The Former Owatonna High School

2022-Present FOHS LLC The Former Owatonna High School

Mr. Warshauer created FOHS LLC (Former Owatonna High School, a Minnesota Liability Company) with the sole purpose of developing a site plan and a development proposal for the 20+ acre site. His group signed an exclusive Development Agreement with the school district on April 25, 2022. The Parties agree to provide the Developer 180 days to create a plan and proposal pursuant to an Exclusive Agreement. He has three investors including VP Matt Durand.

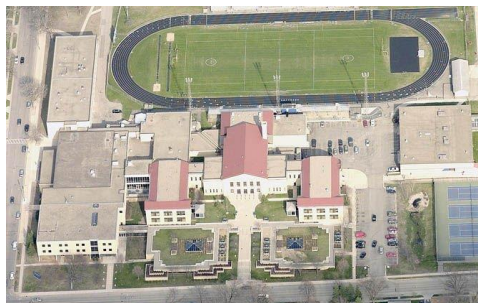

Independent School District 761 owns the Owatonna High School located at 333 East School Street, Owatonna, Minnesota (PIN 17-015-4122, 17-015-4109, 17-015-4108). The High School site consists of several connected structures including the high school, a track and field, tennis courts and the Ag building. The District is replacing the High School with a new school at a different location and no longer needs all the facilities at the Site but intends to retain some of the facilities and grounds for continued District use.

Mr. Warshauer is soliciting interest from potential partners, tenants, co-developers. The intent is to subdivide the property and to sell parcels and lease others. The District will own at least two of the parcels at this time. A Task Force created by the District issued a report that outlines many options for the property: <https://engageowatonna.com/the-high-school>

Potential uses include, but are not limited to, town homes, apartments, a community center, social services, a culinary school, a performing arts center.

The Historic Kasson School Project

The $10 million development project is known as “The Water Tower Place,” and involves the acquisition of the 1918 historic school, development of an investment strategy, raising of capital, and finalizing the Business Plan for approximately 30 high end apartments for seniors in the city of Kasson, 15 miles west of Rochester, Minnesota. The school was already listed on the National Register of historic places but the Part 2 of the historic tax credit portion is being prepared at this time. The sale of these tax credits makes about $4 million in funds available for the development with no debt and no equity. Mr. Warshauer has three investors including Diane O’Brien, Oleg Smal, and Amir Sergyeyev.

Emerson Union / State Street Apartments, LLC

This $13+ million project involved a three part plan for the acquisition, division, and development of the property known as the ISD 88 Administration Center, also known as the former Middle School located at State and Center Streets in New Ulm, Minnesota. The school was constructed in 1915 with additions in 1938 and 1955. In January 2015, the property was approved for the Part I of the Federal Historic Tax Credit process and was listed on the National Register for Historic Places in July 2015. Groundbreaking for the apartments commenced in 2019. The application indicated that many of the “school elements would be included in the development of the apartments.

An apartment in the Emerson Union Apartment building managed, at this time, by Lloyd Management. Chalkboards, transoms, wood bookcases and doors were retained in many of the apartments lending the “former school feel” to the project. In addition wide hallways and empty lockers were part of the plan.

The property was owned by the Minnesota Independent School District #88 and a Purchase Agreement was signed between the School District and Cenate LLC, a Minnesota limited Liability Company formed in February, 2014 by Mr. Warshauer and its Board of Governors, (Directors). The terms included a payment to the school district of $25,000 at closing and a lease for use of parts of the property for administrative use for two years and for theatre and gymnasium use for up to ten years. Three complex leases were executed at closing between the parties. Closing occurred on July 2, 2014. Mr. Warshauer created the legal entity (Cenate LLC) and renamed NUACT as “State Street Theater Company.” Cenate sought investors for the acquisition, development, restoration, and renovation of the school property as apartments and commercial space and found CentraSota and the Welch companies to purchase the apartment section for $200,000 thus returning 183% to the investors. The sale of the “housing section” was completed in March, 2015. Agreements between the parties, “Development Agreements” and Covenants” were signed between the parties that addressed common walls, joint area maintenance, specific repairs, and parking. A long term lease was negotiated for theatre spaces not owned by the State Street Theater.

The theatre property was donated by Cenate to the State Street Theater Co. in July 2015. Appraised value is $150,000. The charitable contribution was claimed by the investors.

The State Street Theatre Co. will seek donations and grants for the restoration, renovation and operation of the community auditorium, adaptive reuse for the former locker rooms, (as set, prop and costume shops) and the creation of a Black Box Theatre from what was the “Little Gym.” The budget is approximately $3,000,000.

At one time Mr. Warshauer maintained the titles of State Street Apartments Property Manager, Cenate Vice President of Project Development, and State Street Theater Co. Executive & Artistic Director. He was also an equity partner in the real estate venture. Cenate dissolved in February 2016.

The sale of the school property was completed on July 2, 2014. Here are the principals for the sale of the entire city block located at the corner of State and Center Street. The property was referred to as the District Administrative Center (DAC).

The sale of the residential portion of the property to CentraSota LLC commenced in the fall of 2014. A purchase agreement was signed on October 17, 2014 and closing occurred between CentraSota and Cenate in March 2014.

Cenate directed Mr. Warshauer to immediately apply for a listing on the National Register of Historic Places making the property eligible for Federal and State Historic Tax Credits. Mr. Warshauer enlisted Dan Hoisington, of Hoisington Preservation Consultants to write the application.

Considerations were made to include the Auditorium as a separate parcel from the future apartment section. The subdivision was completed and approved by the City and stamped in March, 2014.

November 2011-August 2017

Mr. Warshauer was hired for a six month period commencing November 1, 2011 as the NUACTION consultant and interim Executive Director. When his contract expired, the parties negotiated a one-year extension followed by a 1.5 year extension. On July 2, 2014, Mr. Warshauer was hired on a two year contract with the title, "Executive and Artistic Director." He taught workshops for kids and adults in acting, directing and improvisation. He produced and directed Chitty Chitty Bang Bang, Fiddler on the Roof, South Pacific, The Front Page, Arsenic & Old Lace, & Harvey. He supervised the lease of the theatre space with Cenate LLC, the owner of the property. He produced a monthly cable show, "Something Artsy" and a monthly play reading society at the historic Lind House. He was also the host of the "Tickets Please" movie Festival. Clearly, Mr. Warshauer clearly wore many hats with the State Street Theatre.

Redwood Theatre Group, LLC

The Redwood Theatre was constructed in 1931 and operated as a family movie theatre until the 1980s. In 2015, the owners, Shon and Tina Giernet, sold the property to an LLC created by Paul Warshauer, for Craig and Cynthia LeBrie. The five formed the LLC and inspired a group of citizens to create the Friends of the Redwood Theatre, NFP (a 501c3 organization). The two organizations are restoring the theatre to operate as a 200 seat digital cinema and small performing arts venue. Renovation costs approach $1.1 million.

Masonic Temple Building, Grand Island, Nebraska

The Retzler Development Group, LLC (a Nebraska limited liability company) purchased the historic seven story building for $70,000 from the Masonic Templecraft Association of Grand Island. A successful negotiation period with Verizon Wireless for cell towers atop the building provided a substantial advance payment that was used to cover the down payment and closing costs. Seven tenants occupied the building thus making it “cash flow positive.” The development plan included the renovation and restoration of artists loft & apartments on the 2nd floor, shared business suites on the 3rd floor, two high ceiling condominiums on the 4th floor, a 3,800 sq. foot condominium on the 5th floor and a Dinner Theatre/Bar on the 6-7th floors. Parking issues and fire exits ultimately stalled the project. Mr. Warshauer maintained his office and residence on the 5th floor in the 3,800 sq foot Knight’s Templar Floor. The Retzler Group prepared a neighborhood development plan calling for skywalks connecting a proposed parking structure with the Bartenbach and Masonic Temple Buildings. The building was sold to Charles Anson in 2011. (Photo by Scott Kingsley)

The Wheaton Grand Theatre (Grande Venues, Inc.)

Grande Venues, Inc. (an Illinois corporation) was created by Mike Novelli and Paul Warshauer from a need by “theatres in renovation mode.” GVI created programming and restoration options for “Grand Venues,” meaning theatres, hotels, and other historic properties. With the advertising, marketing, and business skills of Michael Novelli, and the years of experience of theatre production and operations of Paul Warshauer, the Wheaton Grand Theatre was the first of several consulting contracts negotiated. Plans were made to make the Wheaton facility a three theatre venue. Paid consulting work was also performed by Grande Venues for the Zoe Theatre in Pittsfield, IL, the Lyric Theatre in Ellendale, North Dakota, the Garden Theatre in Charleston, South Carolina, the Parkway Theatre in Baltimore and the Enean Theatre in Pittsburg, California to name a few. Mike and Paul ran the Wheaton Grand theatre on a day to day basis for months before the Wheaton Theatre board decided on retaining another consultant who failed. By 2015 the theatre STILL had not opened to the public making Grande Venues the last successful full time operators of the Wheaton Grand Theatre.

Chicago Athletic Association Development Project

Led by Cleveland developer George Simon and Snider-Canata Interests, LLC the group hired Paul Warshauer as consultant for the project. VOA created an amazing plan to build on top of the historic Club. Warshauer advised against the idea of "destroying the view" based on the Historic Michigan Blvd. Historic District. Lawsuits by CAA members and others ended the development and ultimately the Pritzker organization took over and developed the property into a historic hotel. For the record: Warshauer's grandfather, Ben, was offered the first membership to a Jew in the restricted CAA in the 1920s by Wm. Wrigley. Warshauer turned them down.

Managing Partner, Henslowe Group, Ltd, Chicago, Illinois

Warshauer and his two partners developed the Portage Park Theatre, a vacant theatre property on Chicago's northwest side. They re-opened, "briefly," the historic movie theatre with new print of "Gone with the Wind." Henslowe Group wrote business plans, negotiated with motion picture unions and studios, produced live programming, solicited financing, advertised for employees, interviewed and hired employees, conducted trainings, worked with tenants and patrons alike. The Group negotiated five year lease with option to purchase the theatre property with church group then the deal reverted to a live theatre which operated as a classic movie house. Warshauer was elected to serve on the board then was elected Chairman for the not-for-profit organization responsible for acquiring, restoring and operating the Uptown Theatre. Thereafter Warshauer created for a for-profit LLC with the same mandate. His responsibilities included negotiations for the purchase, fund raising, and strategic planning. He wrote the complete PPM, Operating Agreement and Subscription Agreements. The theatre was plagued with massive political obstacles and costly building issues with the City of Chicago. The project is ongoing after the property was purchased by JAM Productions of Chicago, (Jerry Mickelson).

Teacher, Washington Junior High and Academy, Joliet Illinois

Warshauer was hired as a full time theatre teacher. He taught theatre classes to regular junior high and Academy students. He directed two major productions in this inner city school, including a fully staged and costumed musical, "Oklahoma." His classes held fundraisers for school children in Afghanistan and created seven versions of Cinderella for public performances.

AURORA — The storied Sky Club atop Fox Island Place apartments could reopen its doors as early as next spring if a new entrepreneur gets his way.

The project, however, is still an even money bet, said Paul Warshauer, 47, a theater writer, director and educator from Oregon whose mother moved to Aurora less than two years ago.

Warshauer wants to restore the Sky Club, a hangout for the famous in the 1920s and 1930s, to its former glory and reopen it as a night club featuring live jazz, blues and salsa music four nights per week.

The success of the project depends on whether Warshauer finds a market for the club, whether that market can be sustained, the rate of return for investors and how much the city and property owners will help with the project, he said.

Warshauer discovered the Sky Club in August, after his mother told him it was a club where one of his uncles once played.

Warshauer then met with the owner of Fox Island Place, Chet Niesel, to discuss the space.

In March, the two signed an agreement to let Warshauer have first rights to rent the space and to research and represent the Sky Club.

That agreement runs through December.

Warshauer met in March with Michael O'Kelley, assistant director of the Aurora Economic Development Commission, and Karen Christensen, the Aurora downtown/riverwalk administrator, to explore what the city's role might be in reopening the club.

"I have no doubt in my mind that, to be very successful, you need to really know marketing and specifically targeted marketing," Christensen said. "(Warshauer) clearly understands how to go out and get an arts audience."

Owner/Manager, Jefferson St. Theatre, Inc. Klamath Falls, Oregon

Warshauer and his business partner, Jan Kelley, owned and operated a 519 seat theatre and small performance arts center in Oregon. He negotiated a lease/option with Sacred Heart Catholic Church, hired employees and apprentices, wrote grants for after school programs, wrote business plans, produced and directed main stage shows, created television workshops for US Forest Service in media relations, and booked outside talent. The theatre closed when the lease expired with the Church and the local Bishop opted not to sell any church property to a private group.

New paneling adorns the walls. New carpeting covers the floor and new upholstery invites audience members to sit.

Up on the stage, new curtains hang ready to announce the debut performance at Jefferson Street Theatre.

The theater itself isn't new. Perhaps recycled is a more appropriate word.

For years, the theater was home to plays performed by students at Sacred Heart School. The building also hosted community activities.

Most recently the theater was the place of worship for the congregation of Sacred Heart Church until the church building itself was repaired after suffering earthquake damage.

The September 1994 earthquake was hard on the whole area around the theater. Sacred Heart Catholic Church was repairable; the former church school was not. Most of it was torn down, but the theater survived. There was some water damage, hence the new paneling, carpeting and upholstery. The structure itself was unscathed.

Now the building has a new function, close to its original because it will once again house youthful Thespians.

Officially, Jefferson Street Theatre Inc., 830 Jefferson St., opens Feb. 1. Unofficially, general manager Jan Kelley and artistic director Paul Warshauer are so full of enthusiasm and plans that ideas literally spill out of them.

Standing in the midst of what will soon become their second home, Warshauer marveled at the new accoutrements.

themselves. The first offering is Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Sound of Music." Auditions for all roles are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Feb. 4 and 5. The musical will debut March 9 and run through March 12.

Other upcoming events include a June performance of "Grease" and a summer-long performing arts camp.

The camp offers a flexible schedule of fun activities ranging from a two-day improvisational festival to a week-long overnight camp. Other planned activities include playlabs the public for rentals, meetings, concerts and other special events. They encourage people and organizations to tour Jefferson Street Theatre and discuss their particular needs.

Both principals in Jefferson Street Theatre Inc. have an extensive background in theater. Indeed that is where they met five years ago.

Kelley and Jay Meritt wrote "The Actress," a production of the Linkville Playhouse. Warshauer came to Klamath Falls at about the same time, and both were cast in the play. Since that time the two have worked together in one capacity or another on other Linkville Playhouse projects.

They've also joined forces on five shows at the Ross Ragland Theater and in several murder mysteries.

Kelley and Warshauer have worked with youth separately and together.

Most recently the two have collaborated in the Ragland after-school theater workshop which uses theater arts and junior high school age youth to focus on preventing drug and alcohol abuse.

Their collaboration is natural given their backgrounds. Warshauer has a teaching credential in California. Kelley spent the summer of 1994 as camp coordinator at the College of the Siskiyous summer camp in Weed. She has a master's degree in counseling psychology.

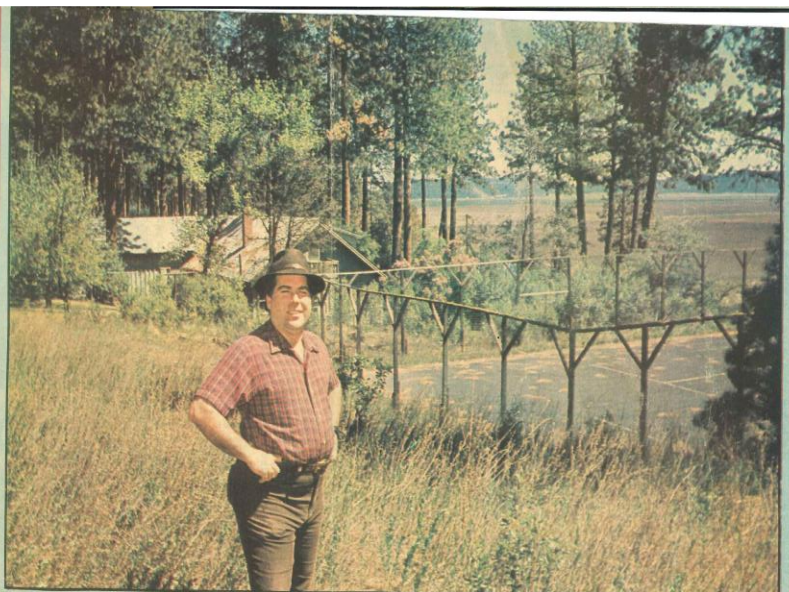

"It ties into theater with working with people. I like that approach to working with kids," Kelley said.

Neither Kelley nor Warshauer think Jefferson Street Theatre Inc. will compete

Project Leader, Camp Eagle Ridge

Warshauer identified a large property then relocated his firm from Los Angeles to Oregon. He wrote his first massive business plan and made an offer of $10,000,000 for the Running Y Ranch in Klamath Falls, Oregon. The owner of the property was Roy Disney and Shamrock Holdings. The property sold to Dick Wendt (Trend West Properties & Jeld-Wen) and although the project is successful, there is no summer camp for children.

Paul Warshauer grew up going to summer camps in the Midwest and later taught drama and theater in Southern California.

Now living in the Cove Point neighborhood, he plans to combine camping and the performing arts into an exclusive facility for youth on a part of the Running Y Ranch about 10 miles west of Klamath Falls.

Warshauer's proposal would combine the assets of the 9,600-acre working ranch with new construction for a youth camp phased over more than seven years. Work on the first phase, playing fields and a four-cabin "village" adjacent to the original Geary Ranch headquarters south of Highway 141, could begin as early as next summer, he said.

Full development would include a three-theater complex and 15 four-cabin villages along with boat docks on the 1,000-acre Skillet Handle part of the ranch between Caledonia Marsh and Upper Klamath Lake opposite Buck Island, according to plans.

The Running Y is now owned by Shamrock Holdings of California Inc. Roy Disney and his wife, Patricia, with Peter and Jacqueline Dailey, who collectively are the Double D Land Co., bought the outfit in 1974 for $2.6 million, records show. Double D later became part of S-D Ranch Co. and in 1989 the property went to Shamrock.

Shamrock officials and Warshauer, who represents four other investors, agreed on a purchase price of $10 million with a down payment of $5 million, but there is no sales contract.

Warshauer said the investor group, which includes attorneys in Miami, Fla., Chicago, Ill., Atlanta, Ga., and Los Angeles, Calif., has the financial wherewithal to handle the down payment. "Before we go ahead, though, we want to be sure there's enough to do the whole project," he said, adding some insurance companies and others have expressed interest in investing in the camp project.

Full development is estimated at around $9 million, about $2.5 million is needed for the first phase, in addition to the purchase price.

"This is not a particularly big project," Warshauer said. "But there's never been a camp like it."

Plans also specify the Running Y will remain in production along with the camp. Income from the ranch side would help carry the total overhead of the complex, he said.

Warshauer said he spent most of five years searching for a spot to put the specialty camp. Other locations considered — and rejected — included The Dalles, Cottage Grove, Wheeler County, and Bend. His first pick in Klamath County was Eagle Ridge further north along the west bank of Klamath Lake. He decided against trying to buy that land, but the name of the project still carries that name: Eagle Ridge Center.

When built and running, 14 campers and three counselors would occupy each of the cabins with a total population of around 1,000 campers and another 400 support personnel, Warshauer said. Some of them would be in existing structures on the ranch.

Emphasis would be placed on the performing arts, including television and film production, with other "traditional" camping activities also offered.

"Camping is very popular," he said. "This one will be exclusive in that it will specialize in the performing arts but still be in a 'rustic' setting. We'd still offer the usual camping experience."

Tuition for campers is estimated at between $3,000 and $3,500 per youth for an eight-week session. Daily rates, around $40 each, would be used for shorter sessions other times of the year.

Before they could attend, however, prospective campers would be required to audition for a spot, Warshauer said. "This place would be unique, anyway. Auditions would add to its exclusivity."

Calabasas High School, Teacher & Chairman Fine Arts Department

Warshauer was hired by the Las Virgenes Unified School District to serve as a full time theatre teacher for a Los Angeles suburban High School. He began his tenure with one Theatre I class and two Theatre II classes. Within three years he was teaching three Theatre I classes, two Theatre II classes and a newly created Theatre III class. He also taught Film History, Speech and English 11. Mr. Warshauer directed main stage shows including, Don't Drink the Water, Lil Abner, Arsenic & Old Lace, Anything Goes, The Mouse that Roared, & 42nd Street. He coordinated productions with the Music and Vocational Education Departments. He also coached speech and drama/theatre teams. He left to pursue the Eagle Ridge project (above).

Camp Waupaca, Waupaca, Wisconsin. Junior Counselor, Senior Counselor, Fine Arts Director, CIT Director (The Counselor-in-Training Program)

Warshauer spent 22 summers at a private summer camp on a magnificent spring-fed lake in mid Wisconsin. He started as a camper and eventually taught archery, swimming, tennis, golf, sailing, rifle safety, horseback riding, and lots of theatre and improvisation classes. He directed all of the productions: musicals like "1776" to plays like "The Odd Couple." He appeared as Zeus to open the camp Olympics. He appeared as Paul Revere for the 4th of July. (see photos below) He worked as the 2000 Year Old Man (Mel Brooks) with his lifelong friend, Mike Lurie playing the Carl Reiner part. The best work he did was creating skits and sketches for the Fourth of July where each show parodied a famous films or TV Shows of the era. The campers wrote and starred in epic productions set in the dining hall. He assisted in hiring, programming, accounting, purchasing, discipline, overnight camping, and trips to the Wisconsin Dells, coordinating programs and staff days off. After Waupaca he served as counselor at Camp Nock-a-Mixon in Pennsylvania for one summer and at Camp Esther Applegate in Lake of the Woods, Oregon for three summers as Fine Art Director and Assistant Director.

1972-1976:
Property Owner of 216-220 South Boulevard in Evanston, IL
& Ticket Agent (Scalper)

See the project page near the end of this CV as it describes the houses he purchased while he attended Northwestern University. Paul scalped tickets for concerts and events such as George Harrison, Elvis Presley, Bob Dylan, Moody Blues, and Marcel Marceau. He even found time to go to Europe spending his profits, and some rent money from 216 South Blvd. with lifelong friend, Dr. Paul Adler.

1971:
University Heights Public Library, Cleveland Heights, Ohio

This was Paul's first real job. He truly enjoys spending time inside libraries so as a high school junior, he went in to a local library and asked for a job. The head librarian liked him and volunteered that, "there are no jobs today, (she winked) but if you volunteer, there might be a job next week." He volunteered for two weeks then got the job. Paul shelved books, checked out materials, registered patrons for new library cards and eventually helped to coordinate the annual book sale. All this for $1.16 per hour to start; He does not recall his final hourly wage but Paul thought, "he had died and gone to heaven!" He continues to maintain his own personal library.

EDUCATION

1983-1986:

California State University, Northridge, California

Mr. Warshauer earned a Bachelor of the Arts in English/ Theatre Obtained secondary teaching credential (junior and senior high school) in California. He starred in many productions directed and presented shows. In 1986 he earned the Northridge Arts Council Award for Excellence in Theatre

1972-1976

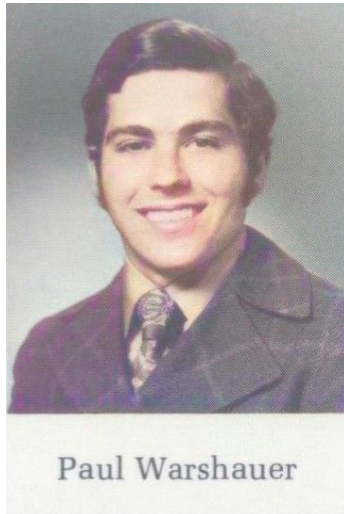

Northwestern University, Evanston, IL

Mr. Warshauer began his undergraduate studies in Theatre as an acting major but quickly realized that “acting took too much discipline.” He visited the Dean and became one of the few “Interdepartmental Majors,” (Theatre, Film, TV, and Interpretation) He created and produced the first Mee-Ow Show in the spring of 1974. The Mee-Ow Show has been performed every year since then and counts famous performers as veterans of the show: Seth Meyers, Julia Louis-Dreyfus, Anna Gasteyer, Kristen Schaal, and many others.

Cleveland Heights High School, Cleveland Heights, OH

Mr. Warshauer graduated with high honors and in the 93rd percentile of class. He earned the Albert Schwartz Memorial Award and a Trophy for Theatre Arts. He was accepted to Yale, Boston University, and Northwestern University.

PAUL WARSHAUER'S FIRST "DIRECTING" JOB

Monday, June 6, 1966

MIAMI BEACH DAILY SUN

THIRTY-FIVE youngsters from the Hope School for Mentally Retarded Children were entertained by Mrs. Irving Bosk over the weekend at Harbour House South. Entertainment was provided by Charles 'Flippo' Solo (below) in the role of a clown and by students (above) from Bay Harbour Elementary School. The students are (from left) Carl Gardner, Linda Stanczak, Debra Frankel, Sandra Frankel, Cheryl Lichter, Liza Jane Breslau and Paul Warshaver. (Sun Photos by Ted Press.)

Mr. Warshauer (far right) began his directing career at age 12 when he directed "Adventures in Storybookland" at Bay Harbor Elementary as the 5th grade school play. A group of volunteers also presented the play for special needs children. The clown mentioned became angry because he thought that he was the main event.

Other Murders R Us Productions are not limited to “Murders”

Events at Weddings and Anniversaries “Who Stole the Wedding Cake?”

Several clients requested original entertainment at their weddings. At one event the cast pretended to be “guests” at the wedding. Paul Warshauer played the kindly old judge and assisted in the investigation after the “Wedding Cake and these antique serving tools were stolen! The audience loved it and acted as detectives questioning the wedding party who were all in on joke.

“Who Stole the Aberdeen Emerald?”

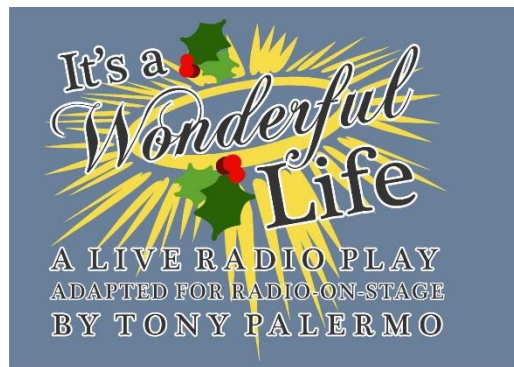

Jewel Heists

Some clients have done several murder mysteries over the years and needed something new. Jewel Heists have been popular. Other groups do not want to do “murders” like children’s groups, some high schools, women’s shelters. In Aberdeen North Dakota, there is a Wizard of Oz park so Paul Warshauer wrote an original murder involving a massive mythical emerald left by Oz author, F. Frank Baum!

Radio Plays

Mr. Warshauer produces, adapts, writes, and directs “live radio plays.” The audience participates in what appears to be a live radio broadcast of familiar stories. Plays include, “It’s a Wonderful Life,” “Miracle on 34th Street,” “Treasure Island,” “A Seussified Christmas Carol,” “A Christmas Carol,” David Mamet’s “Water Engine,” and many others.

SELECTED REAL ESTATE PROJECTS (A Digital Portfolio)

Liberty/Paramount Theatre, Youngstown, Ohio

Grande Venues, Inc. from Wheaton, Illinois and USA Parking of Cleveland, Ohio acquired the historic theatre in downtown Youngstown, for $79,900 from Ohio One Corporation. Architects Lowenstein + Durante and general contractor, Marous Brothers from Willoughby, Ohio have been retained to lead the $4.8 million project. The design calls for the restoration of the Grand Proscenium Theatre, for smaller theatre and music events, the creation (adaptive reuse) of two digital cinemas in the balcony, a white tablecloth restaurant, and theatre bar and retail in the basement. Funding is ongoing and Youngstown State University will now play a pivotal role in the development. Coincidentally Mayor Jay Williams attended college in Ellendale, North Dakota, the site of another Retzler project: The Ellendale Hotel Renovation. (Photos by Nick Hutson)

The Uptown Theatre, Chicago, Illinois

The spectacular lobby (below) as lovingly photographed by Loren Robare in the 1990s. The theatre itself has been unoccupied since 1978. The massive theatre constructed in 1925 held over 4,000 people and showed movies and vaudeville shows. The Uptown was designed by Rapp & Rapp for Balaban and Katz. It opened with a large staff and could “fill, spill and refill” multiple audiences every day utilizing clever lobbies and three street exits. Legal battles continue but the City of Chicago stabilized the exterior. Volunteers continue to maintain the deteriorating interior. Warshauer served as the last Chairman of the Uptown Theatre and Centre of the Arts. The group was heavily financed by Albert Goodman but could not execute a final purchase agreement for the property. In 2008 a new group of investors emerged ready to take on the project. Time will tell...The theatre is not going anywhere. On the right is a photo taken on the 80th birthday of the theatre in 2005. You can see Paul Warshauer under the marquee...barely...

The World Trade Centre, New York, NY December 31, 1999. 2:00 to 4:00 pm

Paul Warshauer visited a real estate client regarding tax matters at the World Trade Center on December 31, 1999 and decided that a trip to the top for New Year's Eve would be a treat. After his meeting the host took him upstairs. When Warshauer heard how much it might cost to attend, ($135.00 at the door and drinks were extra) he had a few beers, sat by the window and took a few photos. Who knows if the staff working up there that day survived on September 11, 2001? As it was a bar, no one is sure how many people upstairs were actually at work. The restaurant was called "Windows on the World." Later that night I went with a comedian and his fiancé to New Jersey to celebrate New Year's Eve at a First Night alcohol free party. Scott Blakeman was the comedian for the alcohol free First Night "stroll around talent and activities." We spent the actual New Year's Eve on a football field watching third rate fireworks. (Photos by Paul Warshauer)

The Ross Ragland Theatre, Klamath Falls, Oregon

The Esquire Theatre (1947) was saved from the wrecking ball by Frank Drew, John Tritch and other civic leaders. Warshauer advised Chairman Frank Drew and the first board of directors on the mechanics of theatre operations, producing shows, raising money and creating long lasting and sustainable programs. Paul Warshauer created the long lasting series of programs and fundraising opportunities for this now regionally famous performing arts facility. Warshauer served on many committees including the programming committee. He wrote the grants that created a county wide after school theatre program and also created the Ragland Summer Theatre Camp program using county parks, the theatre, and the Oregon Institute of Technology, (a university campus). Warshauer also was a resident producer producing and directing some of the largest and most profitable shows of the theatre's history including, South Pacific, Guys and Dolls, Man of La Mancha, Annie Get Your Gun, Peter Pan, Robin Hood, Treasure Island, Follies" and others. Warshauer starred on stage at the Ragland as Nicely-Nicely Johnson in Guys and Dolls and as Alfred P. Doolittle in My Fair Lady.

Ellendale Hotel, Lyric Theatre, and the Ellendale Opera House, Ellendale, North Dakota

In December of 2007 the Retzler Group created a new entity, Historic Ellendale Land Development Company, LLC with Peggy Gilbert and local businessman, Jeff Langley. The group purchased the Nodak Hotel (formerly the Dickey Hotel and Ellendale Hotel). HELD has begun work to restore it as a boutique hotel with 20 rooms, a Café and artist workshop and gallery. In May, 2006 and in June of 2007 the Economic Development Director of Ellendale (Patricia Bowen) retained Grande Venues/ Retzler Group to perform consulting services for the Lyric Theatre, Nodak Hotel and the Ellendale Opera House downtown. Paul Warshauer spent several days talking with local business people, educators, the Mayor, and members of the public. He conducted two informal meetings and developed an "Executive Plan" to open the Lyric Theatre. The city and JDA is still raising money and awareness for the projects.

NODAK PLANS HERE

The Portage Park Project (Henslowe Group, Inc.)

Located on Chicago's Northwest side, Henslowe Group's Chairman, Paul Warshauer poses under the restored marquee. Warshauer applied for, and received, a façade rebate for the "chase mechanisms for the neon and bulb electrification." Warshauer led a group of investors (R. Pales, and J. Deans) to sign a lease with option to purchase agreement with the owners of the multi-use building. The oddly shaped building has 32 apartments, 8 storefronts and a 1,200 seat theatre that had been divided into two theatres but was closed at the time of the contract. Warshauer wrote a complete business plan, negotiated with the Portage Park Neighborhood Association, union projectionists, potential tenants and the City of Chicago. The issuance of a Public Place of Amusement (PPA) license was compromised by a tragic fire in a south side nightclub. That license in the form of an "Occupancy Certificate" arrived too late. Henslowe "sold" their lease to a Hispanic church group. New tenants operated the space as a single screen movie theatre showing vintage films and producing other community events. Amy Reome and local movie fans should be grateful for Caller ID.

If not for that phone feature, Reome, 28, might not have moved closer to her dream of setting up a new movie theatre in Malone. It's not a done deal yet, but she brought in a special consultant from Chicago — Paul Warshauer of Grande Venues Inc. — last week. He's helping locate a site and define her options. But she chickened out on phoning him.

"I let it ring once and hung up," Reome admitted Monday. "I thought I'd send e-mail instead. I was sitting right at the computer when the phone rang. He had Caller ID and called me back."

Warshauer was in Malone for a couple of days last week, and met with Reome and some local businesspeople Friday to brainstorm ideas. Though he's been to New England, this was his first trip this far north in New York.

"I don't usually leave the house for less than $7,500," Warshauer said Monday from Chicago. "But I was interested in her story so I cut my fee to just the cost of airfare and a hotel room."

He speaks enthusiastically about Malone, the people he

The Elba Water Tower project was a project that was “pure historic preservation.” As no funds would be generated from the site, Paul Warshauer (Executive Director) and Tom Cravey (Assistant Executive Director) were retained as consultants by Gary Rassmussen, concerned citizen and local agribusiness folks, to save the historic Elba Nebraska Water Tower. Paul and Tom conducted meetings, wrote grants, attended meetings of the Village Board, created a Nebraska not-for-profit group, filed articles of organization, contacted historic preservation organizations and worked out a five year pro forma. The project ended when the Village board voted to demolish the Tower in 2010. The not-for-profit was dissolved in June, 2011.

The New Regal Theatre (Henslowe Group, Inc.)

In 2004, Grande Venues was selected as the prime developer for this $16,000,000 urban renewal project in the city's south side involves the use of historic tax credits, Tax Incremental Financing (TIF) and government funding. The 2,000 seat magnificently restored atmospheric theatre will be surrounded by a restaurant, parking structure with commercial and residential components, and a school for the arts. The former owners are the Gardners who lavished their own money to bring this theatre into its current splendor. The current owners are Ron and Regina Evans who are working hard to re-open this movie palace.

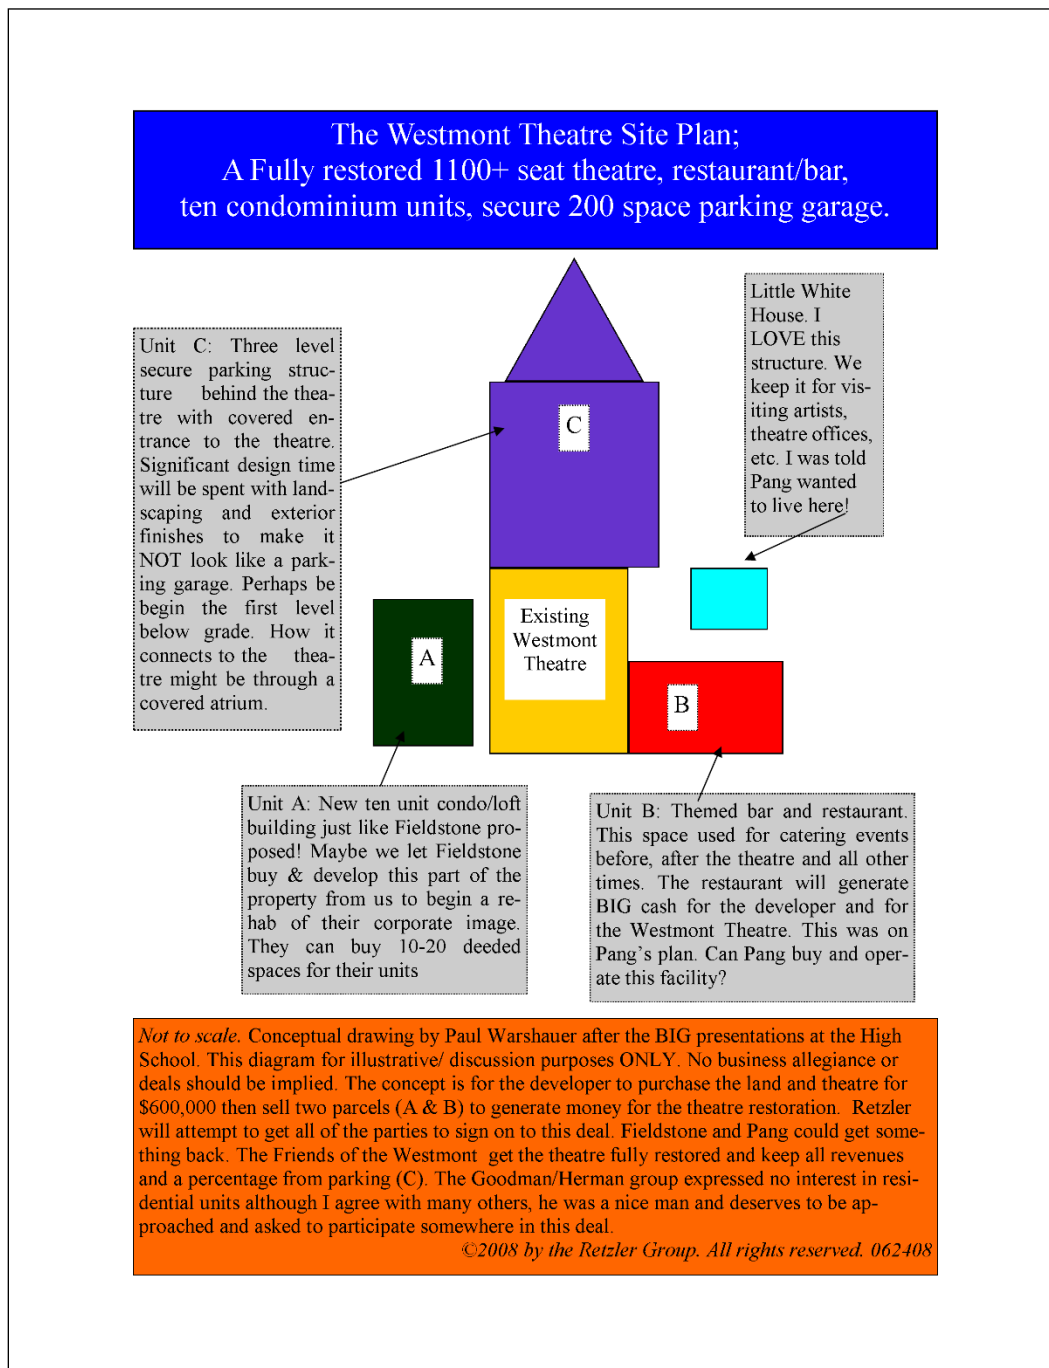

The Eldridge Castle Project (2016)

Warshauer was hired as consultant by realtor Steven Schrudder of Windemere to create a feasibility study for the historic castle in Bellingham, Washington. Warshauer assembled a team of architects, builders, engineers and property managers. Two large high voltage towers were problematic and caused the project to stall.

The Westmont Theatre Project, Camden County, New Jersey

The Retzler Group was asked to assist in the creation of a not-for-profit organization in Camden County New Jersey. He created a board with local architects, attorneys, and theatre aficionados. The City is currently wending its way through a lawsuit with a former developer. The graphic defined how the property might look if all parties sat down at the table and settled the lawsuit and moved forward with development of the theatre and a themed restaurant.

Meetings target Pittsfield's need for Zoe Theater

By Deborah Gertz Husar

PITTSFIELD, Ill. — Betty Lacy grew up with the Zoe Theater and wants to see the Pittsfield landmark brought back to life. I think Pittsfield ought to have a theater," Lacy said.

Lacy shared her thoughts at a public meeting targeting arts and entertainment needs in Pittsfield. The series of meetings, led by Wheaton consulting firm Grande Venues Inc., wraps up at 6:30 tonight at the Pittsfield High School media center.

"We're in the process of trying to identify what people within Pittsfield and Pike County want to do with the building," said Bill McGurney, the city's economic development consultant.

The meetings and conversations with area residents — ranging from businesspeople to skateboarders — supplied a wealth of ideas to GVI staff. Most of the ideas center on restoring the theater and offering everything from the afternoon movie matinees to theatrical productions.

More suggestions will come through an arts assessment survey done by GVI and paid for by the city and the Greater Pike Industrial Development Corp.

Survey results will be collated and presented, along with GVI's recommendations, in July. The city then could enter into a multi-year agreement with GVI to manage the theater.

"Not every theater can stay open. I don't know if the Zoe has enough importance to the community to stay open," said GVI chairman and chief operating officer Paul Warshauer.

Making that decision follows a three-step process.

"The first and primary question is not what the building is going to look like. The main question is, is there a need for a theater in the community, and if so, what kind of activities," Warshauer said.

An art and entertainment-related project can be approached in just the same way, he said. With a decision made on the structure and potential activities, GVI targets how to "repackage" the theater's operating through a not-for-profit organization, a for-profit entity or a hybrid — followed by how to pay for operations and needed renovation or reconstruction.

The building itself, which opened as a theater in Sept. 7, 1950, is "one of the most historic. It was a feed store and an automotive parts" store, Warshauer said.

The building, at 209 N. Madison, has a balcony and contained approximately 400 seats.

What the building offers must meet needs for residents of all ages. "You don't want to focus in on 40- to 60-year-olds when you're dealing with a smaller population," said GVI's president and chief marketing officer Mike Novelli.

Novelli said GVI operates and manages the Wheaton Grand Theatre, and many of its programs are geared toward children.

The programs use local talent, ranging from jugglers and musicians to Warshauer, who has spent four decades working in theater, taking the stage for a production. "The big thing" is to get children involved, Novelli said, otherwise, "as kids get older, they don't have the interest we have in theater."

SNEAK PEAK
Key questions in the arts assessment survey included:
• Do you believe the Zoe Theater in Pittsfield is worth restoring? (Answer yes, no or don't know)
• How many times or more of the types of programs you'd like to see in the Zoe Theater — afternoon movies, second-run movies, classic movies, theme movie series, stand-up comedians, rock concerts, jazz or blues concerts, lectures, children's programs, local musicals, local plays.
• Would you be willing to volunteer on a committee to bring back the Zoe Theater? (Answer yes, no or don't know).

The City of Pittsfield and an economic development partnership retained Grande Venues, Inc. to perform a complicated arts assessment to determine if the public would come to movies in this quaint town. The Zoe Theatre was a 1950s era "on the square" theatre. Mike Novelli and Paul Warshauer traveled to Pittsfield, IL to conduct a series of town hall style meetings. Retzler delivered a 100 page report with specific recommendations and programming elements. To date despite our best efforts, the theatre remains dark but a committee has been working on revitalizing the theatre recently.

Garden Theatre Project, Charleston, South Carolina

Grande Venues was hired to perform an immediate feasibility and marketing study by the Friends of the Charleston Theatre led by Josh Brinson. Paul Warshauer traveled to Charleston, did a short survey and a needs assessment. Clearly there was a need for a small theatre, music, film venue in historic Charleston and the historic Garden Theatre was in need of an operator. Months earlier commercial interest were to buy the property and perform drastic renovations that would have removed all semblance of the former historic theatre. Erected in 1918, the theater ran successfully until the 1970's, when it closed. Seven years later, in 1977, the theater was restored. During the 1980's, the theater was used for performances during Charleston's famous Spoleto Festival and eventually transformed into a performing arts space. The City of Charleston did not renew its lease of the theater in 2003, and despite efforts of the Friends of the Garden Theater, the theater was converted into retail space. We would like to think that our historic perspective led the modern developer to retain historic elements of the theatre.

The group wants a hotel in the small North Dakota town and will get it due to the efforts of this group/. They retained Retzler Group and the company performed a study determining that Parcel 1 would be the best site. Also included was Wyndham Hotel group's Shawn Walker who proposed a Days Inn or Super 8 Motel.

Purchase Agreement Approved for Old Middle School

Pending sale comes with $300,000 price tag slashed to $89,000

The Board of Education for the York School District and a new group, the York Centre, LLC in Grand Island have come to a purchase agreement regarding the former middle school.

Superintendent Terry Kenealy said the purchase price is $300,000 but new Superintendent Mike Lucas slashed that price to $89,000 in the hopes that the Developer would take the property off their hands.

The middle school has been marketed by United Country Real Estate since the new middle school facility was constructed.

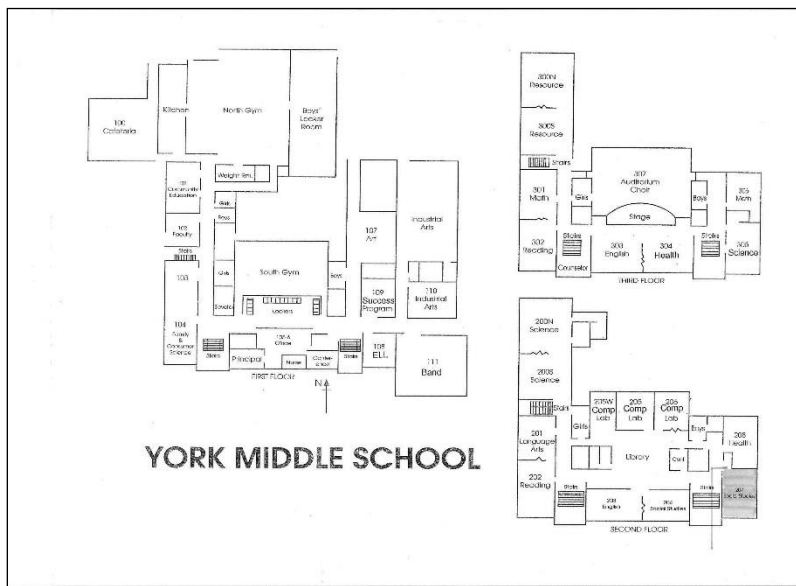

The current purchase agreement is an amendment of an earlier agreement. The original had a closing date of mid-January, 2009; however, the Duke wrestlers use the middle school gym for practice. That closing date would have come before the wrestling season was completed. The new purchase agreement pushes the closing date to December 2009, to eliminate that problem and some zoning issues. Superintendent Kenealy said that if a solution comes for the wrestling practice area, the closing date could be much earlier than March. There's also a possibility that an agreement may be reached in which the closing takes place earlier and the wrestlers are allowed to continue their practices there per the new owner's permission.

The purchase includes the middle school, gym, surrounding sheds and most of the contents, with the exception of a few items the district has in storage. The sales contract does not include the property north of the middle school, across the street, which has been proposed for a new softball complex.

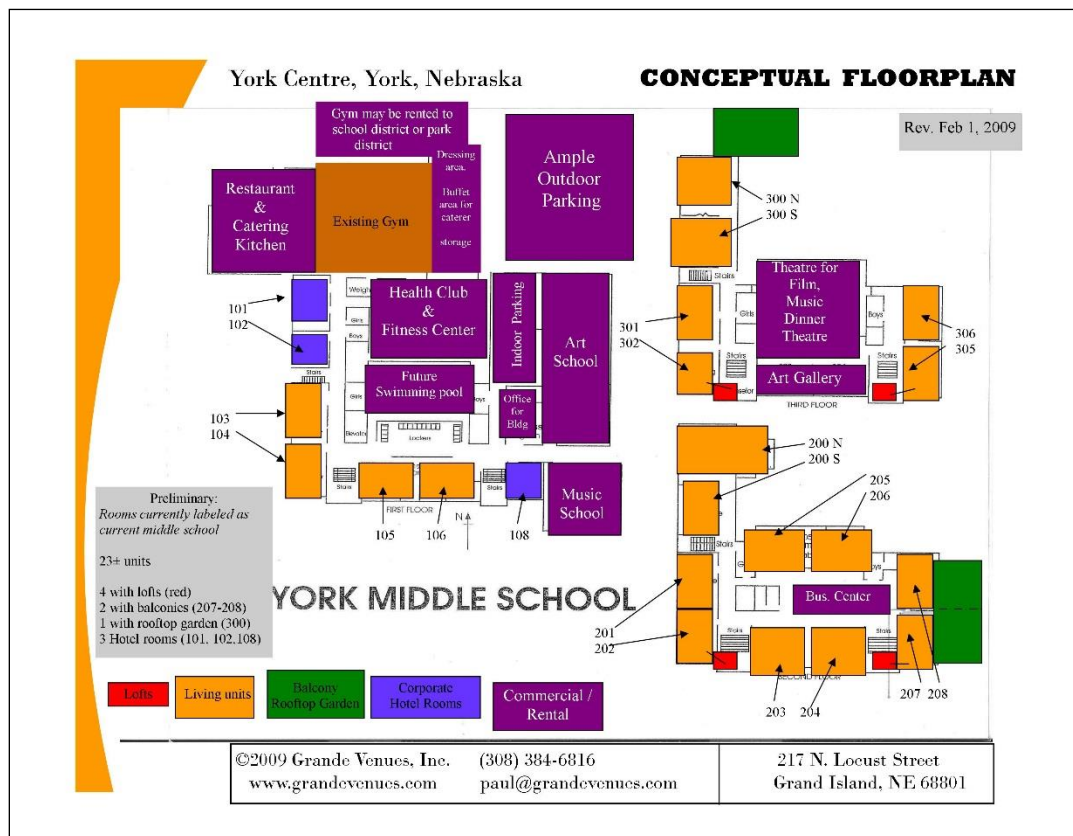

Paul Warshauer, CEO for York Centre and his Grande Venues Group, says he's excited about the future of that particular property. (www.grandevenues.com)

"Everything is still in the planning stages," Warshauer said. "We'd like to see some apartments, and we would like to maintain the historical theater — for it to become a multi-use arts facility. We still have to talk to the city and the county, and we will have several meetings with members of the public as to what they would like to see there. It's rare for a developer to ask for public input — but we like to do things in open forum. This school belongs to the community — what a developer decides to do with it is the American way. But so many people went through that school. To look at how to preserve the historical building and the developer make a buck — that's the making of a happy marriage.”

Lafayette Movie Theatre Programming Contract

A group of business men purchased the Lafayette Theatre in Indiana for the purpose of saving their downtown. They retained Retzler Development Group, LLC to create a season of classic films. Mr. Warshauer stayed in Lafayette, visited with the principals and theatre manager, toured local businesses and tendered a formal report. The group did well and the Lafayette Theatre continues today on its journey to find an identity.

The Enean Theatre, Pittsburg, California.

In the spring of 2005, Grande Venues was retained by the Enean Theatre to create a business plan to save the old East Bay California coastal Theatre. The community was passionate about saving the theatre and creating a performing arts space. GVI was retained for consulting purposes, and coordinated efforts between the theatre's private owner and various municipal agencies and organizations to oversee ongoing mechanical services and SMOG certifications in the orchestra section of the theatre. On the walls were paintings of Greek heroes and zebras, remnants of the once large Greek family theatre chain. Due in large part to the personal efforts of Chairman Paul Warshauer, the city of Pittsburg itself took control of the Enean Theatre and its restoration. At present, the architectural firm of Fisher Friedman Associates AIA is moving forward to implement a bold new design for the site.

South Boulevard Housing Development

Mr. Warshauer's first foray into the world of real estate began in 1974 when he purchased two single family homes on South Boulevard (216 & 220) in Evanston, Illinois from Elsa Erickson on a "land contract." The sales price was $91,000 for BOTH houses. He did not have the down payment. To earn the money he scalped 1,000 tickets to a George Harrison concert, netting about $15,000 in cash. However, he was arrested at the Chicago Stadium for "scalping." The case was dismissed and his record was expunged! None the less, Mrs. Erickson was impressed and accepted $13,000 down which was less than the 20% she expected. He moved into 220 South with two room-mates. He rented 216 out for $700.00 month to 3 wealthy Northwestern graduate students. His payment to Mrs. Erickson was $700.00 per month so the project was cash flow positive from Day One! He hosted lavish TENT PARTIES and invited hundreds of friends. Paul finally moved to California and found investors for the project. He demolished 220 South, vacated a small alley, and our investment group built several condominium units on the property.

The Catskills Entertainment District (CED) was to be a formal performing arts cooperative set up by local government, not for profit organizations, business entities, economic development agencies, and arts organizations in this specific region using theatres and performing arts spaces that were under-utilized or that have not been constructed or considered at this time.

The fundraising effort began when a Wheaton native returned disabled from the Iraqi war. Joel Gomez had limited resources and his family had been financially devastated by the continuing care he required. Mr. Plagman volunteered to serve as the chairman of a massive community wide fun raising campaign. The effort collected money for the family to build a house and provide care for Mr. Gomez and housing for his family. A large kick off, well publicized and attended by Lt. Governor Pat Quinn, then US Congressman Henry Hyde, and many other dignitaries was held at the Wheaton Grand Theatre, then managed by Grande Venues owned by Paul Warshauer and Mike Novelli. Warshauer served as Event Coordinator.

Wishek Historic City Hall Project, Inc. (The P3 Project)

The P3 project would connect developers, state agencies, preservation groups, tax credit providers, an attorney, a CPA, and equity sources (banks and private investors). The goal would be to preserve two projects per year to start. The Wishek Historic City Hall project (in Wishek, ND) would be the first this year, (2010). The Ellendale Hotel & Nodak Café (in Ellendale, ND) would be the second. The Old City Hall was finally demolished by the City Council in 2011.

The key components are:

1. Not-for-profit groups (NFP) mean well but they rarely have enough capital or business experience to make historic properties economically viable.
2. NFPs cannot obtain Federal Historic Tax Credits available to the private Developers (or any for profit entities such as an LLC).
3. Developers can provide the pro forma, feasibility, and business plans necessary to make historic properties "interesting" to investors and banks.
4. NFPs can provide many hours of volunteer labor and experience.
5. Developers cannot obtain certain funds that NFPs can obtain, (grants, tax deductible gifts, in kind donations, pro bono services, and the elusive naming rights*).
6. The Developer would purchase these properties as an LLC then immediately negotiate a long term lease. The owners of the LLC could expect a small return on investment. How the investors' tax advantages can be valued in North Dakota is one of the elements we need to explore. Banks will naturally look at the property on the basis of its value and the strength of the "tenant." If the not-for-profit "tenant" is well organized and has a board with broad community appeal and experience, most banks will loan.

Proposed county shop project encounters another roadblock

by Francis Mater

Another barrier apparently has been placed in the way of a proposed to build a new North Dakota County Road maintenance shop.

County commissioners had been told the U.S. Department of Agriculture likely would award a grant of up to $100,000 as part of a financing package being put together for the project.

But commissioners Jim Plante, Ron J. Madsen and Neil Madsen, who informed last week by letter that it is not appearing the county will not be eligible for any grant money.

The architect, Plante and Madsen, the commission chairman, "The amount was never mentioned," but had been led to believe the government would help out with some of the cost for this building. Now, it appears that's not the case."

Last month, Plante's attorney, Terry Elms, said in a written opinion that commissioners may not approve the project by simple resolution, instead, Elms said, voters must give their OK before the county may issue bonds to construct the building. A 2009 election "super majority" vote is required.

The original position of the current shop building, located just north of Highway 1, is set for years ago. The building is in poor condition and not tall enough to conveniently house numerous graders and other modern maintenance equipment.

The county hopes to construct a 50-by-100-foot metal building, with 10-level sidewalks and an 18-foot entry door for equipment. In addition to space for storage of equipment and materials, it also expects the building would include a tool room, office space and an employee lounge. See NC&B, p. 3.

City approves sale of Old City Hall to preservation corporation

by Francis Mater

Wishek City Council members agreed last week to sell the Old City Hall to a local group that hopes to restore the historic structure.

A corporation — known as Wishek Historic City Hall Project, Inc. — has been formed to purchase and renovate the building.

At its April 5 regular meeting, the council approved a resolution to transfer ownership to the corporation for a cost of $100. "Our offer is to take title on or before June 1 and begin work to maintain, restore and operate the Old City Hall building for cultural, economic development and tourism purposes," said Paul Winkhaus, a Nebraska-based consultant hired by the local group.

"The for-profit corporation will hold title, but the hard work would be performed by a non-profit group. The Old City Hall, p. 3

OLD CITY HALL: Heritage Society believes building can become a genealogical center

"As you might recall, I was retained as a consultant and continue to work (with the group.) Your sale, however, would be to the 'S corporation' of the property could go on the tax rolls sometime in the future."

"Naturally, as it will be used for cultural and tourism purposes, we will request that the county grant some tax abatements or reductions as work continues on the project."

A leaky roof has caused extensive deterioration to the interior of the Old City Hall. The Wishek City Library, once located in the building, was merged with the school library and moved across town to the school complex about 10 years ago after damp conditions had threatened the book collection.

The building has been listed on the National Register of Historic Places since 2005. The Wishek Heritage Society pushed for its placement on the National Register.

Representatives from the State Historical Society have cited the building as "an excellent early example of pruned-in-place midwestern concrete construction," adding that it was "an important civic gathering place for more than 80 years."

Winkhaus Heritage Society members envision the structure eventually can be converted into a heritage and genealogical center.

"As a great deal of time has passed waiting for work to be started on the building, our group proposed that in consideration of the reasonable price, we would commence forward progress within one year and continue actively thereafter," Winkhaus said.

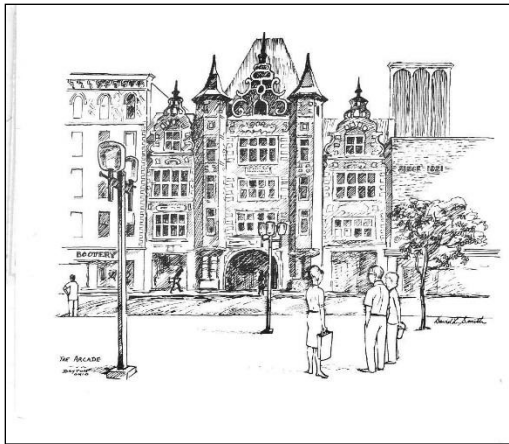

John Winkhaus, a spokesperson for the Wishek Heritage Society, told council members the group hopes to repair or replace the damaged roof to help prevent further damage to the building.

"That will be our first order of business," Winkhaus said.

ROADBLOCK: Commissioners think new building will pay for itself

The Dayton Arcade Project

The City of Dayton and the Friends of the Dayton Arcade, a not-for-profit advocacy group, retained Mr. Warshauer as a consultant to explore opportunities to develop the amazing Dayton Arcade Building in downtown Dayton, Ohio. He spent several days touring the property, meeting architects and city officials and made a determination that the project could move forward if completed in segments. Parking was a massive problem and Mr. Warshauer began the process of trying to line up partners. The former owner defaulted on a tax lien and a group from Germany and Wisconsin purchased the property. The new owners have not paid taxes since the purchase. Mr. Warshauer remains involved as a consultant and potential property manager.

Warshauer played tennis against tennis legend, Bobby Riggs

Paul Warshauer (left) greets tennis legend Bobby Riggs and the Chicago Tennis Club in the 1970s. Warshauer created a company called, Creative Entertainment Management Company and served as an agent (and scalper) for several productions and events. In an attempt to publicize his company, Warshauer agreed to a ten minute rally with the tennis great. Warshauer brought a TV and film crew, (including film-maker Brian England, and lifelong friend, Rick Kotrba) and others in his entourage. Although the two had never met, Riggs played this event up as we were old friends posing for photos and pretending we had played in New York months ago... For the record, Warshauer scored one point against Riggs who handily defeated Warshauer in three games straight. It was fun to see Mr. Warshauer scramble all over the court.

A brew pub is coming to the old Coca-Cola building on Taylor Street. A reality TV show is not far behind! Marc Broe, who was trained as a brew master in England, plans to open an English-style brew pub in Griffin, at what used to be Dunk's BBQ. He is working with the city and developer John Carlisle & with "Paulie & Me"...

"Paulie & Me"™ The Program Concept

"Paulie & Me" is a buddy follow-doc reality television show starring two buddies who decide to build a business together. They make a list of a number of choices and finally decide on a microbrewery. They are joined by a cast including the Brewmaster, two assistants, (one an attractive female and one uptight young man) a realtor, lawyers, developers, chefs, and other colorful characters.

Paul Warshauer and Loren Margolese have been friends for over 25 years but are as different as night and day. This modern odd couple resembles the famous Oscar and Felix: Paulie is global and messy and Loren is specific and neat. Together their chemistry is hysterical as they plan business trips, beer tastings, and meetings with beer lovers, owners, travel writers, investors, architects, contractors, and Brewmeisters.

The show follows the "Paulie and Me" and their staff on adventures to microbreweries nationwide to learn as much as they can about opening and running a successful microbrewery. In subsequent seasons, tours to other countries will be included. Taste tests always result in lively discussions with local patrons.

The first episodes show Paulie moving from his seven-story building in Grand Island, Nebraska to Dallas to work on the project with his friend Loren. Loren is shown with his personal training clients in Dallas.

The two discuss various business ideas and finally settle on building a Brewpub. They plan out a strategy to crisscross the country learning about and tasting lots of beer from famous microbreweries and eventually build and operate their own.

To start the quest, they befriend the owner of a Texas microbrewery, a Dallas realtor, and Loren's wild attorney who also runs a condom company. They create a large map of the US with pins & flags. The team hires a young film-maker who travels with them. His artistic vision frequently clashes with Paulie and Loren.

The project requires two assistants and in the next episodes they interview and hire two young people. The skill sets include, logistics, marketing, finance, economics, merchandising, web development, driving, and operations. Naturally two people will be hard to find with that list of requirements.

The boys go shopping and lease a big bus to travel the country and argue over the name, "the Brew Mobile," "The Micro-Express," etc. Along the way Paulie meets Mark Broe who is planning a brewery for an Atlanta suburb. This puts a wedge between "Paulie and Me."

In Episodes One through Four the crew tours 10 different breweries nationwide. In Episode Four, they zero in on the Dallas and Atlanta markets where they will build their first microbrewery.

In Episodes Five through Eight the pair learns the art and craft of making beer and meet Brew Master Mark Broe from Atlanta. Warshauer is convinced Atlanta is the place to be. Loren is not convinced.

In Episodes Nine and Ten: Paulie and Loren break company as Paulie goes to Griffin, Georgia and declares this location is the best. Paulie is hired as a consultant by Mark Broe to refine the business plan for the Eagle & Lion Pub. Headaches with the landlord, architect, city government, design, parking, food service, water, grains, and sales/marketing abound. The Chamber of Commerce holds a "mixer" and Mark meets and greets the locals.

In Episodes Eleven and Twelve: Loren travels to Atlanta and the two mend fences and work on finishing the pub. One of Paulie's former apprentices, and now radio personality, lends his voice talents to the show.

In Episode Thirteen: The Lion and Eagle Brewpub opens. Paulie and Loren are excited for a while then become bored. "The fun was the hunt!" Paulie and Me now look to open up another business.

Paul Warshauer is first executive director for NUACT

By Serra Muscatello
Staff Writer

NEW ULM — The New Ulm Actors Community Theatre (NUACT) hired Paul Warshauer as its first paid executive director.

Warshauer said he has been very happy being in New Ulm and serving as the new executive director.

"I'm extremely happy," said Warshauer. "I've had a lot of fun. I don't think I was expecting to be so warmly welcomed by so many different people."

He was born in 1954 in Chicago, Ill.

When he was asked if he missed Chicago he said he does miss Chicago, but he has plans to visit Chicago real soon.

He began his six month tenure on Nov. 1. He will assist the board in a variety of tasks including strategic planning, board development, fund raising, conducting workshops, website updating, and directing productions.

"We are growing and need a professional in the theatre to guide us through the next six months and beyond," said Judy Sellner, NUACT board president. "Mr. Warshauer has produced and directed over 400 shows, owned his own theatres, manages others, and has an impressive resume including his work on restoring old theatres."

"In my opinion it was a great leap of faith for a small theater company to do this," said Warshauer.

In addition to hiring a new executive director, NUACT now has a permanent office located on the second floor of the historic Kiesling House at 220 N. Minnesota St. in downtown New Ulm.

Warshauer said he likes working in the top floor office space at the Kiesling House.

"It's a shared space with GCAC - the Grand Center for Arts and Culture," said Warshauer.

He first directed a murder mystery in 2010 and again this past June at the Grand Kabaret in New Ulm.

On Feb. 17 and 18 Warshauer hosted the murder mystery play called "Murder At The Italian Wedding." NUACT actors performed the show at the Grand Kabaret theater, downtown New Ulm. This was a production that Warshauer had written and directed for NUACT. The two shows, which included a dinner theater, were completely sold out both nights.

"We're very happy with the cast and the audience turnout (for the murder mystery play)," said Warshauer.

Warshauer met the late Bobbi McCrea in Oregon 20 years ago. He returned to New Ulm — to help keep her dream of a permanent home for the theatre company alive.

"I came here because Bobbi McCrea was one of my dearest friends. She died in a fire in the summer ... she was as crazy and as wild and as free-spirited as I'd ever met," said Warshauer. "For her to die in a fire with her two daughters and all those guests was just terrible. So I thought about it and I called Judy Sellner ... who is the president and I said, 'I think I can help.'"

Warshauer talked with Sellner about what he could do for the company. Among the things he is doing while here in New Ulm is identifying local spaces for a permanent theater for NUACT.

"Which is really my joy," said Warshauer, "I've owned my own theaters, I've managed theaters ... I've restored theaters ... I've been on the stage ... I've been directing and I've been producing. I've worked on sets. I'm kind of a jack of all trades and a good guy to have around if you need someone who knows a lot about theater."

Warshauer began his life in the theater in the fifth grade. He played the lead role in an adaptation of Macbeth.

"It had ghosts and sword fighting," said Warshauer, "I was hooked ever since then."

He moved to Florida where he went to school down there. Warshauer broke his grandfather's heart when he told he wanted to be in the theater instead of going into the family business. His grandfather owned big parking garages all over. His company became Standard Parking.

"Last year they did over 800 million dollars in parking," said Warshauer.

He went on to study at Northwestern University where he could audition for any play any time. He created "The Meow" show. He said he was the founder and first producer of that show.

"Improv has always been something that I've liked," said Warshauer.

So far, Warshauer has done over 400 shows. His most recent murder mystery show was his 333 or 334 show he said.

"It's my twentieth year of doing murder mysteries," said Warshauer.

He is 57 years old and ready for the best roles. He smiled as he said the part he really wants now is Max Bialystock from The Producers.

Warshauer owns a Masonic Temple Building in Grand Island, Neb.

He began his work for NUACT at a board meeting on Nov. 3. He outlined his plans to direct "It's A Wonderful Life" Dec. 16-18 at Martin Luther College.

The show was conducted like an old radio play. People heard the familiar story of George Bailey, Clarence the Angel, and the evil Mr. Potter. Local cast members played multiple roles.

Warshauer is also leading children's local theater productions (including "Goldilocks and the Pirates") and a controversial play this summer called "Dogs in the Hot Moon."

This fall for Oktoberfest Warshauer will write and direct an original play called "The Wonderful History of Beer."

Beginning in January 2012, Warshauer began conducting a Directing Symposium for those people who are interested in directing plays and musicals in a community theater setting. He has a group of 10 people (including one high school student) who are learning about theater and directing from him.

Warshauer is also starting a library collection of theater books for NUACT at the office in the Kiesling House. People may donate theater-related books to NUACT.

For more information about auditioning for any of the shows, working backstage, or more information about NUACT please contact Mr. Warshauer at paulwarshauer@gmail.com or call the NUACT office at 507-359-9990.

“It’s Murder Out There!™” is a partially scripted reality TV show that follows the antics of the author, writer, producer, production staff, and an acting troupe as they present high class original murder mystery performances around the country. The backstage antics, romances, fights, and creative processes are captured as the “Murder Mystery Bus” travels from city to city with the Troupe, the Host/Author and staff. Two celebrities are on the day of the show to “star” and the proceeds of the live theatrical show go to local charities.
No TV show has ever captured LIVE theatre antics like this.

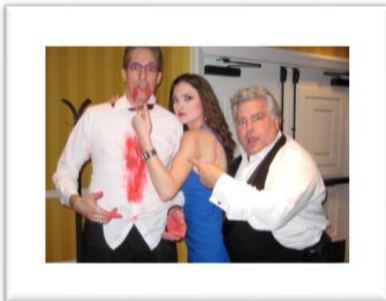

Each episode can be filmed in only two days. The Sizzle will be taped from OCTOBER 15- 16, 2015 at the Oster Regent Theatre in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Two well known actors (or local celebrities) from each city will join the Troupe of eight actors as they audition three local hopefuls to perform in a show in front of a live audience making the cast of 13 lucky performers!

As part of the reality show concept, the cast will “vote off” a Troupe member each week and a new cast member will audition immediately to take the spot. The replacement could be a professional actor “waiting in the wings” or one of the local performers who captures the heart or imagination of the audience.

The proposal in the first cycle, shows are presented in thirteen cities. In following seasons, other US cities and foreign countries could play a part.

Each week an original performance is cast, rehearsed, and presented in ONE DAY in front of a live audience.

Robert Dean Wells, Lorrissa Julianus and author Paul Warshauer after a show for Diamond Consultants in Chicago. Every show has a solid and funny denouement (reveal) where the victim comes back from the dead to “tell all.”

The Show Profile: This is the way a normal episode might be filmed.

On a Thursday night, the Murder Mystery “bus” pulls into a city and unloads the tired cranky actors and crew into their hotel. The assumption is that they have been on the road. THE CAMERAS FOLLOW ALL OF THIS. In Cedar falls we will stay, and film, in local hotels including the historic Blackhawk Hotel on Main Street just a few doors down from the Oster Regent theatre. This would be typical of the various cities we visit.

The Blackhawk Hotel (left) occupies one of the oldest continuously-operating hotel sites in the country having been in operation in two buildings and under various names since the dawn of Cedar Falls' history in the early 1850s.

The cast and crew critique the show from the last week finds out whom the new Troupe member will be. In the second or third season, the staff goes to the website gurus who show the results from on line voting. The company goes over the details for the following day frequently getting into arguments and revealing personal rivalries.

The Troupe will travel from city to city in the “Murder Bus” which has corporate sponsor logos. Naturally the cameras will roll as the performers, crew, and producers argue and complain about their parts, the amateur performers, accommodations, the author, etc. For the Sizzle tape we rent from a local company.

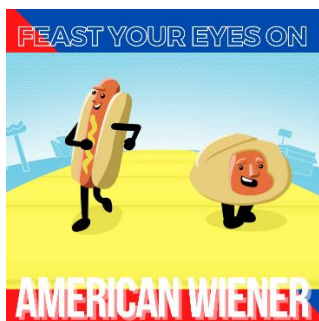

The company is kept together by the show’s creator and father figure, author/director Paul Warshauer, who has presented over 350 of these murder mysteries in a career that spans over 20 years. His quirky personality keeps everyone on their toes. After the first evening meeting, some of the cast goes out drinking and others spend the night in the hotel or reviewing their scripts. The camera follows them all. Below is the KING OF MURDER MYSTERIES!

American Wiener, Television Show

A mockumentary about a team that travels the country in search of the most delicious dogs, best brats, and savory sausages. Paulie Warner is the energetic host joined by a dry British food critic sent to America for “sins committed in a British foodie show.” American Wiener is a TV show that merges the best of "Parks & Rec" and the "Office" with "Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives" and "Guy Fieri." Celebrities (and look-a-likes) will join each episode. Rocky makes an appearance in the pilot as the garbage man. www.americanwiener.com
