

LOCAL COURT CASES

Among the local court cases before Recorder Jacoby was that of John Dovo, of 64 Roosevelt avenue vs. Alfred Edmond of 90 Heald street.

Edmond complained that Dovo had cut his coat.

The upshot of it all was that Dovo was confronted with a fine of $50 or 40 days in jail. He was also directed to pay $10 damage for slashing the coat.

MAKE SURVEY OF SCHOOL SYSTEMS

Gov. Names Committee of Twenty Citizens.

During the week Governor Moore appointed Harry Heber, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, to a Supreme Court post, which was vacated by Judge Campbell, who has been shifted to the position of Chancellor.

Representative Mary Norton, of Hudson County will serve as temporary chairman of the Democratic State Committee for the duration of the campaign as the successor of Mr. Heber. The election of Mrs. Norton took place on Saturday at a special meeting of the Democratic State Committee which was attended by Thomas H. Hagerty and Mrs. Ethel Kirkpatrick, state committee representatives from Middlesex county.

It is reported as State Chairman Mayor Hague is disposed to look with favor upon the candidacy of David T. Wilentz, former Democratic chairman of Middlesex county.

Mr. Wilentz, who was County Chairman in 1925 then began the up-building of Democracy in the county. In 1928, despite the Hoover landslide, this county was lost for Dill by less than 1,000, although it was the home county of the Republican candidate for Governor, Morgan F. Larson.

Since then the county has become increasingly Democratic and the last few years Mr. Wilentz has been succeeded by Mr. Hayes who is popular and has done a good job. Mr. Wilentz felt forced to give up his county post due to press of personal affairs.

It is quite generally believed in Trenton that Mrs. Norton will serve only until after the general election when Mr. Wilentz is slated to replace her.

BARTHOLOMEW FITZPATRICK

Bartholomew Fitzpatrick of 100 Emerson street died of heart failure on Tuesday.

Mr. Fitzpatrick was a resident of the borough for over 40 years and for all that time a communicant of St. Joseph's Church. Among the organizations of which he was a member were the A. O. H., Woodmen of the World, Holy Name Society.

He is survived by a widow, two daughters, two sisters and a brother. The daughters are Mrs. Daniel O'Rourke and Mrs. Phillip Foxe. The sisters are Mrs. Mary Maloney and Mrs. Bridget Manzoni and a brother Theodore.

He was buried from St. Joseph's Church this morning and interment was at St. James cemetery in Woodbridge.

Tomorrow night a dance will be held by the Ukrainian Social Club at the Nathan Hale School.

On Sunday a pig roast is to be held by the Ukrainian Citizens Club at the club rooms on Charles Street.

BROWN'S ELECTION BENEFIT TO BORO

Gives Carteret Place in State Government.

Elmer E. Brown, member of the Assembly from Carteret and majority leader in the Assembly, is again a candidate.

It is not unlikely that if the Democrats control the Assembly again that he will be further advanced from floor leader to Speaker. This is customary when the party controls the legislature for two successive sessions.

However, in order to have the local boy advanced, it is necessary that he be re-elected. His many friends from Carteret no doubt like to see this accomplished. This can only be done by giving definite consideration to his support on election day.

Aside from the desirability of having Carteret represented in the Assembly, there is the even more important angle of supporting Governor Moore's tax reduction program. In order to support Governor Moore's program it is essential that he have handling legislative matters those who are acquainted with his aim and the policies he hopes to carry out in the future. Unquestionably some of the most important legislation from the standpoint of recovery for the taxpayers of the State will have to have consideration at the next session.

WILENTZ SLATED FOR CHAIRMANSHIP

Hague Favors County Man for State Post.

Governor Moore announced on Wednesday the appointment of a committee of 25 prominent citizens including eleven educators, to make a survey of the New Jersey school system.

In his letter to the members of the committee the Governor wrote:

"It is recognized throughout our State that a reasonable program of public education must be continued as efficiently and economically as possible."

Members of the committee, in addition to the eleven educators, include fourteen prominent citizens. Included among them is Louis Bamberger, Newark merchant; Edward W. Duffield, acting president of Princeton University and President of the Prudential Life Insurance Company; Arthur J. Sinnott, managing editor of the Newark Evening News; Thomas McCarter, president of the Public Service; Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, widow of Grover Cleveland, and Albert Payson Terhune, writer; among others.

REPUBLICAN DINNER-DANCE

The members of the Young People's Republican Club are to attend a dinner-dance to be held at the Hotel Pines in New Brunswick on Friday evening, October 28th. They will have prominent speakers at this affair and are to also have a group of the well known radio and vaudeville artists as entertainers. Connie Atkinson's Orchestra is to play.

The Republicans have also been invited to attend a county-wide mass meeting at New Brunswick on the night of November 3rd.

On Wednesday the Court Fidelis Catholic Daughters held a card party at St. Joseph's hall.

MAKING UNEMPLOYMENT!

Speaking of real estate taxes in last week's issue, the independent Sunday Call of Newark had this to say:

"Because of high real estate taxes, industrial concerns are leaving New Jersey increasing the volume of unemployment and causing industrious workmen to lose their partly paid for homes, because they can no longer meet the taxes."

In short, the Call points out the waste, extravagance and graft in public life causing high taxes, stifles business and creates unemployment. There is no secret about this.

REPORT ON LOCAL PLANT CONDITION

Industries Here Strive To Continue Active.

Financial reports that have been published indicate that local industrial companies have been very hard hit. Some were not hit until 1930 but the blow made up in severity for its lack of timeliness.

The American Agricultural Chemical Company lost over a million, four hundred thousand dollars in the year ending June 30, 1932. For the past two years the loss was well over two millions of dollars.

Fertilizer companies generally received terrific punishment financially. Armour & Company's loss early in the year showed five million on the wrong side with a statement that much of the unsatisfactory showing was due to the fertilizer end of the business.

Virginia-Carolina Chemical, better known locally as Consumers, reported a loss of almost $300,000.00 for the year ending June 30th. This loss, together with that of the preceding year, ran well up to one and a half million dollars.

It is well known that farmers have been hard hit and therefore have been in no position to buy fertilizer for the last few years. In many cases where they owed money in this connection they ignored the bills and used what they had for other purposes. Realizing the restricted market a merger of Armour Fertilizer and Virginia Carolina was undertaken, but even that hit some snags and the situation has not been better. This has been the worst year for the farmers many not even harvesting their crops. They generally buy their fertilizer hereabouts in the Spring, the local fertilizer shipping season. The outlook at this moment looks like very little shipping and consequently even less than this year.

The June report of the Copper Works showed losses at a rate well over a million and a half for this year. The June quarterly loss alone was $381,408.00. The lack of demand for copper the world over and the copper tariff this year put a severe crimp in the local works. The tariff appears likely to seriously affect its future as much of the ore sent here from South American mines is now sent directly abroad. The copper tariff is four cents while copper today is selling for six. One large refinery has been opened abroad by Belgian interests and another is being constructed by British control.

The first six-months of this year for Foster-Wheeler showed a loss of $646,028.00 with the business since June steadily declining indicating a much greater loss for the year than the first six months showed. Unfortunately, Wheeler makes practically nothing for stock, manufacturing machinery and equipment according to the customer's orders. Without orders they have nothing to work on such as companies supplying a store trade.

I. T. Williams & Sons were confronted with a waning demand for their products before the depression when many imitations of mahogany were being marketed. Since 1929, of course, the mahogany trade has been largely at a standstill. A consolidation of three companies last week, following the closing down of many others, indicates the only direction in which they believe any hope lies of weathering the storm.

Auditors Scan County Payroll At Republicans Request

Director Lewis Compton

Representatives of the auditing firm, Price-Waterhouse & Company auditors of Newark, New Jersey, presented themselves at the office of the County Treasurer, together with a Mr. Hopkins from the City of New Brunswick, with the request that they be permitted to inspect and audit the payrolls of the Board of Chosen Freeholders for the month of September.

Director Lewis Compton of the Board, in conformance with the existing policy of the Board, to keep the public fully informed concerning the condition of the public business, immediately granted permission for this inspection of the public records. Director Compton requested the Assistant Treasurer, Mr. Arthur J. Hamley and the County Auditor, Mr. Nathan Lipman, to lend every possible assistance in connection with this investigation. Instructions were also given by Mr. Compton to make available for the Price-Waterhouse & Co., auditors, the payrolls not only for the month of September, but the current October payrolls and also the payrolls of last July, or any other than that they may want as well.

The auditing of public records just prior to an election naturally raises the assumption or suspicion that the investigation is being made for solely political purposes. If this is the case and if the Republican Chairman is in any way back of this investigation, in all fairness to the Board and in all fairness to the general public, we feel justified in demanding that the results of this investigation of the County payrolls be given the widest and widest publicity.

LEWIS COMPTON,

Director Board of Chosen Freeholders.

The foregoing statement was promoted to the effect that E. W. Hopkins, a prominent Republican of New Brunswick arrived at the County Treasurer's office with representatives of the above named auditing firm requesting an examination of the Board's records for the month of September, intimating that additional men were being employed on the eve of election.

ROOSEVELT B. & L. TO PAY $52,000

The Roosevelt Building and Loan Association is paying out this week as a maturity 263 shares totaling $52,000.00. It is their 8th annual maturity for it is now in its 19th year. It has assets close to $400,000.

This Association has had a remarkable career. Since its organization it has never had to take over any properties and as this goes to press it owns no real estate whatever. Before the coming winter is over however, it may have to take over a few properties breaking a most remarkable record.

This is a tribute to its management. It has always been conservative. Some have found fault with this in the past but conditions of today show that the action of the directors was one of far-seeing wisdom.

The optimism and thrift of the many shareholders who have participated in this distribution, has been rewarded. The money will come timely to many of them and it should be a great benefit to the community as a whole once it gets into circulation through the payment of bills.

This is but another evidence that "thrift" does pay after all. It provides for that "rainy" day which always comes sooner or later in the lives of most of us. Saving is merely doing without something one can afford to do without and withholding the money, putting it away in some safe form of investment for use at a future time when jobs may be scarce or sickness present or some of the many other misfortunes of life meet up with us.

On Sunday night a Halloween dance is to be held at the Church of the Sacred Heart.

NOTICE

The Ritz Theatre management announces a new price policy now in effect, of 10c and 25c during the week will be in vogue, with the present prices prevailing on Saturdays and Sundays. Also beginning Saturday, November 5th-5 Acts of Vaudeville will be included on the bill.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

He turned to another subject, one that had been on his mind a good deal of late. "It wouldn't be hardly reasonable to expect you to be friendly with us McCanns. Now that Matt has gone it's too late for me to fix things up. But I want to tell you how I feel. When I heard of what had happened to him it gave me a jolt. At first I was worried about Wils. But while I was sittin' there at the Circle Cross by his bedside, after he began to mend some, I couldn't get Matt outa my head. We were mighty close, like I told you, in those early days. I kep' seein' him as he was when we frolicked around together. An' there was you, lookin' the spittin' image of yore mother, first savin' my boy's life an' then lettin' me come to yore house an' stay with him. I'll say you made me feel like a plugged nickel, you an' yore young brother Phil. How could I go on hatin' you Starks after that? I reckon I'm a tough an' stubborn proposition, but I had to give in. No other way to it."

In her eyes swam little wells of tears. "I wish you had come to Dad while he was alive and asked him to make up. Why didn't you?"

"Because I'm a hardened old sinner h—bent on gettin' my own way. I couldn't any more have come to Matt than he could of come to me. But with you it's different. First off, I can't ever pay what I owe you, not if I live to be a hundred an' lie awake nights figurin' out ways. Then, too, whenever I look at you, I see yore mother shinin' outa yore eyes."

"You—loved her?" she asked, very softly.

Again he looked across the arid desert at the papermache mountains. In the peculiar afternoon sunlight they looked like artificial stage settings.

"Yes," he spoke, it seemed, rather to himself than to her.

"Was it about her you and Dad quarreled?"

"No. About some trifling thing to start with. We had kind friends to keep us stirred up. When he was for a thing, I fought it. If I wanted it he was against it. The older we got the worse it grew. But I'm through now. I throw up my hands. I quit. If there can't be friendship between us, anyhow there will be peace."

"Yes," Julia agreed.

"We'll let it go at that."

"It's not that I hate you—any of you—any more. I see now there's nothing but loss in that. But I don't see how we can be friends. Dad stands between us and you. If he was alive I could go to him and tell him how I feel. But I can't do that now. I can't feel it would be loyal for us to be friends with his enemies." Her honest eyes appealed to him for understanding.

He nodded. "I reckoned you would feel thataway. Well, I'm glad we've cleared things up. The feud's off anyhow."

"Yes, it's off," she assented.

Peter did not offer to shake hands on it. He glanced at the descending sun. "I'll be hittin' the home trail," he said.

She turned, after she had ridden a little way, to watch him, a strong, straight-backed figure sitting his horse like a Centaur. A lump choked her throat. The sight of him carried her mind back irresistibly to her father. He, too, had been virile and purposeful and dominant, but beneath the gnarled surface she had known him tender and loving. What a waste that his last years should have been embittered by this implacable quarrel with the man who had been his closest friend! What a loss that he should have been cut off in his prime! Surely if he had lived the breach would have been healed.

Phil was combing burrs out of his pony's mane when the cowpuncher, Red, rode into the yard at the Circle Cross and fell into the easy posture of the rider who intends to be comfortable while he stops and chats.

"How'll you swap that paint hoss for my buckskin?" Red drawled after greetings had been exchanged.

"I ain't swapping this peg pony for any other in Arizona," Phil announced proudly.

"You sure got some notion of yore broomtail, boy. I was allowin' you'd orta gimme ten dollars to boot. Buck's no plug, I'd have you know. Mighty few broncs can travel alongside of him. Seventy miles he done yesterday in the hills an' never turned a hair."

"Where was it you an' Buck broke the world's record?"

"Up in the Mal Pais—taking a New York engineer over the divide to look at Basford's copper proposition."

"Didn't meet up with any rustlers whilst you were up there, did you?"

About to give a careless negative, Red stopped with his mouth open. "Why, dawggone my hide, maybe I did," he said at last. "I never thought of it till right now. We was 'way up above Guadaloup canyon when we saw a couple men driving eight or ten vacas into it. I holloed, but they was a long way off an' didn't answer. Maybe at that I'm lucky they didn't hear me."

"Headed south, were they?"

"Y'betcha! They went 'nto this an'

of the gulch an' that's the last we seen of 'em."

Phil spoke his thoughts, to himself rather than to Red. "Funny they were 'way up there. Who could they have been? Where were they goin'? Unless they were rustlers. Wish you'd ride to the Flying VY an' tell Wils McCann what you've told me. It won't take you more than three-four miles outa yore way, an' Buck being the best traveler in the U. S. A.—"

"Which I'm bettin' my boots he is."

"It'll hardly be any trouble a-tall. Tell Wils I'll meet him at Jim Yerby's along about three o'clock."

The cowpuncher was still in sight when Julia came out to the porch.

"I'll have to leave, sis," her brother said.

"Red tell you something?" she asked.

He repeated to her what the range rider had said.

She nodded agreement. "Looks like you've struck a hot trail. What do you mean to do?"

"I'm going to put it up to McCann. My notion is for him an' me to drift up to Guadaloup and see what we see."

"Let me go, too."

"Now looky here, Jule, you be reasonable," he protested. "This is no woman's job. You know that mighty well. We're out after bear meat. We're liable to be out three-four days. I never did see such a girl for wantin' to boss everything."

"I don't, either. I'm not trying to boss this. Far as that goes I've been up in the Mal Pais before. You remember when we went hunting with Dad and stayed a week."

"Well, you're not going."

"I don't want to go. I'll ride with you far as the sheep range. I can stop there tonight with the girls. I'll tell Ethel what a nice boy you are and how kind to your sister."

"I can tell her anything it's necessary for her to know," he said, flushing beneath the tan.

"You might omit something on account of being so modest."

He looked at her suspiciously, remembering something Jasper had once told him. "I reckon you're not going to meet Wils McCann, are you?"

His words struck out of her face the laughter, the gleam of slyly malicious that had sparkled in her eyes. "What do you mean?" she asked tensely.

He was ashamed of himself, sorry he had spoken. "I didn't mean that, Jule."

"Of all the mean things you could have said—" She stopped, from sheer inadequacy, then turned and walked swiftly into the house.

Phil stood a moment, frowning at the ground, then slowly followed. He had not meant really to hurt her and he could not let it stand so. He knocked on her bedroom door, was told sharply to go away, and after a moment entered.

"Sorry, sis. I didn't go to say it. I reckon I was kinda peeved because you were joshin' me."

"If you think just because I was civil to him at Mesa, after he had worked his head off to save Dave Stone—"

"Shucks, I don't think a thing. Nothin' to it. I just shot off my mouth. Don't be sore about it. I'll slap saddles on the broncs an' we'll start."

"I'm not going."

It took him ten minutes of coaxing to get her to relent.

Harmony restored, Phil roped and saddled the horses.

Crossing Tincup pass, they descended to the mesa above the Painted Desert. The horses' hoofs flung up clouds of fine dust in the fringe of desolation which lay between the mesa and the sheep camp.

"I was sure enough spittin' cotton," Phil told Ethel after he had drunk two glasses of the lemonade she made for them. "Down in the basin she's certainly dry as a cork laig this time of year."

Wilson McCann had not yet passed, Ann Gifford told them, so they sat on the porch and waited for him.

Ann's attitude toward her neighbors was much changed. Her experience with them had broken the ice barrier that had dammed in her the flow of human fellowship. The manner with which she greeted the world was less hostile. Many of the kindly people who lived on the edge of the Painted Desert had come to her with warm eyes, a little awkwardly but manifestly, in a friendly spirit, and had contrived to suggest that bygones be bygones.

Through Ann's new-born faith in her fellows ran a thread of distress. She knew that the testimony of Ethel and of herself had done much to save Dave Stone. A little flare of fierce and primitive joy rose in her when she thought of it. All her life she would be glad that she had done what she had. She had been forced to risk her reputation or let him die, and she had chosen the better part. The sting of shame in it was that she did not know what the Texan himself thought of it. He had come to her that night and thanked her formally. Since then she had not seen him. Beneath his cold and grave exterior, what was his real feeling about it? She tortured herself with doubts.

It was well past four when Wilson McCann rode across the mesa leading a pack horse. He had not been at home, he explained, when Phil's messenger arrived. Hence the delay.

Julia said a word to him before he left. They were for the moment standing alone. "You'll look after Phil, won't you? He's only a boy."

"I'll do that if I think I can," he answered, smiling into her eyes by way of reassurance.

"Is it safe to go up there—you two alone?" she asked. "I wish you'd wait and take a posse."

He shook his head. "Can't do that. We'd be followin' a cold trail if we did. But I reckon it'll be all right. We're not allowin' to bring any rustlers back with us. Just now we're after information."

"Well, don't let Phil do anything foolish, please."

Again he promised to look after the boy.

He tightened a cinch before he made reference to another subject on his mind. "Father was tellin' me about his talk with you."

"Yes, we smoked a pipe of peace," she said.

"I'm sure glad. Far as I was concerned it wasn't necessary. I was through, anyhow. You an' yore brother have done too much for me. I'd never lift a hand against you. But it's better to have an open treaty."

"If Dad had only lived," she murmured, more to herself than to him.

"Father can't get over that. I reckon they hated each other, but there was something between them deeper than hate. I expect Mr. Stark knows that now, if over there they know about things here. Likely their hate hurt them a lot more than they let on."

"That's what I think. Did your father tell you about how I feel?"

Her deep eyes met his and through him went a thrill that quickened his pulses. His drumming heart beat the tidings that he wanted this lovely girl, so quick and vibrant with life, so passionately desirous of the fine things it had to offer—wanted to take her for his mate and spend the years of his life beside her. Yet he knew it could not be. There was a chasm between him and her that could not be bridged.

"Yes, I understand that too. It's the only way you could feel. But . . . Remember that night we rode across the desert together an' talked about how it had got us; how it had made us tough an' ferocious an' harsh like that clump of cactus there; an' how you said it had another side, too, for from that dry waste came lovely flowers an' outa the heat came hours when the air was all rose-colored an' pink an' lilac? I've thought a heap about that, an' you sayin' it was thataway with our lives, too. It's so . . . What I'm gettin' at is this, that if the desert makes us gaunt and hardy, if it gives us endurance and fierceness, shows us how to survive when softer folks, untrained by it, would crumple up an' die, maybe these very qualities, brought into service an' subdued to use, are the ones we've got to have to win out on this thirsty frontier. We live here we're always seein' the flash of teeth. We've got to stand heat an' drought an' hardship or get off the map. All summer my sister has been tryin' to cut the ironweed outa her garden, but it's still there, I notice."

"Yes, it's tough, like the bishnaga and the cholla and the prickly pear," she agreed.

"Nature gives hooks an' barbs an' saw-edged teeth to those of her children that need 'em. A mule-deer learns to go a couple weeks without water. Same way with prairie dogs an' coyotes. If they couldn't stand

"No, you're right about Gitner. He belongs to the lobo family, I reckon. Well, I'll be movin' along."

"I don't think you belong to the lobo family, Mr. McCann," she told him impulsively. "I did once, but I've changed my mind."

Their level gazes met.

"Much obliged for that," he replied in the drawl of the Southland. "I don't reckon I'd better tell you what I think about you."

Into her dark eyes there flashed a momentary panic. She drew back, her pulses fluttering.

Phil called across to his companion. "Ready, Wils?"

The two horsemen disappeared round a bend in the road.

Wilson McCann and Phil Stark did not find Yerby at home. A Mexican boy herding sheep on the hillside near said he had seen him start toward in the morning.

The trail ascended steeply. The travelers left behind them the desert vegetation. The lean and haggard ocotillo, cruel of claw, no longer shared with the mesquite dominance of the landscape. Catalpa and cholla were still to be seen and occasionally a Spanish bayonet. Scrub oaks and juniper appeared, at first straggling and hesitant. The riders passed through a splendid grove of live oaks festooned with great clumps of mistletoe, and as they still climbed upward pines were silhouetted against the skyline.

They camped far up in the hills, choosing for the location a small park where grass grew in place of burweed. The very sky had changed its character. It had become more live, much nearer, a deeper blue. The tang of the pines was in the winy air.

Phil chopped fuel and built a fire while his companion undid the lash rope and removed the cross buck from the pack horse, picketed the animals, and brought water from the spring. After supper they smoked a pipe and chatted.

"We'd ought to reach Guadaloup by nine o'clock, wouldn't you say?" Phil murmured sleepily, his head pillowed on the most comfortable spot of his saddle.

"I reckon. If we get an early start." They were up before daybreak. The sun was just peeping over the ridge when McCann threw the diamond hitch with the lash rope. It was possible, though not probable, that at any time they might jump up the rustlers driving stolen cattle. Wherefore they rode warily, following ridges where they could so that they could sweep with their eyes as much territory as was feasible.

Guadaloup canyon opened before them after an hour or two of travel. Precipitous walls shut them into a defile, narrow and tortuous, up which they moved in single file. The soil was a red clay formation. Loose rocks strewn the floorway of the gorge, flung down ages ago from the heights above.

The trailers dismounted and studied the ground. Sure enough there had been cattle here and recently. Prints of horses' hoofs showed that they had been driven and had not strayed here by chance. This they already knew, by the testimony of the cowpuncher Red.

They followed the gulch for several miles. The walls opened out, so that the sun beat down upon the riders and baked them. There was no shade. The only vegetation showing was the creosote clinging to the rocks. Even this was scarce and stunted.

A bend in the canyon brought them to a clump of small pines. A spring emerged from a fissure in the red stone strata.

Wilson stopped the other rider. "Hold on! Let's have a look before we mess up any tracks that may be here."

They swung down and grounded the reins of the horses. Through the red sand ran half a dozen tracks of sidewinders.

The men moved forward slowly to the damp soil surrounding the spring. What Wilson was looking for he found. His finger pointed out a heel mark. The boot was evidently much run over on the outside and the heel badly worn. The print of the same foot was stamped also in another moist spot below the spring. It had been made by a very large boot.

"Some folks are right careless," McCann said.

Airplane Control That Takes Burden of Flight

The Sperry airplane pilot is an invention which makes flying safer. It is a gyroscopic control which makes instant corrections for all effects of air currents and shifting of weights upon an airplane, and keeps the craft flying in a perfectly level position on a true course. It is a control that has been used by the military services in bombing planes and is designed on mechanical principles identical with the automatic steamship pilot which has been in use for many years. Many merchant and naval vessels are equipped with the device.

The airplane pilot does not eliminate any of the crew, but takes the strain of long flights from them. The crew makes all take-offs and landings in the "Sure are. Fellow who stomped that track is a considerable sized guy. He had ought to be careful where he writes his signature."

"If he knows what's good for him he'll write it in Mexico muy pronto."

"Looks like he's near the end of his trail here. Now we're on to him he'll not last long, I'd say. They must be holin' up near here."

"Not so far away." Wilson spoke apparently without stress. "Gitner knows these mountains pretty well, I expect."

"You think it's Gitner." Phil was startled, though the words voiced a fear that had been in his own mind.

"Looks thataway. You know Gitner's big feet, an' how his boots are always run over at the heel."

The boy made no answer. A disturbing thought had found lodgment in his mind, one so full of ill omen that the muscles beneath his heart seemed to have given way. If Gitner was one of the rustlers—and he no longer doubted it for a moment, scant as was the evidence at hand—was Jasper also one of them? The thought of it shook his courage. There was nothing admirable in his brother, nothing that as a boy he could look up to as an example. But it was a long step from worthlessness to cattle thieving. Almost the worst crime on the docket in the border land is rustling. It gave him a shock to face the possibility that his father's son might be guilty of it.

"Afraid I Won't Keep My End Up; So You Want Me to Turn in My String of Horses?"

It was precisely because of this that Wilson had mentioned Gitner's name. If the boy had to meet such a facer it was better that he should have time to reflect upon it first.

"This isn't yore job, Phil," the older man said presently. "You ride home an' tell Jim Yerby an' Dave Stone to meet me at the mouth of the canyon in two days. I'll stink around an' do some scoutin' till they come."

Phil looked him straight in the eye. "It's my job much as it is yours. If you thought it was my job yesterday, what makes you say today it's not? Nothing has changed, far as I can see."

They were both thinking of the same thing, that one of the men whose trail they were following might be Jasper Stark. But Wilson could not refer to his fears any more than the boy could, except indirectly when they mentioned the name of the big Texan.

He evaded. "This is liable to be a bigger task than I had figured. If we meet up with Gitner he'll go to shootin' sure. I reckon we need more help."

"All right," agreed Phil calmly. "You go get it an' I'll scout around an' wait for you."

McCann's brown white-toothed smile flashed. He was not getting very far with the boy. "Feelin' real cock-a-doodle-do, ain't you? I'm not claimin' to be high, low, jack, and the game, but I'm some older than you. Seems to me it's my say-so."

"Afraid I won't keep my end up, so you want me to turn in my string of horses?" Phil asked, using the figure of speech of the puncher on the trail.

"No, sir, not a bit afraid of that. I've a notion you'd go through from h—l to breakfast. But like I said, this Gitner's a lead pumper. He'll have four-five fellows with him, all of 'em tough nuts to crack. My notion is for you to go back an' pick up some of the boys—say Curt Quinn an' Stone an' Yerby an' my brother Lyn. You'll be back in two days if you're so h—l-bent on bein' in this and we'll sure round up these birds an' tell 'em what for."

"That wasn't yore notion when we started. This was to be a scoutin' party to cut the trail of these rustlers an' report what we found out."

Many Buttons, the More the Smarter

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AUTUMN modes call for buttons and then some. Whole battalions of them are ranging themselves on the new frocks, coats and blouses. They are apt to park most anywhere, these legions of buttons, maybe in a prim row up and down the front or back, or like as not diagonally across the bodice front or fastening the sleeve even up to the shoulder line or in ornamental groups. There's really no telling what course buttons are apt to pursue this season, for they seem to be having it all their own way as to when, where and how they shall be used.

When you button that new frock, coat or blouse, be sure to button it in the once old-fashioned but now new-fashioned way with honest-to-goodness buttonholes. It is really the chic way of doing it. Crowd as many buttons into space as you will, the more the smarter.

As to whether you button this or that up the front or down the back or vice versa, well, that is really a matter of choice, although we must say the new woolen dresses and crepe blouses which button down the back are frankly good looking. The outfit which the modishly attired young woman is wearing in the picture, turning her back to us so as to better display the buttoned fastening, bears out this statement.

ble has a peculiarly interesting story to tell. At first glance it might well be taken for a one-piece dress or perhaps a skirt with a bodice top. It is none such. What it really is, is a dress-and-jacket combination of novel design. To explain in detail, a bodice-like jacket with fur-bordered sleeves buttons up the back, or down, if you prefer to have it so, over a one-piece dress made of the self-same black rabbit's hair wool. The long sleeves belong to the frock. However, the point we want to make is that it buttons up the back in latest approved manner.

When it comes to coats a many-button fastening gives them a decidedly new styling. The coat pictured has buttons from tip-toe. It is of beige woolen and the bow is of wide brown moire ribbon, pulled through a slot in the cape and then tied. Of course the wearer need not stop and meticulously button every button into its buttonhole. The ultra thing to do is to fasten three or four casually at the waistline as pictured to the left in the picture. Even the sleeves are buttoned at the wrist and the cape likewise subscribes to the button vogue.

Which all goes to show that there is absolutely no such thing as overdoing the button fad this season. What's more, every sort of button from the simplest bone types to the most gorgeous jeweled effects are employed.

When buttons are not actually used to fasten, they play a decorative role, one of the cleverest movements being the placement of buttons in a single row, outlining necklines and other edges. They are using button trims on hats, too. Velvet berets with velvet-covered buttons grouped on their crowns are among the new Paris showings.

SMART TOWN WEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Materials were never more versatile or novel or richly colorful than they are this season. The sentiment is all in favor of quality-kind weaves. The fur-trimmed coat-dress sketched to the left is outstanding, both as to its styling and its material, which is a patterned rough spongy silk-and-wool weave called rogodura. Its little geometric pattern is unobtrusively interwoven. It is dull, thick, drapy and delightfully lightweight—very desirable for high class street and spectator wear. The contrasting scarf collar has a bit of astrakhan about it which adds to its tone. The other dress is fashioned of a deeply pebbled, lusterless heavy crepe. It cleverly simulates, in its styling, a modish wrap-around effect.

FALL BRINGS NEW NOTE IN SWEATERS

The vogue for suits this fall has brought all sorts of new ideas in sweaters in its wake. Every woman who has a tweed or knitted suit wants to vary it with at least three blouses, and one of these is sure to be a sweater. The latest in sports sweaters are gay plaids, combining the costume color with bright contrasting shades. These sweaters appeal to the school and college girl—for you can't get too much color on the campus.

They are very simply styled, for their gay patterns are sufficiently decorative without further elaboration. One especially smart one, in a bright green, red and yellow plaid, for wear with a green tweed suit, has a high crew neckline, fastened with three buttons. It is finished at the waistline with a wide ribbed band, and the slightly full sleeve has a tight ribbed cuff.

Another favorite with the school and college set is the crew-necked slip-over, usually in hand knit effect, in solid color. This is youthful and practical, and is worn in color to contrast with the skirt.

Paris Sets Out Show of New Winter Modes

Cosack hats are displayed in Paris centers of fashion, with a form-fitting silhouette as the last word in winter styles. Black and colored felt astrakhan are to be worn tipped over the forehead with virtually skintight clothes.

The new silhouette shows shorter skirts, 12 inches from the ground, and has plain bodices and sleeves. The skirts are emphasized by widened and padded shoulders, with the waistline high in front and dropped decidedly in back.

Knitted stocking caps, with a high rolled rim, the outstanding headgear with sports wear. The colors are smoke blue, hyacinth blue, cabbage red, geranium red and pumice gray.

Veil Fits Tone of Chic to New Fall Fashions

With her high-pinned-in waistline, leg-of-mutton sleeves, high neckline, and hat perched at a precarious angle, this fall every woman will want to indulge in her secret ambition to wear a veil. The coquettish possibilities of the veil, as part of the Edwardian silhouette, are irresistible.

There are a lot of new wrinkles, literally and figuratively, in the new fall veils.

Trimming Is Confined to Parts Above Hips

Paris continues to confine all trimming—if any at all is used—to the portions of frocks or coats that are above the hips. The wide-shouldered, narrow-hipped, long-legged figure continues to be fashion's idea of the perfect silhouette, and clothes are designed to either accent or emphasize these features.

Progress of the Presidential Campaign—New York City Threatened With Bankruptcy—Great Britain Abrogates Trade Treaty With Russia.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

NO GREAT effort on the part of candidates and campaign leaders was necessary to keep the minds of the American people on politics during the week. But the effort was made nevertheless. Both President Hoover and Governor Roosevelt were out again on speaking tours, and eminent men of both major parties pleaded for the votes of the electors in all parts of the country. In the Middle West the chief speaker for the Democrats was Gov. Albert Ritchie of Maryland, one of the aspirants for the Presidential nomination in the Chicago convention. He debated issues and candidates with Henry Allen of the Republicans, in Chicago, and delivered other addresses there and elsewhere, and all the time he stressed the importance of the prohibition issue.

Governor Roosevelt in his own behalf spent eight days talking in Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Springfield, Ill., St. Louis and down through Kentucky and Tennessee to Atlanta; and then up through South and North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland, to deliver the last of his major addresses in Baltimore.

President Hoover's journey was a week-end trip whose main objective was Detroit. On the way to the Michigan metropolis he made brief stops and talks at Charlestown, W. Va., at Columbus and Toledo in Ohio, and several other places. The President's aides said he had developed a liking for rear platform campaigning as a result of his trips to Des Moines and Cleveland.

There was nothing surprising in the announcement of the La Follette organ in Madison, Wis., that the La Follette faction in that state would support Mr. Roosevelt. Rev. James R. Cox, Catholic priest of Pittsburgh, withdrew as the Presidential candidate of the Jobless party and urged all his followers to support Roosevelt. This was quite within his rights, but his public statement that President Hoover "never lifted a hand or raised a voice to relieve the suffering American people" is an example of either inexcusable mendacity or deplorable ignorance.

Secretary of State Stimson got into action in New York, attacking the records of both Roosevelt and Garner. Charles M. Schwab, interviewed in London, said he believed "the best way to better conditions is to re-elect Mr. Hoover."

NEW YORK city is in such a distressing financial condition that the bankers have refused to advance funds for the November pay roll, and told the men who are running the metropolis they would not save it from bankruptcy unless the budget were radically reduced. So the budget makers got together and slashed off approximately $75,000,000, which the bankers said was not nearly enough. A large part of the savings planned by the board of estimate was through the adoption of a fifty-year subway bond scheme. This, it was admitted, spelled the doom of the 5-cent fare to which New York has clung so tenaciously. It was believed a 10-cent fare would be established within a year or two.

Acting Mayor McKee tried to put into effect wholesale salary reductions and elimination of workers in over-stuffed departments, but the Tammany bloc would have none of this. They even put into the budget some of the appropriations that had been cut out.

The city must have additional funds supplied to it before November 1, as there is only $6,000,000 left in the treasury with which to meet the semi-monthly installment of $13,000,000 for the pay roll.

WHEN the British parliament opened its fall session almost the first thing it heard was the announcement of J. H. Thomas, secretary of state for dominions that Great Britain had broken off commercial relations with Soviet Russia and abrogated the trade pact with the Moscow government in order to carry out the economic policy adopted by the imperial conference in Ottawa. In one article of the agreement reached there, Great Britain and Canada agreed to prohibit the imports of any foreign country in which the state control of industries and commodity prices resulted in dumping abroad to the detriment of the new preferential tariff agreement of the British empire.

Mr. Thomas added that both the British government and Russia were still eager to increase the trade between the countries and that the Russians were ready to negotiate a new treaty that would not interfere with the empire's internal arrangements. The immediate practical effect of the renunciation of the trade treaty will be to deprive British consumers of large quantities of low-priced lumber, fish, and grain.

Secretary Thomas told the house also that the British negotiations with President De Valera of the Irish Free State had broken down and that De Valera contended the only permanent solution of the controversy would be the creation of a united Irish republic.

REPORTS made public in Washington were both good and bad. Putting the latter first, the treasury issued figures of the receipts and expenditures during July, August and September showing that the deficit of the first quarter of the fiscal year is $402,000,000, a rate which if kept up would send the treasury into the red to the tune of $1,600,000,000. The new income taxes coupled with high collections on miscellaneous taxes enacted in the new billion dollar tax bill last spring are counted on to hold this deficit down during the final months of the year.

Statistics given out by the Department of Commerce showed that the export trade of the United States in September, due principally to exceptionally large shipments of cotton, increased over the value for the previous month by a margin of $23,000,000—the largest monthly gain recorded so far this year.

Imports likewise showed an increase in September, as compared with August, the department stated, although it was less pronounced than the gain in export trade. During the month, it was shown, imports increased by $7,900,000 to total $98,000,000, or the highest monthly import level since June.

The United States during the month retained a favorable balance of trade amounting to $34,000,000. It was the largest favorable trade margin recorded in any month of this year. Another encouraging report was that of the federal oil conservation board, composed of Secretaries Wilbur, Hurley, Adams and Chapin. It said: "The American oil industry gives indications of being the first basic industry to emerge from the world depression."

The permanency of the improvement in the industry, however, will depend, the commission declared, on whether the oil producing states continue the co-operation they manifested in the production agreement of 1931, and on whether the oil states' advisory committee develops as it should into a permanent body or lapses into the background as conditions improve.

LAW authorities of Chicago, assisted by the federal government, were still trying to figure out some way to bring Samuel Insull back from Athens for trial on charges of embezzlement and grand larceny. The former multimillionaire refused the demand that he surrender his passport, and strolled around the Greek capital watched only informally by the police. But the diplomats in Athens were rushing the proceedings in connection with the ratification of the Greco-American extradition treaty, and the instruments were already on the way to Washington. Following the exchange it was believed Insull might be extradited. The fugitive appears to be well supplied with funds, and their source was explained when State's Attorney Swanson in Chicago learned that Samuel Insull, Jr., still has an income of $100,000 from four of the corporations that formed a main part of his father's utilities structure. He receives $25,000 salary each from Commonwealth Edison, People's Gas, Public Service of Northern Illinois and Midland United. The elder Insull, it will be recalled, also receives pensions totaling $21,000 a year, so the family is far from being poverty stricken.

Insull said he received a cablegram from an unnamed person warning him that the American authorities were plotting to have him kidnaped and removed to a country from which he could be immediately extradited. Responsible persons declared this story was ridiculously false.

COUNT STEPHEN BETHLEN, former premier of Hungary and one of that country's foremost statesmen was attacked in a law court in Budapest by an assassin but escaped unharmed. Louis Eskidit, private secretary to a former cabinet officer, approached the count through the crowd in the courtroom, but a policeman saw a dagger in his hand and seized him as he made a thrust. The motive was said to be desire to satisfy a private grudge.

TWO uprisings of convicts occurred early in the week. The first, in Speigner state prison of Alabama, resulted in the killing of one convict, the wounding of 24 others and the escape of one. Warden A. B. Smith displayed the utmost bravery in dealing with the convicts. The second instance was in Portsmouth penitentiary, Ontario. The 906 inmates, demanding cigarette papers and longer hours of recreation, put on a big riot, but were reduced to submission without loss of life.

GERMAN goods, but no German cash. That is what the foreign creditors of the reich must accept if they expect to be paid what is coming to them, according to a flat statement made by Chancellor Franz von Papen. This meant, he said, that creditor nations must open their frontiers to German goods, for Germany could not at present bear another drain of money withdrawals by creditors abroad. The chancellor estimated the foreign indebtedness of the country at $4,600,000,000.

Von Papen denied that Germany's quota policy for the restriction of imports was endangering the stability of the reich's currency. "Restriction of imports was not resolved out of chicanery but to save German agriculture from certain ruin," he said. In his speech, which was delivered at Paderborn, the chancellor also discussed disarmament, asserting that "Germany's aim is not to arm up to its neighbors' levels, but to procure world disarmament with equal security and justice. There must not be a system of hegemony or political alliances in Europe but one by which nations can serve humanity in mutual respect of their individualism."

POLICE authorities in Guadalajara, Mexico, after raiding a house, killing two men and arresting a priest and two women, announced they had frustrated elaborate plans for a religious uprising in the state of Jalisco. The authorities said they found a large quantity of rifles, pistols, ammunition, dynamite bombs, field equipment, a printing press and considerable printed matter urging the rebellion. Ten other priests were detained after being implicated in the plot. It is in the state of Jalisco that the quarrel between Mexico and the Vatican is most pronounced.

A pastoral letter by Archbishop Pascual Diaz, denouncing any attempt at armed resistance by Catholics, was read in all churches. All loyal Catholics were cautioned by the archbishop to obey the laws of Mexico and to avoid any movement that might be construed as resistance. The pope, the archbishop pointed out, would not approve any departure from peace.

FOR the second time Germany refused to go to Geneva for the proposed four-power conference to discuss her demand for equality of armament. Foreign Minister von Neurath informed the British that the decision was irrevocable. The Germans hold that there is too much French sentiment and influence in Geneva. Prime Minister MacDonald was not at all pleased with this refusal. "Germany," he said, "knows perfectly well that Britain does not oppose her claim to be regarded as an equal at the disarmament conference. We want disarmament, not rearmament, and the British government is continuing to pursue its purpose."

DISPATCHES from Tokyo said a great shakeup in the Japanese foreign service was imminent. The ambassadors from the United States, Moscow, Italy and Turkey already were in the city, and Ambassador Obata was ordered to return from Berlin. The only one of these who will not be replaced, probably, is Katsujirō Deluchi, who will come back to Washington because Foreign Minister Uchida cannot find a better man for the post. It was understood the cabinet was about to enter on the discussion of the policies to be assumed toward the United States, Russia and the League of Nations, and that a more positive foreign policy would be adopted. The press and the public in Japan have been clamoring for a change.

RUMANIA'S policy toward Soviet Russia caused a bitter dispute between Premier Alexander Vaida-Voevod and Nicholas Titulescu and resulted in the resignation of the former and his cabinet. King Carol summoned Dr. Iuliu Maniu, leader of the National Peasant party, to form a new government with Titulescu as foreign minister.

CIRCUIT JUDGE GUY BRASS, held Park of Platte City, Mo., was selected to succeed the late Francis M. Wilson as the Democratic nominee for governor of Missouri, by the Democratic state committee. The choice was unanimous, and was a victory for Tom Pendergast, Democratic political "boss" of Kansas City. Judge Brass will be opposed in the election November 8 by Edward H. Winter, Republican nominee.

THE first men in North America may have encountered an animal capable of cutting down forests and building big wooden houses. This creature was the castoroid, a relative of the beaver, but approximately ten times the size of the present animal, according to a report made to the American Society of Mammalogists by Alvin H. Cahn of the University of Illinois, who has traced the distribution of the skeletal remains of the creature over a great part of the continent. This giant which weighed approximately 500 pounds and had teeth 6 inches long, apparently disappeared at about the close of the last Ice age, when man is believed to have made his appearance. His range seems to have been concentrated in the Middle West, although a partial skeleton has been found as far away as Alaska.

The great creature must have been monarch of all it surveyed, Cahn believes, yet after attaining great numbers it became extinct quite suddenly. This may be explained, he thinks, because of its great specialization and enormous appetite. It apparently had the same habits as the modern beaver. "The present-day animal," he points out, "has a heavy bulky body. Its legs are short, it is clumsy on land, and has great difficulty in going over the rough terrain which marks the country where it lives because of the very qualities which make it so successful as an aquatic animal. How much greater difficulty must castoroids have had in leaving the water! "A modern beaver colony of ten individuals will cut down from 50 to 75 trees a year in order to live, and the bulk of its food is limited to two species of trees. Those trees are cut which, when felled, will be available to the animal from the water. Hence the time must come when the beaver must leave the water in order to obtain food. "The animals must then go inland for trees or migrate, and this migration may well be an overland journey of great difficulty. Imagine, then, a colony of ten castoroids, weighing 500 pounds instead of 50 pounds each. If a beaver cuts down 50 trees a year, how many hundred would a castoroid have to cut in the same time in order to persist? How much quicker must he have been forced to make land excursions for food. "Then would come the time of forced land marches which the bulk and structure of the great beaver would have rendered almost prohibitive. Some slight change in the physiography of the country would easily explain its extermination. There is no evidence, he points out, that the first men on the continent ever came in contact with the great beast or in any way helped in its extermination. There was no huge flesh-eating animal which could have made great inroads on it. The creature is believed to have built houses, like the modern beaver, but these must have been rather imposing structures. One partial skeleton is claimed to have been found inside a "house" made of 3-inch wood 8 feet square and 4 feet high. But this would not have been big enough to hold the owner, Cahn points out.

This Little Girl Got Well Quick

"Just after her third birthday, my little daughter, Connie, had a serious attack of intestinal flu," says Mrs. H. W. Turnage, 217 Cadwalder St., San Antonio, Texas. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her. "Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her pick up right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children."

Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the carton to be sure you get the genuine.

ICE AGE SAW END OF GIANT BEAVER

Huge Castoroid Victim of Own Appetite.

The first men in North America may have encountered an animal capable of cutting down forests and building big wooden houses. ### Shark Got Half "Catch"

As far as the records go, Ernest Pilman of Nantucket is the only man on the island who caught half a bluefish. Already having caught five, Pilman felt a mighty tug on his line and was positive he had hooked a big fellow. When he pulled it up on the shore he found he had hooked the front half of a bluefish. A shark had apparently made a grab for the bluefish after it took the hook and had bitten it off amidships as clean as though cut with a knife.

What a famous clinic discovered about this amazing Baby Food!

ORIGINATED 75 YEARS AGO . . . NEVER SURPASSED IN DIGESTIBILITY . . . EAGLE BRAND NOW PROVED IDEAL FOOD IN PHYSICIANS' TEST WITH 50 BABIES.

WHEN Gail Borden originated Eagle Brand back in 1857, he did so because there was a crying need for a pure, safe milk for babies. No one knew then what we know now of food values. No thorough scientific research had as yet been made in infant feeding.

Yet, amazing though it seems, this baby food created by Gail Borden proved so remarkable in its nutritive value and in its digestibility that it has survived 75 years of revolutionary discoveries in nutrition—has raised three generations of splendid babies—and today, in as thorough a test as was ever given to a baby food, has proved itself unsurpassed in baby building!

Today, Eagle Brand is hailed as a most modern baby food—second to none in its scientific proof of performance.

How the test was made Recently, two famous baby specialists conducted a feeding test with fifty average babies. For months, Eagle Brand was the only food these babies received, except for the supplementary foods* now given with mother's milk or any milk. X-rays were taken of their bones. Blood counts were made. Tooth development was watched. Heights, weights, strength were recorded. And all these records were compared with records of other groups fed on other baby foods.

At last came the verdict. In every way, the comparison was favorable to Eagle Brand. For those Eagle Brand babies showed themselves superbly nourished. This simple diet—Eagle Brand with the usual supplementary foods*—was wanting in nothing that a baby needs for health, growth. Your grocer has Eagle Brand. See directions on label.

*The usual supplementary foods, of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic vitamin D.

JUST HOW?

The presidential campaign of Roosevelt, criticizing everything and promising everything but providing no plan or no program, does not stand up under examination. Let us just take one instance of a recent declaration. One of his speeches he stated he would reduce Federal expenses twenty-five per cent. What a childish statement that is. Government obligations in the way of domestic and foreign debts, the cost of the pensions and other veterans' services and that of the War and Navy departments alone are more than seventy-five per cent of the cost of government. The Government cannot repudiate its bonds; it cannot refuse to take care of the widows and it cannot refuse to take care of the injured veterans. So, that, it can be seen at once that it would be utterly impossible to reduce Federal costs twenty-five per cent.

More and more it appears that Roosevelt does not care what he says.

IN NEW YORK

Many of the solid citizens of the country have been demanding of the backers of Governor Roosevelt what he is to do to cut down expenses. They pointed out there can be no return to prosperity until governmental costs are reduced. Roosevelt has said in one of his speeches he will reduce Federal Government expenses 25%.

In the first place he has no experience with the Federal Government and his speeches indicate he is wholly ignorant of many of its features. Let us take the New York State government of which he ought to have some knowledge. The increase in the cost of government in four years in which Mr. Roosevelt has been in in the State of New York has been 65%. Yet 1930-31-32 were all years of decreasing costs.

In 1931 New York State had a surplus of $55,000,000. Today it has a deficit of $62,000,000. Does it seem as if the man who has been responsible for that record could go into the gigantic field of Federal expenditures and be of any service to the 120,000,000 inhabitants of this country?

NOTHING TO BRAG ABOUT

At the meeting in Newark where 100,000 greeted Smith, Mayor Hague of Jersey City said:

"I worked hard, very hard, for Al Smith at the convention, but I am going to work twice as hard for Roosevelt."

That statement is confusing. So he is going to work twice as hard as he did for Smith? That sounds as if Smith was let down. Well, there are plenty in New Jersey who will not vote for Mr. Smith's betrayer, Mr. Roosevelt, Hague or no Hague.

They don't mind having Smith's aid and common sense in drafting the platform and in the campaign, but they do not want him for President—or no—never!

It is believed if Smith had been the nominee this time, he would have been elected by the solid, decent citizens of the country, who admire his courage, intelligence and common sense, even if they do not all approve of some of his colloquial expressions of speech.

WHY IT IS WET

Immediately after the Democratic convention in Chicago, your home paper, The Carteret News, said editorially that Roosevelt did not favor going all the way in the wet question and that Al Smith wrote that part of the platform.

On Monday night in Newark, Mr. Smith himself stated he wrote repeal and modification in the platform so there would be no dodging.

We were advised at the time that Roosevelt's suggestion was exactly the same as that proposed in the Republican platform which he now claims is a dodge.

The fact of the matter is Mr. Hoover is on record favoring going further than the platform. He, as President of the United States, says: "favor a change."

Mr. Smith himself said that the Republican rank and file favored a wetter plank than the convention gave them.

That is true. With the President now favoring a change and his party with him that question is settled.

Mr. Smith was honest as usual and said you could not have repeal for two years or more. That is just what this paper has said editorially. Yet to listen to Roosevelt, you would think you were going to get it right away. No matter what you want, he promises to give it to you.

WARREN BARBOUR

Warren Barbour had the only repeal resolution in the United States Senate. In spite of Southern Democrats, even after the Democratic convention in Chicago when they went on record for repeal, Warren Barbour of New Jersey attempted to get his repeal resolution brought out on the floor. Incidentally, the attempt to bring out the repeal resolution in the House was defeated by Speaker Garner, candidate for Vice-President, indicating just exactly how wet he and some of his associates from the Southern Democratic States are.

Attack has been made on Barbour from the tariff end. It should be said distinctly and clearly here in Carteret that while Barbour has stood against breaking down of tariffs that would injure the industry and workers in many New Jersey industries, he was man enough in the recent session to fight to protect Carteret industries and workers when he voted against the ridiculous tax on copper and oil, which seriously affect the local Copper Works and the Mexican Petroleum Corporation. The tax on imported oil has practically wiped out the local oil business and done away with its tankers, taking much income from Carteret. The tax on copper has hit the borough in even worse fashion. Barbour stood manfully and fought both of these taxes which were nothing else but tariffs.

So that his record in this connection has been 100% for New Jersey and its people.

SCHOOL NEWS

After a spirited campaign carried on for over a week the following officers were elected to represent the General Organization of Carteret High School: President, Michael Skerchek; Vice President, Gabriel Baksa; Treasurer, Francis D'Zurilla; Secretary, Earl Way.

The Senior Class under the direction of Miss Powers and Miss Heil, class advisors, met and elected the following officers: President, Charles Thatcher; Vice President, Mary Fischer; Secretary, Joseph Colton; Treasurer, Edward Galvanek.

The Junior Class held an election and the following were chosen to represent the class:

President: Anthony Szulimowski; Vice President, Andrew Niemiec; Secretary, Leo Kohn; Treasurer, Michael Markowitz.

Miss Van Eastern and Miss McCarthy are the class advisors of the Junior Class.

The first meeting of the Sophomore Class was held in the auditorium last Tuesday under the supervision of Miss Harrington and Miss Malloy, faculty advisors.

The Class was asked to lend its utmost support to every G. O. activity and an announcement was made to the effect that the home-room having the best record for dues each month would be awarded the Class banner.

Election of officers for the ensuing year followed, which results were as follows: President, Thomas Brandon; Vice President, Joseph Toth; Secretary, Michael Trivonovich; Treasurer, William Shaw.

Miss Genevieve Kramer, a supervisor of music in the local schools, was in charge of the program given in the assembly of the seventh and eighth grades on Monday.

The program provided included renditions by the orchestra, singing by the assembly and brief discussions by members of some of the musical instruments with a brief demonstration in the talks.

The orchestra members included Maud Richey, Thomas Lloyd, Alex Sabo, Francis Goz, Dove Cheret, Roslyn Gross, Eleanor Mittuch, John Karmonocky, Albert Marciniak, Stephen Burs, Alex Lysek, Thomas Connolly and Helen Lakatos.

The march was rendered by the school orchestra. The assembly gave the flag salute singing America and the program was wound up by the song, Columbia, following short talks by Maude Richey, Alex Lysek and Thomas Connolly.

The 11th Annual Picture Week was celebrated throughout the United States during the week of October 16th.

In connection with this celebration, the Art Department of Washington School presented a series of Pose Pictures taken from some of the famous masterpieces.

The program was given on Friday in assembly and the announcement was made by Elek Munkacsy, Jr.

The first presentation was an original pose, "The Pueblo Indian", dramatized by Stephen Ondrejcek, reading by Joseph Ginda.

The next picture was the famous "Strawberry Girl" by Mary Vasilna, reading by Adeline Chelus.

The "Rail Splitter", one of our country's most famous masterpieces, was depicted by Maximilian Kraus, and the reading was given by Milton Rabinowitz.

The fourth of the series was another original pose, taken from the work of the American artist Henry Mosler, "The Birth of the Flag". Those who participated in the pose were Marie Wilusz, Sophie Mynio, Isabel Weinstein and Dorothy Swenson. Frank Medvet gave a reading during the presentation of "The Flying Cloud."

The famous James A. McNeill Whistler masterpiece, "The Artist's Mother" was portrayed by Anna Ondrejcek. The reading was given by Charlotte Kovacs.

The last picture was "The Roman Girl", a fine painting by the French artist, Bonnat. This was dramatized by Anna Borsuk. Amy Reid gave the reading for this selection.

The program was fully appreciated by the pupils who witnessed it, and they are eagerly looking forward to seeing more of such programs.

The pupils of Miss Knorr's Sixth grade gave a fine program Wednesday on the prevention of fires. "The Arrest of Carelessness" was played by the following pupils:

First Citizen, Francis Hasek; Second Citizen, Winifred Shaw; Fireman, Michael Toth; Policeman, John Nasack; Carelessness, Ernest Whitall; Gasoline, Roslyn Schwartz; Bonfire, Yolanda Paul; Match, Dorothy Stockman; Cigarette, Walter Van Pelt; Electric Iron, Margaret Hils; Kerosene, Rose Daeko; Spontaneous Combustion, Elizabeth Casbina; Miss Carefulness, Ruth White.

COUNT THE COST!

— see what electricity does for a few cents a day

CAN you figure any other expenditure for household purposes that gives you more return for your money than you receive from the FEW CENTS A DAY spent for electricity?

Consider electric lights—why run the risk of damaging eyesight for a FEW CENTS A DAY?

Consider the electric refrigerator, washer, ironer, vacuum cleaner and numerous other labor savers. You could get along without them. To be sure our grandmothers did—but why deprive yourself of comfort and leisure for a FEW CENTS A DAY?

We repeat, Count the Cost! You can have a well lighted home, cleaned by electric cleaners, your laundry work can be done by electric washers and ironers; your food kept in electric refrigerators—all for a FEW CENTS A DAY.

HOLDS LINCOLN GRIDDERS TO TIE

The Carteret High pigskin chasers had their winning streak interrupted when they met the heavy Lincoln High football team of Jersey City and were held to a 6 - 6 tie in Mayor Hague's ballwick.

For the largest part of the first half neither side was able to gain ground consistently due to the nip and tuck battle between the two sets of linemen.

Near the end of the second quarter, Johnny Gomba speared a Lincoln High pass and twisted and dodged his way from Carteret's 20 yard line to the Jersey City outfit's 15 yard mark, a run of sixty-five yards.

One well executed pass from Koesel to Thatcher did the rest. The Jersey Cityites were misled by a feint around the left side leaving Thatcher uncovered as he skirted right end and picked a pretty pass out of the air.

Thoroughly aroused in the second half the Lincoln lads made a fifty-five yard march which culminated in a touchdown by fullback O'Reilly.

Despite the advantage their opponents had in weight, the Blue and White fought back courageously and kept them from again crossing the last white line.

The absence of Trevanovich, half-back, weakened Carteret to some extent on both the offense and defense. Added to this was the forced retirement of Szulimowski due to a recurring knee injury shortly after the game got under way.

McCarthy's men, though tied, are still undefeated.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOTES

By the Pastor

"The God We Can Know" will be the theme of the sermon at the Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning. "Shaving" will be the subject for the pastor's message to the Juniors.

The evening will be a union service with the Hungarian Reformed Church at the latter church at 7:30. The pastor will give an address on "The Message of the Reformation for Today". There will be special music by the choirs of both churches.

On Monday evening at 7:15 the Annual Hallowe'en party for the children will be given by the Mother Teacher Association. Mrs. Sager Bonnell and Mrs. Robert Wilson will be in charge.

The Church Night this week will be held at the home of Mrs. Gus Edwards at 148 Pershing avenue, at 7:45. This will be followed by the monthly meeting of the Ladies' Mission Band.

On Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock in the High School will be the recital by the Sherry School of Music of Keyport. The program will consist of instrumental and vocal music and readings, by Mrs. Olga Bidwell Sherry. Wherever this group of entertainers gave their recital last season they received a return date for this year.

Beginning this week the choirs will return to Thursday evening for their rehearsals. The Junior's will meet at 7:15 and the Seniors at 8:15.

MISS M. BABLITSKY BRIDE OF S. TOTH

Miss Mary Bablitsky, daughter of Mrs. Irene Bablitsky, of Roosevelt Avenue, and Stephen Toth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Toth, of Haganman Heights, were married at St. Demetrius Church on Saturday afternoon by the Rev. John Hundiak. A large gathering of relatives and friends attended the ceremony. Miss Mary Didesky was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Munnici and Miss Mary Trubs. The best man was Michael Bablitsky, Joseph Sekowsky and James Owens were the ushers.

The bride was gowned in white silk. Her bouquet was of chrysanthemums. Blue silk set off by pink roses was carried by the maid of honor. Pink was the selected color of the bridesmaids.

A reception and dance followed the ceremony in Leby's Hall. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Toth will reside at 6 Roosevelt Avenue.

CARTERET WOMAN'S CLUB

By ISABEL LEFKOWITZ

Thursday afternoon at a regular meeting held in the American Legion rooms at the Borough Hall, the members learned about pottery from Mrs. Allen Messenger. Mrs. Messenger gave the club an instructive talk on the origin of pottery, also a glimpse into the life of Artus Van Briggie, who, though he died at the early age of thirty-three, was considered the foremost potter in the United States. One of his creative pieces, "Despondency", simply amazed artistic Paris and took the highest medal ever offered. Another of his pieces is "Stren of the Sea", which is shown wherever genuine pottery is sold. There were several pieces of Van Briggie pottery in lovely shades of turquoise blue, woodland brown and rose on exhibition. On display were also specimens of Mexican and Indian pottery. Incidentally, Mrs. Messenger mentioned Middlesex County as being the most important ceramic center in the United States.

Thursday, October 27th being former President Theodore Roosevelt's birthday, the club observed same by reading several letters from a book called "Theodore Roosevelt's Letters to his children", which gives an insight into the man's love for home and family.

Mrs. T. J. Nevill, president, announced that through the American Red Cross there are two thousand dollars worth of flour and one thousand dollars worth of cotton (both the cloth and manufactured articles) coming into the boro for distribution to the needy.

It was also announced that payments on a building loan toward a permanent home for the Carteret Woman's Club are steadily being made.

For the club's next meeting, on November 10th, a trip is being planned to International House, and to Wanamakers. A guide in Wanamakers will take the party on a tour of inspection through the store, showing it the fur storage plant, the candy factory, the furnished model home for medium incomes and other points of interest there may be to see. Only 27 members can be accommodated as the trip is to be made by bus and the Holland Tunnel will not allow more than 27 passengers in a bus; so make reservations early with Mrs. William Hagan. Expenses will be about $1.75.

Mrs. Emil Stremlau, representing on a question which is to come before the voters on Election Day, namely, whether or not twenty millions of dollars should be diverted toward unemployment relief from the eighty-three million dollar fund appropriated for a road building and repair program.

Mrs. T. G. Kenyon Drama Chairman, announced a card party for November 14th to help defray some of the expenses of her department.

Mrs. J. Weisman, chairman of the Unemployment Relief Bureau advises that she has excellent full and part time help on her files, also for girls or women who can sew on machines.

The Third District Fall Conference will be held in South Amboy on November 1st, on a Tuesday. Anyone desiring to attend same may notify Mrs. Nevill or Mrs. Hagan.

ELY EFFICIENT IN SHERIFF'S OFFICE

training aided him immensely. A man without the Undersheriff's business background would perhaps have been unable to accomplish the task. It is needless to point out that this systematizing has not only facilitated the working of the department but has also cut down on lost motion and added considerably to efficiency.

Due to abnormal economic conditions the work of the Sheriff's office has increased approximately 300 per cent. since 1929. This tripling of business one would believe should necessitate additional help and add substantially to the office overhead. This, however, is not the case, thanks to Mr. Ely's efficient business methods. This added load of new business, caused by increased mortgage foreclosures and suits brought by creditors, is being handled with practically the same personnel as served under previous administrations.

Still better—from the taxpayers point of view—the office overhead has actually been reduced approximately five per cent. Here are the figures. In 1929 the entire overhead amounted to $79,445.38. Last year the department did three times the work with an expenditure of $73,752.62, or a saving of $5,692.76 in round dollars and cents.

Impartial political observers agree the work accomplished by Mr. Ely during the past three years is of great importance, not only regarding economies, but also in the origination of business forms used by the department which are considered model methods for work of this type.

If Sheriff Gannon really saw the storm coming, then Under-Sheriff Ely built a storm shelter which has withstood the blasts.

LIGHTFOOT'S NEW HORNS

PETER RABBIT was puzzled. He stared at Lightfoot the Deer a wee bit suspiciously. Lightfoot had just shown Peter how very fierce he could appear when he wanted to, and now Peter had discovered what looked like bits of old fur hanging to Lightfoot's horns. "Have you been tearing somebody's coat?" he asked. He didn't like to think it of Lightfoot, of whom he always had thought as being quiet as gentle, harmless, and timid as himself. But what else could he think?

Lightfoot slowly shook his head. "No," said he, "I haven't torn anybody's coat."

"Then what are those rags hanging on your horns?" demanded Peter.

Lightfoot chuckled. "They are what is left of the coverings of my new horns," he explained.

"What's that? What do you mean by new horns?" Peter was sitting up very straight with his eyes fixed on Lightfoot's horns as if he never had seen horns before.

"Just what I said," retorted Lightfoot. "What do you think of them? I think they are the finest horns I've ever had. When I get the rest of those rags off they will be as handsome a set of horns as ever was grown in the Green Forest."

Lightfoot rubbed his horns against the trunk of a tree till some of the rags hanging to them dropped off.

Peter blinked very hard. He was trying to understand and he couldn't. Finally he said so, "What kind of a story are you trying to fill me up with?" he demanded indignantly. "Do you mean to tell me that those are not the horns that you have had as long as I've known you? How can anything hard like these horns grow? And if these are new ones, where are the old ones. The idea of trying to make me believe that horns grow just like plants. I've seen Bossy the Cow all summer and I know she has got the same horns she had last summer. New horns indeed!"

"You are quiet right, Peter, quite right, about Bossy the Cow. She never has new horns, but that isn't any reason why I shouldn't, is it?" replied Lightfoot patiently. "Her horns are quite different from mine. I have a new pair every year. You haven't seen me all summer, have you, Peter?"

"No, I don't remember that I have," replied Peter, trying very hard to remember when he had last seen Lightfoot.

"I know you haven't," retorted Lightfoot. "I know it because I have been hiding in a place you never visit."

"What have you been hiding for?" demanded Peter.

"For my new horns to grow," replied Lightfoot. "When my new horns are growing I want to be away by myself. I don't like to be seen with out horns or with half-grown ones. Besides, I am very uncomfortable while the new horns are growing and want to be alone."

Lightfoot spoke as if he really meant every word he said, but still Peter couldn't, he just couldn't believe that those wonderful great horns had grown out of Lightfoot's head in a single summer. "Where did you leave your old horns, and when did they come off?" he asked, and there was doubt in the very tone of his voice.

"What Have You Been Hiding For?" Demanded Peter.

"They dropped off very early last spring, but I don't remember just where," replied Lightfoot. "I was too glad to be rid of them to notice where they dropped. You see they were loose and uncomfortable and I hadn't any more use for them because I knew that my new ones would be bigger and better. I've got one more point on each than I had last year."

Lightfoot began once more to rub his horns against the tree to get off the queer rags hanging to them and to polish the points. Peter watched in silence for a few minutes. Then, all his suspicions returning, he said: "But you haven't told me anything about those rags hanging to your horns."

"And you haven't believed what I have already told you," retorted Lightfoot. "I don't like telling things to people who won't believe."

THE BEAUTY OF A GRIN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I HAVE seen a lot of people who were homely, in a way; Some were thin and some were portly, some you couldn't hardly say. There was something wrong about them, as so frequently appears. In the way their noses tilted, in the angle of their ears. But you suddenly forgot it, whether fat or whether thin—For no face was ever homely when it started in to Grin.

Though they didn't have the beauty of Adonis and the rest. They'd another sort of beauty that was brotherhood expressed. For a lighthouse may be builded, builded nobly, builded right, But to make the house a lighthouse it will have to show a light. And you neighbor wants a neighbor, not a walking photograph; They may talk about your beauty, but they want to see you Laugh.

For a fellow is a failure, with the features of a Greek, if he hasn't any sunshine in his system, so to speak. I have seen a lot of people who were homely, in a way. But the world forgot about it when they passed the time of day. I have seen a lot of features that were wrong about a mile. But I never saw a fellow who looked homely with a Smile.

first course or following the cocktail, seems to be universally liked, for the millions of cans of soup sold daily in the markets are proof that it is popular.

One may, with the addition of minced cooked vegetables, convert a canned soup into one that is individual. A little rice, a little asparagus, a few spoonfuls of peas added to bouillon or clear soups add to their attractiveness as well as flavor and nutriment.

Tomato soup is one of the canned soups that has a large repertoire as a food. It may be converted into a delicious meat or fish sauce in a turn of the hand. Poured over a meat loaf it transforms it into a delightful surprise. It may be added to the meat when making a loaf with the egg or cereal used as a binding omitted. Part of the soup is saved to serve as a sauce with the meat. More cayenne, a bit of onion juice, or garlic, a grating of nutmeg or of lemon peel, all adds variety to the tomato sauce.

One of the most delightful of rarebits is made with tomato and cheese. Use the canned tomato soup instead of the fruit, adding a beaten egg just before it is poured over the toasted bread or crackers.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs. At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.

SIZING IT UP

Bug—Now that's what I call a good hand. I'll bet it can make a lot of noise.

Another Reducer

Two husbands were sympathetically discussing a third.
"Yes," said one tenderly, "as soon as old Budge got married he lost his pay envelope and his nerve."
"Sorry to hear that," said his companion. "How did it happen?"
"His wife took them both inside a month," said the first.

Sam—Say, Mose, what am you all doin' now?
Mose—I'm an exporter.
Sam—An exporter?
Mose—Yes, the Pullman company done fire me.

Service

"Of course, you want to serve your country," said the patriotic citizen.
"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum.
"But I want my constituents to have first helping, as far as possible."

The Nail on the Head

Engaged Sister—When we are married, dear, we must have a hyphenated name. What would you go with Eaton?
Smaller Brother—Moth!

HUBBY'S TRIP

"Where did your wife spend the summer?"
"Abroad."
"And how about yourself?"
"Went into bankruptcy."

First Choice

Husband—My dear, we simply must get rid of that cook. Did you ever see a more frightful chop than the one I've just put on my plate?
Wife—Yes, dear. The one you've just put on mine.—Karikaturen.

Plainly Advertised

"Henry, let's drop in and ask this man about repairing our apartment."
"Why, dear, this is a garage."
"Yes, but that sign says, 'We Fix Flats.'"

"High" Living

First Artist—Lo, old man! How's business?
Second Artist—Oh, I'm living high.
First Artist—What do you mean by "high"?
Second Artist—Why, I room in an attic and am up in the air over bills.

Love's Awakening

Theta—When did you know that you loved John?
Zeta—The moment I saw that gorgeous pearl necklace he sent me.
