Teacher NOTES for Counting Challenge - Family Activity Kit

This kit is an activity for families to support counting skills at home. Note that many of the challenges involve measurement, so parents should have the measuring experience.

The activity can be done at a family meal and take experience. Otherwise, the family could create it during a home visit, or simply if the child/children activity if parents have an opportunity to play the game before they play it with their learner. It could also parent's confidence level.

Search for a partner and encourage their engagement in counting number experiences. Look at the Learning Moments and More Fun Things To Do slices shared on the printed pages of the - Family Activity Kit. This will make you families with what families are being encouraged to do and allow you to share positive engagement nudges. Distances for preparing this resource are shared there as well as the Counting Challenge - Family Activity Kit as an alternative encouragement setting with emphasis to families the importance of developing this skill.

Make time in a routine shared by families. It is important to actively acknowledge.

Professional Development

Explore the Menu for Building Family Partnerships to find basic ideas and good practices that effectively connect with families. This resource is shared as an enrichment tool to expand positive practices programs already have in place.

This book presents a menu for successful engagement suitable to early childhood care and education programs or beyond into kindergarten and elementary levels. Ideas are applicable for anyone looking to strengthen their work with families. A well-balanced parent and family engagement menu is essential for healthy parent-school partnerships. Use ideas that are shared to create a “menu” that will guide your program as you enrich relationships with families and support learning.

Bev Schumacher has been an educator for over 40 years. She has served as Parent Involvement Coordinator at a nationally recognized center, taught in the classroom, trained childcare professionals, authored articles and a book entitled “Menu For Building Family Partnerships”. Parenthood, volunteer services and consulting compliment her professional experiences.

Bev has presented across the country. She is a frequent presenter at state, regional and national conferences as well as for schools. Her desire to work in partnership with families created a career detour when she saw the needs for tools to connect with families and designed Learning Props®, Partnering with families requires good intentions, ideas, determination, effort, persistence and learning props.

See what our clients are saying:

"We do have multiple sets of the Learning Props games and I think that they are wonderful. The fact that everything is self-contained in a washable zipper bag is ingenious. I also love that all the resources to help with managing check out and return are included. We are using Learning Prop games as a Title III Family Engagement activity. During this time of COVID-19 challenges and concerns, being able to send the games home helps us to meet that requirement."

Kathleen Witte, Director of F.A.C.E. and EI's, at Quinlan ISD

"Our Parent Educators love these resources for home visits and parent group meetings to keep the children engaged with fun and meaningful experiences. We would love to recommend your products to all early childhood programs."

TN Parent As Teachers Coordinator

"Learning Props kits give families fun, portable, easy tools to get kids ready for school in a developmentally-appropriate way."

National Early Childhood Trainer and Consultant; Covington, Kentucky

"I love the self-storing design! The storage design is ingenious! I also like how it brings parents into the learning spectrum."

Classroom Educator, California

Your kits are very popular in the library. Many, many families have enjoyed hours of fun with them."

Librarian, Community Library; Slinger, Wisconsin

Comments from Reviewers from Learning[®] Magazine 15th Annual Teachers' ChoiceSM Award for the Classroom 2009 about Learning Props Learning Game Kits:

"I love the portability of the product. Since it is written in English and Spanish, this enables parents and older children to effectively use this product. The book that accompanies each set is an added bonus to support school readiness skills and language skills. I liked the home practice page for each game."

"I liked that both my English speaking and English learning students were able to play together. The games were challenging and inviting enough to hold the attention of second language children even if Spanish was not their native language. I used this in small group with my ESL students."

"I used the games in small groups with students from an older grade leading the game in each group. My students rotated from game to game and played with their big buddy. The kids were engaged the whole time and wanted to be sure they got a turn to play every game! I let them take turns taking the sets home for the night for review of concepts. They were so excited and couldn't wait for their turn to take a game home. I did not have any trouble receiving the games back."

"The games are fun and easy to play. They work on basic skills and are a great value!"
