Note that this trip can easily be combined with the WPSC Banff trip which happens the week preceding this trip.

Yes we planned it that way!

Jasper! We first went there in 2017 and found it to be a charming place with a very nice ski hill. Their primary season is Summer so winter is their quiet season. Jasper is a small town in the middle of Jasper National Park, In that respect it's similar to Banff. Other activities? There is a curling club, perhaps we can try that again? Dog sledding? A wildlife center? In 2017 a lot of us did the Malign Ice Canyon walk, that was awesome! Lots of possibilities.

Marmot Basin is the local ski area, a 40 minute shuttle away from town, much like Lake Louise is to Banff. They have 3000 vertical feet, starting at 5570' above sea level, which is the highest base elevation in Canada. They have 1720 acres which isn't huge, but have a look at that trail map! There's more than enough skiing there to keep us happy for a week. The knob chair, the highest chair on the mountain, is being extended upwards this summer, this will lift serve what was moderate hike-to terrain and allow easier hiking to the crazy stuff. The mix of terrain is friendly to all levels of skiers. We have 6 day lift tickets included, for the cost of a 5 day pass. Check it out:

Lodging We will be staying 6 nights at the Crimson Hotel which is in the town. This was recommended by our tour operator as a less expensive alternative to the Jasper park Lodge, which came in crazy expensive. Here's the web site: <https://www.banffjaspercollection.com/hotels/the-crimson/> A hot buffet breakfast is included.

The last night will be at the Wyndham Garden Edmonton Airport Hotel. Breakfast and airport shuttles are included.

How do we get there? So this is interesting! We will fly to Calgary on March 2, catch the bus there and drive to Banff to pick up people who will also be on the WPSC trip the week preceding this trip. Then we will drive up the Icefields Parkway to Jasper. This is a gorgeous drive and a huge summer attraction so it should be very nice. In the event that the road is closed, rare but possible, the Banff folks will take that trip's bus to Calgary, meet the Jasper bus, and we will take the boring roads to Jasper. This is a much longer drive, the upside being that if the road is closed the snow should be great!

There are more air options into Calgary so it should be easier to book early flights. DO NOT book your air yet as we have not yet set a bus departure time.

On the return, we will bus to Edmonton on Friday night after a day of skiing so that we can get early flights back home on Saturday.

Yes these are long bus rides to get to Jasper, that is the price to pay for a first class ski experience with uncrowded slopes.

AIR We do not have flights yet! The airlines have changed some policies so we need to be careful about this. The plan is to see how many people need flights from where and for one or both trips then see if we can get blocks of air to make it all work. It is usually much less expensive to drive to Toronto and fly direct from there so we will look at that as well as Pittsburgh and Cleveland. But until we know how many, there is not much point in asking for a block.
