Hi Jeff, thanks for the chat just now, this all looks great. I've made a couple very minor edits to the session description and have added contact information for our anticipated speakers. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks,
Amy

It was so nice to speak with you all last week about your presentation at the upcoming Arizona Court Leadership Conference (Tuesday October 10th 3:30 – 5:00 pm in Flagstaff). I'm following up with draft language for the session title and description. This language is important to describe the session and set expectations for our audience of judges and court leaders as they register for the conference. My team plans to open up next week. Please edit this draft language as you see fit, or simply give me the "thumbs up" to use it in our registration materials.

Session Title: Fortifying our future against threats both foreign and domestic

Session Description: Welcome to 2024, a future where the headlines are dominated by a turbulent national election and continuing global conflict, giving rise to frequent and reoccurring threats to the Arizona judicial branch. Experts from the United States Attorney's Office and the Federal Bureau of Investigation will discuss foreign malign influence campaigns, attempts to hack essential government data systems, election security, and threats against state-level officials, and will provide practical tips for anticipating, identifying, assessing, and fortifying against anticipated threats to our judiciary.

I'd also like to confirm the individuals who will be presenting this session and collect contact information so that my team can coordinate any necessary lodging or other travel logistics. As you can see, my information below is incomplete:
