Ste-Agathe Historical Society

The Longfellow School, which was moved from 76 Main Street to 534 Main Street on August 31, 2020 has experienced many upgrades since its arrival at the Ste-Agathe Historical Society site.

The group of dedicated board members, Harold Chamberland, Gary Boucher, Jean Paul Chamberland, Gaylen Thibeault, Roger Gervais, and volunteers Stan Albert, Roland Guerrette continued to meet one day a week to work at refurbishing the school. The shed was completed this past summer as well as many projects in the interior.

December 31, 2022

Dear Members and Friends of the Ste-Agathe Historical Society,

The guest register reflects that 437 visitors came to the historical site in 2022. They come from near and far to view the collection of artifacts that the board members have collected since 1978. At the beginning all the artifacts were in the Pelletier/Marquis Museum House and now we have expanded to the granary, Ward's Shed, the Preservation Center, the Cedar Shingle Mill Shelter, and the Longfellow School. We hear many times comments like, "I didn't know all that stuff was here." It is always rewarding when we see visitors unite with other family members and reminisce as they go through some of the family albums.

Gloria Gervais decided to retire from the Board of Directors after 32 years of dedicated service to the Ste-Agathe Historical Society. Going through the annual events, meetings, volunteering time at the historical site in the summertime, tracking addresses for the Lifetime Membership List, and performing audits on the financial reports, we recorded some 1,251 hours of her time contributed to the society. We are most grateful that she was part of the team and wish her a peaceful and healthy second retirement. In August Sandra Chasse San Antonio agreed to fill the empty seat on the board and was able to join in for the 42nd annual breakfast, an event we had not held since 2019. It was all hands on deck for that event that served some 305 guests who could view the video made by Don Raymond of the moving of the Longfellow School from its original site to 534 Main Street. The guests also enjoyed visiting with friends they hadn't seen in awhile.

As we look ahead for 2023 we plan to continue the work of the Longfellow School and possibly so some much needed repairs of the Pelletier/Marquis Museum House. We are always looking for school books that would have been used at the Longfellow School from the 1920's to 1948. We look forward to the summer season when it is time to welcome visitors as this always provides us with motivation to continue what we are doing.

Sincerely,

Terry Ouellette, President

Searching for My Chassé Ancestors

By Cecile Bosse Dechaine

Genealogy experts affirm that the most important factor in researching family history is the data, and this information needs to be accurate. The fun part of genealogy is the “digging around” and discovering new facts that, in turn, enlighten us as we explore our ancestral history. These great revelations help us learn our ancestors’ stories, and through these discoveries, our ancestors become real people with real-life experiences. When the researcher/family historian unearths, connects, and discovers just a small fact, it can be very exciting and eye opening.

Some background: I was born in St. Agatha, Maine. My parents and their ancestors came from Acadian, Canadian and French roots. Growing up, I was impressed by their work ethic, their deep faith, and their love of God. I was very interested in learning more about their ancestry. I began researching the Chassé family in March of 2020 during the Covid-19 quarantine. Today, in 2022, their story is still unfolding. Travelling into the world of my ancestors’ lives has been fascinating, and I’m having so much fun with the research process.

My research started with my industrious parents and grandparents, all of whom I admire greatly. I discovered the proper names of my great grandparents, Philius Charles Chassé and Marguerite Pelletier, and my great-great grandparents, Jean Germain Chassé and Rebecca Ouellet. I ended up embarking on a journey through time as I learned about these relatives and discovered their ancestral stories.

One of my research questions was—why did Germain and Rebecca make the move to northern Maine and choose to settle in the “Lac à Menon”? (This area later became known as the Long Lake region.) Alexandre “Menon” Ouellette, originally from New Brunswick, settled at the head of the lake around 1840 to establish a lumber operation in the Cleveland Road area. The Chassé ancestors must have loved the space and decided to start a life for themselves in northern Maine, seeking their dream of owning rich fertile land.

In early fall of 2021, I received a phone call from Terry Ouellette, President of the Ste. Agathe Historical Society. She had a message from Philip Michaud who actually remembers working on the Chassé farm as a teenager ‘pour Rosaire a Peà Chassé.’ After Terry’s message, I was so eager to connect with Phil to hear his story. Later in the week, I ended up having a wonderful telephone conversation with him and here’s an excerpt of that conversation...

“In the early, early days when the first settlers came to the area looking for land, some settled on Flat Mountain. The Lake did not hold that much attraction to these settlers. For a time, Pleine Road (Le chemin de la Pleine) was planned to be the main road for the village. The farms were called suspender farms. The lands were laid out in long narrow strips and not exceedingly wide, perhaps approximately 100 acres. Lac à Menon, first designation given to the lake, was not a commodity back then to the early farmers. They could not plant anything in the lake, right? Land was the most important commodity.”

In the early 1800’s, settlers mainly moved along the Lake on towpaths and dusty throughways. Settling near the lake was not as profitable an option as obtaining farmland. Pleine Road was one mile from the Lake, and that’s where they started to build their homesteads. My great-great grandfather, Germain Chassé, was one of the first pioneers to settle at Pleine Road. Today, the road runs parallel with Route 162 and is a lovely country road now owned by potato farmers and only contains several potato fields. There’s a whole network of roads in this area.

During my telephone conversation with Terry Ouellette, she shared the following, “At some point, there were many settlers who were considered land squatters, and were asked to leave. They really did not own the land. In those days, there was no town office, no main road in St. Agatha either. Flat Mountain was not as popular as during those times and it was considered “la chemin au large” (countryside road).

In June of 2022, I had the opportunity to visit the land where my great-great grandfather Germain had built his farm. It was located in the heart of farm country, which the locals named ‘Les Concession.’ With Terry Ouellette as our driver and Phil Michaud as our tour guide, my daughter, Laura, and I began our journey to see Jean Germain and Rebecca Ouellet Chassé’s property. We were very excited. This location was also the same place where their son, Philius, grew up before moving to “a la Pointe” with his new bride, Marguerite Pelletier. When Philius’ affairs changed, he decided to move closer to Long Lake less than two miles away. People around him were moving closer to the lake, so he decided to buy property there.

Road. These photos

From Route 162 we took a left onto Flat Mountain Road, passed Lakeview Restaurant, and made the first left onto Pleine Road. This road is exactly one mile from the main road. The site was overgrown with weeds, but it was wonderful to experience it firsthand.

During our ride Phil said, “Right here, Stop! Along the curve at this very spot was ‘une grosse granche’ (a huge barn) on the corner and the house was next to it. The property was owned by Emile Albert which he inherited from his father, Thomas Albert, who settled here years ago. I remember that was around 1956, and I was thirteen years old. I worked hauling logs. When it rained, we would stop at the barn for shelter. A big draft horse, Silver, owned by Warren Michaud stayed in the barn. I would harness Silver and drive horseback through the woods and haul logs out that the men had felled down. Let’s keep going.”

We continued another three quarters of a mile down that road when Phil asked Terry to stop the car and said, “The settlers did not waste an inch of land. They even used the marsh land to provide firewood! In the fall, when they wanted to clear land, they left fifteen or twenty sheep and those animals would clear the place clean.”

“There was, I remember, the Chassé farmhouse on the right going towards the woods, built on the small rise in that meadow about 100 feet from here. I can almost imagine the detail of the house because it was built in the same principle and resembled the Ste. Agathe historical house. The house was a one-story structure on a stone foundation, with wooden shingles covering the exterior, probably measured 25 by 30 feet in size with a lean-to attached. They called this room ‘the summer kitchen.’ There was no furniture upstairs and they slept on “lit de paille” (straw bed). The women sewed burlap bags together filled with straw and that’s what the children slept on. There was also a brook with slow water trickling on low land, where they did not cultivate, running a few yards from the house in the back field. In the spring when the snow had melted, there was more water in the brook.”

“When I first remember seeing the house where Philius grew up, I was working one summer after school for Rosaire Chassé, who at that time owned the farm. He showed me how to drive an old, old tractor and my job was plowing a piece of land, cultivating the land and planting potatoes. I also worked in the fields picking rocks, ‘ramasser des roche’ for Rosaire. His father, Peà Chassé, had previously owned the farm and Rosaire inherited the property.”

This beautiful scenery was the spot where my great grandfather, Philius Chassé, grew up.

Even though the house is no longer there on that knoll, I was filled with awe, and I was thrilled to see the location where my great-great grandfather, Germain Chassé, and his family settled a long time ago. It was such a beautiful, spectacular green meadow.

Background

Jean Germain Chassé’s family arrived in the Madawaska Territory area during the 18th century. They crossed the majestic St. John River from its north bank to the south bank and painstakingly traveled through unknown forests to find their own land, clear their property, and build their homestead.

During my great-great grandfather’s time, people travelled through the woods on foot, in horse drawn buggies, or on wagons or sleds drawn by oxen or horses. There were no paved roads, only towpaths and dirt roads. In the winter, travel was over snow-packed roads and on the frozen lake.

During this time, the men also built their own homes, camps, storehouses, barns, and even roads, often with many hardships. The early pioneers were determined to make their homesteads and farms comfortable for their families. To build their homesteads, they felled trees with axes, loaded them onto sleds, and hauled them with horses or oxen to the planned home-building sites. They burned the stumps to level the land for gardening and raising crops. They fought blackflies and mosquitoes.

They burned the stumps to level the land for gardening and raising crops. They fought blackflies and mosquitoes.

Into adulthood, Germain married two times. His first wife, Vitaline LaMarre, died from childbirth after only ten months of marriage. His second marriage to Rebecca Ouellet was held in the Great Church of St. Basile on May 9, 1831. The couple had fifteen children and twelve lived to adulthood. According to the 1833 Special Census of Madawaska report, two years after their marriage, Germain and Rebecca were settled on ungranted land, on the south bank of the St. John in Aroostook County, Maine. In the 1840's, the family's church records showed they belonged to St. Luce Parish, Frenchville, which provides proof of their residence in the area.

By the 1850 United States Federal Census, Jean Germain Chassé was a well-established farmer in Madawaska Plantation (a section southwest of Long Lake), with real estate valued at $800. At the age of 53, he succeeded where other immigrants had failed. He showed great ambition by clearing his land, settling on it, and claiming it as his own. He was a hardworking man who ran his farm and raised sheep, pigs, cows, hens, and horses. He was one of the first French Canadian settlers who arrived here not afraid of beginning a new life in an undeveloped territory.

Jean Germain died at the age of 94 on March 22, 1894. His death certificate stated that the cause of death was "unknown." He was buried at St. Luce Cemetery in Frenchville, Maine. Rebecca died at home on May 5, 1899 "from old age" at the age of 89. She outlived her husband, Germain, by a few years. Unlike her husband, she was buried in the older St. Agatha Cemetery located next to the church.

The 2022 annual appeal was included in the mailing of the 2021 annual newsletter. We want to thank the many supporters of the society who returned their raffle tickets. The annual drawing was held on the 31st of May and Lifetime Member, Mrs. Francoise Plourde, picked the lucky winner from the jar holding all the returned tickets. Mrs. Francoise was delighted when she read the name on the ticket – a lifetime friend, Angela Michaud Raymond, who now resides in Sarasota, Florida. Both of them graduated from St. Agatha High School in 1947 and 1948 and both stayed connected when they lived in Connecticut. Once Angela was notified that she was the winner she was given Francoise's phone number. It was indeed a good time when Angela called Francoise for a long overdue chat.

Reflections

Bernadette D. Meunier

Venturing uncoached,
I knew "cordon sanitaire" had capabilities.

The universe wants
to be known for itself.
Isn't that why we're here?

A canyon of obscure expressions,
Coronavirus, anosmia, comorbidity,
herd immunity, Kawasaki disease.
One shivers at twinkles of something not normally known
affecting the past, present,
and the curving trench between.
No more to languish in an arid land.
The leisure of ignorance.

Is everything factual, once and for all?
Simple bits and pieces, the world wonders;
Can you believe it?

Remdesivir, hydroxychloroquine, dexamethasone.

Cadence as in poesy
I scramble to pick up meaning.
Huffing, puffing, the answers come
as a cosmic surprise.
Veiled, like a face, a parable, a pun,
an allegory.

Covering a world of mutually exclusive events.

What however is unbelievably bright here,
the reveal of all that has been
so hidden from us.
Mind engages, teased with anything, everything,
tricky, risky yet nonchalant.
The discovery of harmony.

Rather at once like a bird of prey,
my mind devours.

While all on the earth are involved
with chores of pollution and like.
Never to pause, let alone practice
what we've observed and learned.

And while my willing soul transpires
at every random variable discrete
With instant fires, overwhelmed
by the immensity of it.
