STONE MOUNTAIN

1967-69

Stone Mountain, GA

STONE MOUNTAIN, located 15 miles east of Atlanta, is the largest exposed granite face in the world. The idea for a memorial to the Confederacy began in 1915 by the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Work began in 1923, and On January 19, 1924 (the birthday of General Lee), thousands of spectators were on hand for the unveiling of the Lee sculpture. Then the likeness of General "Stonewall" Jackson was carved. Disputes arose, the original carvings by the first sculptor were blasted off, and the memorial sat unfinished for decades.

In 1958 the state of Georgia bought STONE MOUNTAIN, and the carving was finally completed by 1972. Recognizing the need to attract tourists, golf courses, a railroad, an artificial lake with river boat, and a museum of automobiles were added.

The STONE MOUNTAIN moldset is UNnumbered from the Mold-A-Rama era, dating its creation generally to 1967-1969.

Georgia's Stone Mountain Park Site of 1996 Games

As a post-note, STONE MOUNTAIN was the site of cycling, tennis and archery events for the 1996 Summer OLYMPIC games.
