

Jacob Ries passed away on May 17, 1911 in Eagle Creek, Minnesota. His descendants continued to operate the bottling works.

The Jacob Ries Bottling Works operated for over 100 years. The family-owned operation was famous for its sparkling water and ginger ale. Eventually the family sold their "secret recipe" to the Pepsi Company in 1975. The building was torn down in 1977.

The building is gone but the memories of the clacking pop bottles on the bottling line, the smell of the soda flavors wafting into the street when passing by, and their wonderful soda are still talked about by the older locals. After every day, after school, every child used to stand by the windows, watching the bottles go by, full of soft drinks.

Jacob Jacques Franz Ries Sr. was born on December 6, 1830 in Septfontaines, Canton de Capellen, Luxembourg, son of Jean Nicholas Ries and Katherina Kiefer.

When he was 18 years of age both his parents died. Jacob Ries was given both a literary and musical education in his native country and in 1854 came to America. He lived three years in New York, mainly engaged in carpenter work; then made a visit of six months to his native land, and in the spring of 1857 settled in Shakopee, which has since been his place of residence with the exception of a time spent at his farm in Spring Lake.

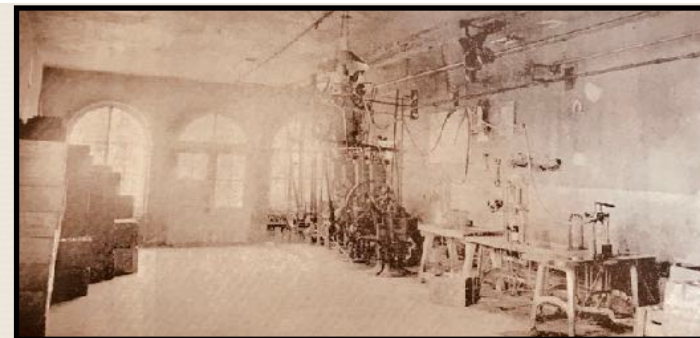

In 1857, Jacob married Josephine Mamer in Shakopee. She was born on June 24, 1836, daughter of Jacobus Mamer and Anne Elisabeth Brandenburg. They went on to raise a family of 14 children.

Jacob Ries from Luxembourg and E.A. O'Leary from Ireland opened the Bottling Company on the river (north of Holmes and First Street) in 1872. O'Leary sold out one year later.

Ries moved the factory to Third and Holmes Street in 1880. It moved there to avoid the flood plan. A factory of brick was erected, and had all the facilities for manufacturing carbonate and fermented beverages.

It became Jacob Ries Bottling Works, or Rock Spring, which operated from 1872 to 1975.

The Rock Spring Bottling Works building was on the southwest corner of Holmes Street and Third Street. There was a small building housing the well between the bottling building and the alley. Elmer Dahl, who owned the bakery, lived in the white house across the alley. The Rock Spring office was west of the bottling building. Directly north of the bottling building across Third Street was the parking lot. To the west of the parking lot were the warehouses. Warehouse #3 is now where the Masjid Al-Amin Samaha Islamic Center since 2016. Before that it Eastman's Drug Store and then the Auction Center before being a mosque in 2016. The old Ries homestead was on the South side of the bottling plant.

Rock Spring was very popular, and the trains stopped 2 or 3 times a day for loading and unloading the pop. A garage was established on Lewis Street. In the rear door off the alley was a receiving depot for boxes of liquor.

According to Joe Jenn, "There was also a bottling works in town: they'd delivered bottles of pop to St. Paul and return with bottles of whiskey."
