Predicting the Future

Lots of mystics and other spiritual guides post videos and articles on what may happen in the future. When you understand the nature of our reality you then realise how predicting the future is like predicting the height of each new wave in the sea. We may be able to guess the height, based on previous waves. We may use statistics to predict the expected height, based on past wave patterns of behaviour. We may use our instincts to 'feel' what we believe the height may be. But, whatever our guess, statistical prediction or instincts tell us, every now and then there will be a huge wave that we didn't expect!

Resonance Testing Helps us to Discover the Future

So, what brings us to writing an article about predicting the future if it seemingly cannot be predicted? We want to share with you how we have developed Resonance Testing to help us understand our future better, with limitations that we describe in this article.

The Nature of Reality

Once you gain insight into our reality it helps you to understand what it's possible to know about our future. First start by thinking of the universe as a collection of frequencies (waves). Even the apparently solid matter around is can be described by its frequency, thanks to the electron which can behave both as a particle (matter) and a wave (frequency), depending on whether it is observed or not. This is one of the fundamental bases of quantum physics, of which the double slit experiment is a helpful demonstration or you can watch this video interview of quantum physicist Carol Rovelli from 8 minutes 45.

Intention + Attention = Creation

Now, some of the frequencies in the universe are in the form of transverse waves (eg thoughts, emotions) and some are in the form of longitudinal waves (consciousness). What's fascinating is the discovery by Dan Winter that longitudinal waves are transformed from transverse waves when we hold a thought for a prolonged period of time or give a thought our loving attention. This is called intention and is the basis of most energy healings. Now where it gets interesting is Dan Winter's realisation that matter is actually created from the longitudinal waves (consciousness). Here is a video on Fractal physics where he goes into more depth about the physics of consciousness.

Transverse waves (thoughts, emotions) through intention or prolonged attention create longitudinal waves (consciousness) which create matter.

You Live in Your Very Own Quantum Reality

Now add into the mix that our reality is actually a quantum world, which means that what we experience is unique to us. So you see how the world we experience and live in is created by our very own intention and prolonged attention which is in turn comes about from the frequencies (thoughts, emotions) that we hold (our vibrational set point).

What Affects Your Quantum Reality

There are many factors that influence the frequencies we hold, not least the collective vibrational set point; the frequencies (thoughts, emotions) held by those around us. As you may have read in our earlier articles, the frequencies we hold - our vibrational set point - is an accumulation of the information and interactions in our current life time and also of our previous life times, spanning all dimensions. So without trying to over-complicate things, we wanted to show you that the world around you is affected by many things, which in turn affect our future.

The Nature of Your Future

First, let's remember that your future is yours alone as we live in a quantum world. So we can also say that your future is the reality that you have not yet created. This future can be in the next second, minute, hour, day, year or longer. So every moment of every day you are creating the reality that you then experience in the next moment.

What Affects Your Future Reality

As we have seen that reality is created as a result of your vibrational set point (your frequencies; your emotions, your thoughts). Also, as you have lived you have seen that your emotions and thoughts change in every moment. Now these changes don't necessarily affect your vibrational set point since most of us are evolving at a relatively slow pace. What we mean by this is that, our vibrational set point changes as we ascend, expand our consciousness and learn to integrate all discordant thoughts and emotions. This is not an instantaneous process for most of us and so typically, our vibrational set point remains fairly constant for days, weeks or even months or years.

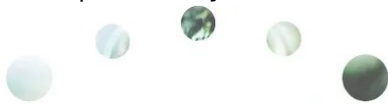

Your Future Reality Can Change in an Instant

This is also true for the collective vibrational set point which, for most of us, affects our own vibrational set point. However, during these times of the ascension, some of us are experiencing instant changes in our vibrational set point and, as a result, we are (often without realising) experiencing a completely different future.

You Have an Infinite Number of Future Potentialities

On this website, we refer to all the futures we may create as timelines or all potentialities. There are an infinite number of potential futures but the timeline you find yourself on will depend on your own vibrational set point.

How Your Vibrational Set Point Influences your Financial Future

Let's say for instance that you have, like many of us, entered into past life poverty contracts. These may mean that your current life experiences have never been filled with abundance or maybe you have experienced times of wealth but then lost it. These patterns can recur until we become aware of our own vibrational set point regarding abundance. Until we integrate the - often hidden - discordant frequencies we hold regarding lack of abundance such as I don't deserve money; I am unlucky; I am destined to be rich; money doesn't come easily to me, or any of these other really common feelings, then we will continue to experience timelines (realities) of limited abundance.

Limitations of Using Resonance Testing to Predict the Future

Now, the reason we have taken time to explain all of this is so that you can understand the factors that affect the future. We have seen that your vibrational set point can change in an instant and that your future experiences are dependent on this vibrational set point. We have seen that this may remain constant for years and then it may suddenly change as you experience ascension and integration, thereby affecting your future. Now you are aware of these limitations, we can show you how to use Resonance Testing to give you an insight into which future reality you are most likely to experience.

How to Use Resonance Testing to Predict the Future

The essence of using Resonance Testing to predict the future is that it cannot tell you definitively what will happen, but it can tell you the probability of an event occurring and also the probability that it will occur within a certain timeframe. The results are ALWAYS dependent on your current vibrational set point, so the moment your vibrational set point changes, is the moment that the probability and timeframe will change.

Empowering Yourself to Create The Future You Want

There is huge power in knowing this for it helps you realise just how much you are in charge of your future. Start by releasing all of the discordant frequencies from within, integrating them into your-self. Then create wonderful future experiences by realising the power of intention and loving attention with an open heart, in alignment with your soul.

Example: How to Use Resonance Testing to See if it Will Rain Tomorrow

This is a good one to start with since when you are learning this technique you can verify - at least to a certain extent - if you are on the right track by looking at the weather forecast after you have done your test. Then you can practice the technique every day and see how often you are getting accurate results simply by experiencing what happens to the weather. As always for Resonance Testing, you must always start from a completely neutral perspective with no expectations or hopes for the outcome.

You will need to set a location for the rain and a time. Let's say you set the location as where you live and the time for 2pm the next day. The statement is:

- There is a 90% probability that it rains in <my town, country> at 2pm on <tomorrow's date>.

Notice how the statement is in the present. This is because what will happen tomorrow has already happened in one timeline; you haven't yet experienced it yet.

You may repeat the statement, reducing the probability to 80%, 70%, 60%, 50%, 40%, 30%, 20%, 10%, 0% until you reach a positive result. In our experience we rarely get a 0% result or a 100% result. That means, if we get a 90% result we consider this a good enough indicator that it's fairly certain to rain and if we still get a negative result at 10% we consider this a good enough indicator that it probably won't rain!

Using Resonance Testing to Predict Any Event

Using this technique you can test for almost anything as long as you remain neutral, with absolutely no expectation of the outcome. The moment you have a 'gut feel' for what you believe the outcome will be, is the moment that your results will be inaccurate.

Resonance Test Results of Future Global Event Probabilities

Using this technique we have tested the probabilities of a few global event occurrences that are being discussed within the spiritual / truth community. Some of these Resonance Tests are ones that we have been conducting over many months and have observed that we have had the same results for weeks then suddenly the results shift overnight. This doesn't mean that the results are wrong, but simply that our vibrational set point has changed, which can often happen because the collective vibrational set point has changed.

Regular Repetition of Future Probability Resonance Tests

To avoid dependency on results that may change (getting fixated on the likelihood that a certain event is bound to happen because its probability of occurrence tests at greater than 90%), we advise that you repeat the tests daily, weekly or monthly. This practice leads to fascinating observations and helps you to gain better understanding of some of the announcements in the newspapers. It also removes fear and dependency on external sources of information. Finally you no longer need to rely on other people's opinions as to what they believe may be going to happen in the world; you can get the information directly from source.

Your Global Future May Not Be Our Global Future

We strongly recommend that, after reading this, you do your own tests and don't rely on our tests since we can only ever test our own quantum world - which although many aspects are shared - will have differences exactly because our vibrational set point is not the same as yours. Another way of putting it is this: Just because we may experience a tsunami that affects hundreds of thousands, doesn't mean that you will. Even apparently global phenomena such as the currency revaluation may have different styles of implementation for different nations or regions.
