MISSION STATEMENT

At USOLMT, our mission is to empower, support, and advocate for massage therapists, while reimagining the way we do business in massage therapy. We are committed to ensuring that the profession thrives and evolves by setting new industry standards that align with relevant trends. Our members experience the benefits of unity, education, and advancement, all of which are integral in shaping the future of massage therapy. Join us in pioneering bold and transformative path for our profession.

THE USOLMT VISION

To boldly lead our nation's massage therapy profession by elevating the expertise and knowledge of therapists, transcending the boundaries of the treatment room, and igniting a transformative movement that reshapes our industry from its very core.

WHY OUR MISSION IS IMPORTANT

Massage Therapy is a healthcare and wellness profession that provides numerous benefits to the public. Massage therapists work in numerous healthcare settings such as hospitals, physician's offices, and clinics providing pain relief, pre and post-surgical care, services for oncology patients, injury treatment, pre and post care for athletes, and more.

In the wellness sector, massage provides stress reduction, improves sleep quality, improves women's health, provides relaxation for expectant mothers, assists with end-of-life care, improves mental health, and so much more. In fact, just 10 minutes of massage has been proven to help clients feel calmer, breathe easier, and increase their sense of well-being.

In today's stressful, unpredictable, and chaotic world, Massage Therapy is needed more than ever before. Human touch elevates the level of compassion and empathy in the world, and helps humans thrive. In order to provide the touch, compassion, and empathy that humans need, Massage Therapy professionals need to be supported through:

- Legislation that supports their work and makes their job easier.
- Employee-centric workplaces that align with their values and support their growth.
- The Untangling of Human Trafficking, Sex Work and Massage Therapy
- Stronger laws and enforcement to protect therapists from Sex Buyers and Sexual Harassment
- Bridging education to enhance their skill set and knowledge while they are in school and beyond.
- Expert assistance with problems pertaining to their education, employers, and their career.
- Committed, knowledgeable advocates that understand how to navigate legislation, industry, and workplace challenges who are ready and willing to tackle issues head-on.

USOLMT works in these areas and many more to enhance the careers of professional Massage Therapists with the goal of expanding, securing, and positioning our profession for future growth and sustainability.

The Massage Therapy profession faces many challenges, obstacles, and threats to progress.

- For the last several years Massage Schools have been closing across the nation when we need many more schools and graduates to match up with growing consumer demand.
- According to industry employers, new graduates are entering the workforce unprepared, less knowledgeable, and less skilled than they need to be to support their clients.
- School curriculums often simply teach to the test so that students can pass the MBLEx, but the pass rates are still only 67% and the cost is high to retake the test if students fail.
- State Massage Therapy boards across the country are underfunded, understaffed, and more focused on discipline rather than supporting licensees.
- Most massage therapists are ill-equipped to advocate for themselves on a local or national level to improve their profession, and don't get involved in their professional associations at the level necessary to create change.
- Many massage therapists are still misclassified by massage therapy employers looking to save money on taxes and therapists are not taught about independent contract work in school.
- Leaders of our professional associations have secured long-term positions and simply move from one association's leadership team to another's, which stifles new, up and coming massage therapists from advancing into leadership positions and creating a more progressive culture in our industry.
- There is ongoing disagreement, division, and issues with the culture of our profession that cause us to go around in circles rather than solving problems head-on and moving on. There is too much debate and too little progress.

The above issues barely scratch the surface of the challenges our profession faces now, and what we'll be facing in the future with the integration of new technologies, artificial intelligence, high-tech touchless services, and more. Denial of these emerging threats only makes them more prominent. USOLMT is out to protect the future of our profession from current and future threats to progress and to expand the accessibility and the benefits of human touch.
