

Christine Harris

March 27, 1955

Christine is best suited to work in an environment where her powers of analysis and attention to detail can be fully exercised. If she has formal education in addition to her natural abilities, she could be a scientist, doctor, lawyer, or in any profession that requires the application of analysis to facts and details. Even though she may not have extensive formal education, she has a natural curiosity about people and the facts of life. This interest causes her to continue learning from the information and details she encounters and she has the ability to sort it all out, organize it, and put it to good use.

She is careful and cautious in business matters and expects the people she works with to be just as critical as she is, concerning neatness and organization. She tends to judge others by the same criteria she uses on herself without considering the fact that her opinion of what is important or necessary can be different than what others think.

She friendly, easy-going sort of person but she is careful to follow proper social conduct. Christine has plenty of mental energy, sharp, quick, competitive. She is able to come up with ideas and plans on a broad scale with the drive necessary to back them up. She has strong passions but is able to control them and use them in a direct way, when necessary. She is a stimulating friend and loyal friend.

Christine is highly romantic and sometimes impressionable. Early love affairs are a learning experience. Her susceptibility and eagerness to please and be appreciated could lead her into less desirable relationships. Chances are with her pleasing personality and ability to quickly learn from past mistakes and the ability to maintain an optimistic look on life, she will probably end up finding the things that are important to her.

She has an innate ability to give a blend of the spiritual with the Practical in whatever project she chooses to undertake. This quality shows in her work and gives her expression great acceptance by the public.

Christine
Keeps us in stitches!!!