A coalition working to release terminally ill elder Russell "Harun Maroon" Shoatz from the cruel and inhumane conditions of confinement in Pennsylvania's Department of Corrections.

Russell “Maroon Harun” Shoatz is a 78-year-old dedicated community activist who is serving multiple life sentences as a US-held political prisoner. He was held in solitary confinement for a total of 29 years. Despite the torture and deprivation that has been everyday life for Maroon over the last several decades, he has remained at the cutting edge of history through his writings.

His essays and interviews, compiled in his book Maroon the Implacable, demonstrate a profound and self-critical understanding of the current moment with clear proposals for how to move forward. He is currently dying from Stage 4 cancer and has survived COVID and surgery this past year, in spite of the Pennsylvania Department of Corrections’ totally inadequate medical care; for example, delayed surgery.

ON AUGUST 12, RUSSELL MAROON SHOATZ’S PETITION TO QUIETLY LIVE OUT HIS DAYS IN HOSPICE CARE WAS DENIED.

Judge Kai Scott of the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas denied Russell Maroon Shoatz’s petition for a medical transfer to hospice care, despite his terminal diagnosis.

She denied his petition because she claims he’s still a risk of escape and a danger to the community. Maroon is wheelchair-bound and partially blind.

Maroon is a father, grandfather, great grandfather, uncle, brother and a beloved community member. He should be able to die at home surrounded by his loving family.
