

Multiplication Table

Fill in the table with the missing products.

| X | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 |
|----------|----------|----------|----------|----------|----------|----------|----------|----------|----------|
| 1 |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |
| 2 |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |
| 3 |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |
| 4 |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |
| 5 |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |
| 6 |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |
| 7 |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |
| 8 |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |
| 9 |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |          |

Remember: Factor x Factor = Product

Name _____