SB-35: AFFORDABLE HOUSING BILL FENCES OUT THE NEIGHBORS

Story by:
Howard Matthews

We all understand the need for affordable housing in any municipal area. Let's face it; if you aren't making at least six figures+ around here, you aren't going to be surviving very long unless affordable housing actually becomes, well... affordable.

The SB-35 Senate Bill introduced by Scott Wiener (D-SF) in 2016 and later signed into law by Governor Jerry Brown in 2017, was created to address the housing shortage that exists throughout California and to essentially "open up regulatory and financial resources for cities that need it the most." For those cities that don't, will be forced to accept the conditions within the bill, and there are many. California communities such as Huntington Beach have refused to accept the bill and is suing the state claiming that it "unconstitutionally interferes with the city's authority to enforce local zoning laws." They are not alone. However, the City of Los Altos lost their court battle

The proposed six-story mixed commercial/residential building on Bascom Ave. north of Dry Creek Rd. invades the privacy of long-time residents and homeowners, ruining backyard entertainment for some by permanently shading their in-ground pools from the warmth of the summer sun.

after refusing to accept an SB-35 proposal. Here at home lies a slightly different scenario with 'seemingly endless loopholes' according to some local residents. The affordable housing market fulfillment in San Jose and Campbell vary dramatically with SJ trailing far behind in the allocation and designation for more affordable places to live. Developers can now rush certain projects through a streamlined process with city planning depts and can get projects rolling faster by complying to some of the bills strengths. This reach-around backdoor approach in getting permits approved quickly is negatively affecting one local neighborhood in a big way. Long-time resident and homeowner Rita Williams is one of the many voices behind the 'Dry Creek Pruneyard Neighborhood Network' (DCPNN) that was recently formed by several key people to make a stand against a major developer who seems unwilling to cooperate in accepting any compromises and little concern about the livelihood of residents who's homes backup to the currently unimposing quiet commercial property. The fact that Rita found out about it merely by accident-of permits being applied for a multi-story building proposed against her neighbors backyards without so much as a mention- is well, (fill in your own adjective) messed up. This would be a major change to the landscape and it's impact on the adjacent properties and streets of the community seems a bit underhanded. Some developers will share their ideas and concepts bringing the community together; this leads to compromises from both parties; but also a contractor that will be welcomed back when another similar project arises. When a developer negatively impacts multiple residents way of life in a BAD way, it needs to be addressed and not ignored or a battle will ensue.

With ground floor retail and five stories of 130 units of housing, only 64 parking spaces will be required. This is due to the fact there just happens to be transit bus stop out in front of the proposed location! What? So, assuming all the families living in the complex will only have one car is a serious miscalculation when dad gets home from work potentially parking blocks

Campbell, CA – Live Music returns to downtown Campbell as the Campbell Museum Foundation and the SJG School of Music host a fall garden concert series in the Ainsley House Garden. The series has a lineup of talented musicians playing a variety of styles that will entertain, enliven, and engage everyone who attends. “We are so excited to have live music at the Ainsley House again and to welcome back talented musicians who made the Ainsley House Sunday concert series such a success in the past. Having this season’s concerts in the Ainsley House Garden means more people can enjoy the shows and feel comfortable being outside in the fresh air.” says Kerry Perkins the Ainsley House supervisor. Chris Shahin, who helps organize the musical acts for the concert series, chimes in “After this past difficult year during the pandemic, it will be a welcome relief to enjoy the simple pleasure of a fun afternoon of live music in the company of others.” The concerts will be outside in a garden setting, seating will be theater style, plan according to the weather. Tickets are $25/ person (includes 2 glasses or wine, sparkling non-alcoholic beverage, and light appetizers) and are on sale now at https://www.campbellmuseums.com/Concert_line_up:

I couldn't help notice there are a couple new liquor licenses posted in the windows on the west end of the street. One of them is the Campbell Brewery/Il Sogna. The license being displayed is a transfer from the previous owners and rumors are it will be getting remodeled soon; though there is no official word on exactly when it will begin. No word on if new owners will be making their own suds or not either. Only time will tell, but it will be nice to have other food and drink alternatives down at the west end. Many are frustrated by this “incentive” program recently announced by President Biden and don't think its very fair; had they just held out a bit longer to get the vaccine they could have earned themselves a C-note in the process.

Hopefully shows like this one (see below) that I was recently asked to be a part of, actually take place and

In 1970, volunteers are seen planting trees on San Tomas expressway before John D. Morgan park was developed on the left. Budd Ave is not really even noticed in this shot but actually runs left to right just beyond the photographer in the street. This is looking southeast and the 10 apartment buildings in the distance are along the southeast corner of Budd Ave. and are now barely visible. The apricot or plum tree you see in the center of the left picture is on the corner lot that eventually became the La Valencia Apts. It was one of the last corners to be developed on the street. The walnut tree on the far left is located on what would now be the berm that runs along the expressway and where the play area is currently being renovated by the local firm Bothman Construction Inc. who also did some of the renovations at the Community Center.

This August in Campbell we have fun family events in downtown! We've been enjoying the increase of traffic and having people gather together once again eating and strolling the shops. Stop for ice cream at the Campbell Creamery or sip some java at Orchard Valley Coffee. There are plenty of ways to enjoy our home-style downtown again. Lots of people are again doing the power lunch at places like La Pizzeria, Aqui, and Opa's. So it's getting busy once again, especially on the weekends with everyone enjoying the great food, drink and music. Campbell Ave. has a variety of experiences to enjoy or you can just sit on a bench and watch the strip come alive. You can choose your own level of comfort here, as restaurants and the like work their magic for you while staying within the ever-changing CDC guidelines.

Places like Darling Fischer will do a meet and greet out on their front lawn. There will also be a free Covid-19 vaccine booth on Sunday from 10am to 5pm.

Our Chamber has done an incredible job of supporting the businesses here in Campbell as well as keeping everyone safe as they continue to go above and beyond to help our community re-emerge to a new normal.

So come on down and stroll the avenue and enjoy the local music and food vendors August family fun! This is a great time to stay local and shop where every business has their life invested in the community. Browse and meet new friends and help all these hard working people in Campbell.

The 42nd Annual Boogie Music Festival is back! The Campbell Chamber of Commerce will host this annual event being held the weekend of August 21st and 22nd. The vendors are back in full and our downtown business owners will be happy to see you as well! Many will be on the street and out in front of their shops with tables of goods and some really special deals.

CAMPBELL KIWANIS

by Cynthia Cubino

Kiwanis Club of Campbell will hold our seventh in-person meeting of the year on Tuesday, Aug 3 @ 6:30pm (6pm if you want to join us for an optional dinner). I am happy to report that we have had a steady number of attendees (18 at almost every meeting).

Attendance has definitely grown since our last in-person meeting in March of 2020. How did we manage that? The consistent communication has certainly helped! Our members and guests receive an email approximately a week before our meeting and a reminder email the day before. They also receive a recap email that summarizes what happened during the meeting. As we grow in attendance, we also grow in membership because you tell a friend and they tell a friend and before you know it, they have attended three meetings and during their fourth visit as a guest, they decide to join our club! In addition to consistent communication, we've had featured speakers including Kerry Perkins, from the Campbell Historical Museum, Sharon McCray, Master Gardener and Josh Grosswirth from The Salvation Army. Also joining us at our meetings have been officers from Westmont High and Valley Christian Key Clubs, providing us with an update to what they have been up to. Campbell Kiwanis sponsors both high school key clubs and we are so proud of their enthusiasm and heart for service! What does this all lead up to? The opportunity to get a group of excited, service-minded volunteers to help come up with projects that will serve those in need, as well as fundraisers to benefit the children of our community! I am excited to see what the rest of the year will look like. The past 15 months have been challenging, but we remain a cohesive, passionate and growing club! Just the excitement of in-person gatherings have made such a difference.

I invite you to join us on the first and third Tuesday of every month. Prepare to socialize, enjoy a timely, relevant speaker, and get the latest on what is going on with our club, what happened since our last meeting and how we can make a difference in the lives of children and our community. AUGUST PROJECTS

Recently, our club is one of the leading clubs in the district to tackle a huge project.

Every few months, the Vista Center on Bascom Avenue will receive over 100,000 pairs of donated used eyeglasses from a large retailer in North America. These glasses need to be sorted, cleaned, verified and packaged to be shipped to Latin and South America for distribution to the needy through the Lions In Sight organization.

Many clubs in the district will be involved in this effort. I've personally been on 15 of these humanitarian trips and hope to go again once covid has been tamed in more countries.

The West San Jose-Campbell Lions is also helping the Campbell Chamber team for Relay For Life. In fact, over 75% of the funds raised for the team have been from our members, friends, and relatives.

August 25, our club will also be a hole sponsor at the annual Campbell Chamber of Commerce golf tournament at Cinnabar Hills.

Busy summer!

Tues Aug 3rd, back by popular demand, is Master Gardener, Sharon McCray! We will meet outdoors at Holder's Country Inn on Saratoga Ave in SJ at 6:30pm. If you want to join us for an optional dinner, please arrive by 6pm. Bring your friends, family and your curiosity and check out what Campbell Kiwanis is all about!

Los Gatos Art & Wine Festival Celebrates 25 years!

The Los Gatos Art & Wine Festival, "Fiesta de Artes", is an annual event that has taken place for almost 50 years. For the past 25 years, however, it has been entirely put on by the Kiwanis Club of Los Gatos. Providing a full weekend of entertainment is no small task, with local bands, local artists, & local wineries to round out the event. This year, after missing 2020 due to the pandemic, it will be back in full force! The Kiwanis Club of Los Gatos believes strongly in community, and it is apparent by looking at the music lineup: home-town favorites The Joint Chiefs Band and The Houserockers are the headliners. Wines being offered are from Los Gatos' Testarossa Winery and Saratoga's Cooper-Garrod Vineyards, as well as San Jose's J. Lohr. This year there will be a new 'Champagne Bar' that promises to add to the festivities. Since this year represents the 25 year anniversary, there will be lots of special prizes and fun leading up to it. Each week, for example, Kiwanis has a booth set up at the Los Gatos Thursday evening Promenade on Santa Cruz Ave, promoting the September event. "Everyone seems super excited that the Fiesta is coming back", said Sally Ingram, Kiwanis Los Gatos member who was helping out at the booth. They were also giving away $25 gift certificates from local businesses. On that Thursday (July 22) they gave away a $25 gift card to Grocer+Goddess, who were selling lobster rolls at the event.

ALL proceeds from this free, fun, community event go right back into the community: Toward youth programs such as Turn-Around Scholarships for graduating high schoolers who have overcome adversity; Youth Leadership Clubs (Key Club, Builders Club & K Kids); the annual Special Games at West Valley College (for Special Needs kids throughout Santa Clara County), the annual Hippiety Hop Egg Hunt at Oak Meadow Park, and more.

September 18-19, 10am-6pm. Los Gatos Civic Center Lawn, 110 E. Main Street, Los Gatos. For the entire music lineup and more, visit www.losgatosfiesta.com

Health Caregivers On The Front Line of Covid-19

By Jania Hopes Kingdom Hope Senior Services

Dealing with the unknown can be a scary thing. Honestly, the HealthCare industry didn't know what to expect from COVID-19. It was a rude awakening for us all. COVID-19 made a vicious entry in the homes of friends and families, which put the need for in-home Care 60/40. Families voiced their need for help but were afraid of letting anyone in. It became a high demand to have a Caregiver that would dedicate their service to one family. This is a request we work hard to fulfill for our Clients. The public fear was having a Caregiver exposed to other facilities and private homes. As a Home Care Provider, I understand their concern. I mean, anyone could be a carrier of the disease, who wants to take any chances?

The concerns were understood but it served a problem for many Caregivers. A lot of them thrive on having several Clients and or working for multiple agencies. For the Caregiver, it's ideal to have more than one Client as their income depends on it. Agencies had to provide competitive pay, just to keep quality Caregivers on their team. All because of fear and finances, Home Care Agencies found themselves barely holding on to faithful and reliable people. Other Agencies along with myself had to weigh the effect of sending off our most courageous Caregivers to the front line. We risked our people being trapped in quarantine because they were exposed. We are currently dealing with the lack of job retention in California.

For some agencies, a pool of consistent Caregivers is hard to come by. I found myself competing with stimulus and Unemployment checks. Many people made more money through the State and the government, then keeping their 9-5 job. Could we blame them?? No? So I did what any other business owner would do. I kept on building my team. I made my Care services available for those who still depended on our in-home support. I worked with families and came up with a plan that met their needs. We broke the barriers of fear and anxiety. It felt refreshing to provide a service that helped so many during a dark time. Yes, it caught us all off guard but I like to think, the fire just made us more refined. We will move forward. When the next wave of health challenges arrive at the door of our communities, no matter what it is, services like mine are here to help. I know there are mixed feelings about the current Covid-19 vaccines and if they may be right for you and your family. Whether you're healthy or have a list of medical conditions, I strongly recommend that you check with your doctor to discuss your options if you're not sure. Until we meet again, this is your neighbor and Home Care Provider serving you with a heart that cares.

Money Empowerment by Jill

As the summer months roll in and many community members go on vacation, Campbell's City Council took a one-session break from the regular council meeting schedule, meeting only once in July instead of the usual two meetings. Nonetheless, there have been many wonderful recent community events which Councilmembers attended, such as a ribbon cutting ceremony for Ben's Barketplace hosted by the Campbell Chamber of Commerce, the downtown Wine Walk, and the Chamber's monthly luncheon, lending some semblance of normalcy to activity in our small town.

At the same time, City staff has been hard at work preparing for a hybrid format for future City Council meetings. This entailed work from our talented IT team and other staff to test out systems to ensure digital communication from the Council chambers. The goal is for the Council and staff to be able to meet in person, but for interested community members to have the option to either join at the Council chambers in person or virtually online, as has been an option during the pandemic. The current virtual format has made it much easier for many to join and engage civically from the comfort of their homes, and I strongly believe that we should make it as easy as possible for anyone who wishes to join in to do so. I've been heartened to see staff proactively moving in this direction. That said, however, the exact date of the reopening of our Council chambers is uncertain as of publication. There are signs that even in communities with high vaccination rates, the Delta variant is raging, with new evidence that even vaccinated individuals can spread it without realizing (as they may be asymptomatic), suggesting that the Delta variant is highly transmissible compared to previous strains. While, as of this writing, the County has not issued new orders, this is changing by the day. I urge you to follow the County Health Department's updates closely, and encourage you to mask up when possible for the health and safety of the entire community. The Council did have one meeting in July where, among other items, we heard from the Civic Improvement Commission on their art proposals for the coming year. Vice Chair Davis Fields presented a summary, and Chair William Kaufman spoke as well, on the hard work that the entire Commission has been doing. The Commission's ideas include a mural program by local artists on both private and public property, a neighborhood and city monuments sign project, sidewalk art, and large-format art panels with "Stories of Solidarity." I appreciated all of the creativity shown by the commission and look forward to seeing the work they are able to highlight from local artists. Additionally, in both a study session and during the regular meeting, the Council heard an update on the Measure O library project and discussed feedback for the architects working on the project. All Councilmembers shared a strong desire to see the project succeed, and expressed the need for the budget to stay on track, discussing strategies to do so. I was excited for the vision that was shared, though it will still be subject to further changes and refinements.

I also took the opportunity to commend our City's staff for their excellent and prudent financial management of Measure O funds. At present, we are projected to save taxpayers about a million dollars in financing for the project due to favorable terms. Additionally, the City will be setting up in the near future a Measure O bond oversight committee for interested citizens to serve as watchdogs on the project and its financial stewardship.

Finally, I'd like to share that the City of Campbell has several current commission slots open. The City Clerk is currently accepting spots for the Planning Commission, Civic Improvement Commission, and the Historic Preservation Board, all of which play an important role in serving our community. If you're interested in joining or just learning more about the process, I invite you to reach out to our City Clerk by calling 408-866-2117 or emailing clerksoffice@campbellca.gov.

Are you thinking you're ready to buy a home?

The real estate market is hot hot hot! The market today well can be extremely frustrating for anybody trying to buy their first home. People are overbidding and driving the prices up like crazy, inventory is low and homes are selling in hours. Unusual time right now.

If you are in a financial position to be an active player in this game, that's awesome! But, if you are not, then it might be a good time to take a step back and get financially prepared first.

Here are some tips for preparing to buy a home.

Know your current financial picture.

Gather all of your income, expenses, debts, and savings numbers and get a very clear picture of where you are financially? What areas need improvement?

I recommend speaking with a mortgage lender for their opinion. They will let you know what to focus on in order to improve your buying power.

Do your research: Check out the homes currently for sale. What are the mortgage costs? Don't forget the other costs of home ownership. There is insurance, property tax, repairs, maintenance, and in some cases HOA fees.

How much money is required at signing. Ask a lender to outline all of the fees in addition to the down payment.

Make your plan Whether your focus is on reducing debt, increasing savings, or improving your overall cash flow, creating a budget is key. If the thought of a budget doesn't sit well with you, remind yourself why you are doing this. You want to buy a house! Put that goal everywhere and remind yourself often.

Stick with your plan, pay down that debt, save your money and when the real estate market cools down a bit, you will be ready to make some solid offers. Good Luck!

Outrun Lupus 5K Run/Walk is Back in Campbell for 2021! by Sarah Shaqir

Registration is OPEN for the 27th annual Outrun Lupus 5K Run/Walk, hosted by the Lupus Foundation of Northern California. We are excited to announce that our 27th Annual Outrun Lupus 5K Run / Walk will be a HYBRID event. This means you can join with your friends and family members in person at Campbell Park OR participate from anywhere and complete a 5K distance event or a distance of your choice.

For 2021, participants will enjoy a half day of fun starting with a race start led by this year's pet mascot winner, morning entertainment, a kids fun-zone, and more.

Help the Lupus Foundation of Northern California, in service for more than 40 years, raise funds to support families and people living with lupus—and awareness about this debilitating autoimmune disease that affects up to 1.5 Million Americans. Challenge yourself or enjoy a walk in the park, and don't forget to share your 5K experiences online to help advance education and knowledge in our communities about this chronic illness.

We can't wait to see you on Saturday, September 25th, back at Campbell Park, so mark your calendars, invite your friends and family members, or even start a fundraising team!

Loudest Concert in South Bay History

by Chris Jackson

I'm born and raised in San Jose, so I've been to a lot of concerts in these parts. The loudest? It's not Judas Priest or AC/DC. Try... U2 in San Jose! Forget Vertigo, they should write a song called Tinnitus! Most venues have ear protection (ear plugs) available at a booth or medical area, signed to filter out certain frequencies (like high pitches) while leaving the other less damaging frequencies. I've gotten so used to rolled up tissue paper (or napkin if necessary) that I find I enjoy the music more using my method, even though frequency removal isn't targeted. The

Willing to give tissue paper or other ear protection a try? Guns N' Roses is playing at SAP Center soon, and I hear Slash is looking for a challenge.

but at this U2 show, the ushers had them in the aisles. I remember thinking how odd that was. I soon realized why. After a couple songs, I ended up swapping out the supplied ear protection for my own: rolled up balls of tissue paper. I played guitar in bands for years and found that I needed something in my ears every gig or else I'd hear ringing in my ears after the show and even into the next day. I found that, in a pinch, tissue paper always prevented the ringing. Just make sure you don't roll up too small of a ball—the small ones can be hard to get out of your ears. The pro earplugs are deimportant thing is that you not be afraid to improvise with tissue paper—it's better than nothing. You can find some at every venue, and it stops the ringing in the ears. Even if you don't go to concerts, did you know you're still at risk for serious hearing loss if you wear headphones?

Proximity to the ear drums is what causes the most hearing damage, so using ear buds and headphones can be worse than concerts. Keep your headphone volume as low as possible. I wear headphones while

AUGUST...

The Dog days of Summer. Ever wonder where that phrase came from? Without looking it up, I think it pertains to all the "working like a dog" we do to keep our summer harvest bountiful during this hottest time of the season. Right now it is important to be vigilant in discouraging critters from feasting on the fruits of your labors. Critters are hungry but moreover, they are thirsty. Keep a bowl of fresh water out for them and it may deter some from destroying your fruit and veggies. There is nothing so heartbreaking in the garden other than to pick that perfect apple or peach to find a big bite already taken. I refrain from using bird netting as in my experience, it has harmed more birds and other wildlife than fruit it has preserved. If the invaders can't see what you are growing, they are less likely to find and eat it. I like to use something like frost protection cloth (aka AgriBond), which is readily available at most garden centers. While it isn't the prettiest garment your trees with wear this season, it will help protect your fruit. Tulle is fabric alternative available from fabric stores and is safer for wildlife. By now you probably have an abundance of tomatoes and peppers and the frost cloth will protect your crop from sunburn, which can be a real issue this time of year. Also, if your tomatoes show signs of blossom end rot, a dark discolored patch on the bottom of the fruit, it is usually an indication of a micronutrient deficiency, usually calcium. It will take a while to move up the plant so I suggest spraying any fertilizers directly on the plants, late in the day or first thing in the morning. Dry farming is a great way to reduce water consumption in your garden while improving the taste of late season tomatoes. This method is not new and once the gardener masters the process, the taste of your tomatoes will dramatically improve. Good winter rains will help create healthier soil and our incredible clay soil will help hold moisture in the ground. Once your established plants have set fruit, all the suckers are removed and the plants are well mulched, stop watering. As the fruits mature, the plant will limit the available moisture to the fruit and it will become heavier with tomato and light on water. Your plants may need to be staked at some point, but this is simple enough to do if you have not already done so. Tomato hornworms can be an issue this time of year. Those are the large green caterpillars feasting on your plants. Personally, I don't mind them: they prefer foliage to fruit and make a

MAKING EFFECTIVE DECISIONS ABOUT DIVORCE PART II

In the last issue of TCP, I talked about the importance of making good decisions when faced with the tragedy of divorce. I say tragedy because most people who have gone through it will agree that for the most part the process and the fallout is indeed tragic. Many problems that adults face today can be traced back to a traumatic event in their childhood, and that includes divorce. So, before I get deeper into the subject, let me share a little-known statistic; of divorced individuals who have not remarried within three years after the divorce, 70% are willing to give it another try with their former spouse. What that says to me is that maybe there are those getting divorced too soon, without trying everything possible to stay in the marriage. Give it your all before you divorce...it just might be worth the effort! In the beginning stages it is often impossible to talk with your spouse without getting emotional and angry. Try and find unbiased people in your life to help you through the process. Sometimes this means a mediator and/or counselor needs to be brought in. Yes, this will cost money, but substantially less than it would if you both hire lawyers. And, lawyers often suggest a mediator or counselor anyway, so it would be smart to see if you can work things out without the help of a lawyer. The more work you can do on your own, the more of your hard-earned money you can keep. Flexibility is the key here, so don't think you're giving in or giving up if you explore the possibility of looking at the big picture and making hard decisions that include modifying some of your previous ideas. In a divorce, there are no winners. Remember that. However, you do have a modicum of control over how "bad" things can get. It is best if both people choose to be adult about the process. This is not easy...but can be done! Think about this as the breaking up of a business partnership...another tough thing to go through. Approach this like a business transaction. Be mature about it. Look at all the facts and make your best effort at working out solutions that will be fair for everyone involved, especially if there are children in the picture. This is particularly hard because it will most likely require us to look at our contribution to the failure of the marriage and recognize our own mistakes or shortcomings. Trust me, this is the healthiest thing you can do at this point.

So, try and have a serious business discussion with your soon to be ex-spouse. Get someone else involved, if needed, to keep you on track. Outline your goals for how you want the process to go. Talk nicely to each other...this will be amazingly effective. Attempt to address each item from the other person's perspective. Have compassion. If you can use some of these tools to navigate the divorce process, you may just end up being in the 70% that I mentioned above! It is possible...I've seen it happen.

ON THE FLY...

BY JOHN MACCALMAN

Missed Connections – Rules of the Hub

Major airlines throughout the world run "hub and spoke" operations to provide the widest choice of destinations from your local through one connection. The theory is great but in practise the key word "connection" is the weakest link in the chain.

Despite the sophisticated computer systems employed by airlines to protect you from misconnects, Murphy's Laws of Hub Operation come into effect.

The distance between connecting gates is inversely proportional to the connection time.

The earlier your plane arrives, the longer you have to wait for a gate

In the interests of fuel economy, gates nearest the terminal building should only be used when all other gates are full, and they'll then use a tow tractor.

Jetways, the bridge linking the terminal to the aircraft door' only become inoperative on late arrivals with tight connections. Long lines only exist when you have to check bags. There are no lines when you've just got carry-on bags. If a connection can be held... it won't.

Flights are only cancelled when a late departure looks like endangering an on time record.

The clarity of messages broadcast over the airport PA is in inverse proportion to the importance of the message.

Through flights (same flight number for arrival and onward departure) must always have a change of equipment and aircraft type.

A highly sophisticated computerised study of passenger flow is constantly updated to plan gate assignments that ensure that the maximum number of passengers have to walk the longest possible distance to get their connecting flights.

So what happens when you miss your connection at the hub airport? If your connection is with the same airline they will book you on to the next available flight. However, if you happened to miss the last flight of the day, the chances of them providing you with accommodation overnight are slim to almost zero.

Your ticket is a contract between you and the airline to provide you with transportation between two points but it is issued subject to the Conditions of Carriage. If you ever want some interesting reading you'll find these conditions on most airlines websites.

You are very much in the hands of the airline's staff at the hub and the last thing they seem to want to do is to spend money on your overnight comfort.

Delays caused by weather are outside the airline's control, but delays caused by maintenance issues could be said to be within their control. However there is an understandable culture from the regulatory authorities who don't want airlines putting sick aircraft in the air to try and save them costs for accommodating delayed passengers so they can usually escape any obligations through their conditions of carriage.

A desire to create goodwill does still prevail, and sometimes that overnight hotel can appear especially if you are a high status frequent flier.

Celebrating Life, One Story at a Time

Books Inc. - At The Pruneyard By Anthony Ramirez – Store Manager

Summer is in full swing and Books Inc. is ecstatic to see our store filled with smiling faces! We are grateful for the continued support from the Campbell community, from teachers to families to avid-readers. One exciting activity that we are happy to bring back is story time! Join our wonderful bookseller, Robin, on Thursdays at 10 AM at the Pruneyard stage near the gorillas for a children's storytime! Open to all ages and full of fun and laughter, Robin is a master of her craft. Call our store or ask our staff for additional information about the Thursday Story Time with Robin! We hope to see you there. Our store is excited to welcome authors back into our space for events! In our front window, you can browse and explore books written by authors local to the Bay Area! Books Inc. is proud to celebrate and the work and achievements of these authors, and to promote authors who represent the authenticity and diversity of our town. Come down to the store and check out this display! Moving forward, our store will be hosting a variety of Meet & Greet Author events. Hosted on the sidewalk in front of our store, you can meet authors, learn about their books, and purchase a signed copy (and get a photo!). We are grateful for everyone who came to our Meet & Greet for local author and long-time newspaper columnist at Metro Silicon Valley, Gary Singh, in July. It was a wonderful time! Check out our website BooksInc.net for a calendar of upcoming events, as well as Zoom events that are open to all! Interested in chatting with other sci-fi lovers and expanding your bookshelf? Join our new bookclub, Other Worlds Book Club. Hosted by Books Inc. bookseller and Campbell mom, Michelle, this club will meet on the 3rd Thursday of the month at 7 PM in our store. The first meeting date is Thursday 19th, reading Ring Shout by P. Djèlí Clark. Call the store for additional details and tell your friends! As school for our Campbell students begins to approach, we are happy to help families, educators, and students look for great summer reading choices and prepare their classroom libraries. At the front of our store we have displays dedicated to American classics, perfect for students, as well as a school-themed display filled with children's books about going back-to-school! Looking for a book we don't have in-store? No problem! Let our booksellers know or place an order online. We will have your books ready to go before the 1st day of school! Our team of incredibly knowledgeable booksellers loves to give recommendations, catered to your specific book interests. Looking for a new book to dive into? Check out these staff favorites!

How The Word is Passed by Clint Smith: "Along with Caste by Isabel Wilkerson, this is a critical book to read, highlight, and read again. Its travelogue format, visiting plantations and cemeteries, combined with excellent scholarship, makes it readable even when it's excruciating." – Robin
 The Water Dancer by Ta-Nehisi Coates: "This novel is so well-written you can just imagine yourself living alongside the characters. The subject is the underground railroad with a little bit of magic thrown into the mix." –Michelle

A few years back a friend planted some Early Girl tomatoes in August and had a new crop of tomatoes for her Christmas dinner, so don't be afraid to plant something that has a short growing window, usually around 100 days to harvest. Campbell Area Chapter 5151

One of the unique services that our Chapter has provided for years is our Troop Support Program. We mail C.A.R.E. packages to active military personnel serving overseas. We send these packages as a token of our appreciation of their service. Items sent include: personal care items, reading materials, handheld games and a variety of snacks. I have a printed suggestion list of these items and would be happy to mail one if you're interested. Simply email your name and phone number to Nancy Whitney at thecampbellpress@gmail.com and she will forward on to me. The thank you acknowledgements we receive from the troops are always very touching. Several years ago we were honored by a soldier whom we had been sending our packages to during his long deployments in Afghanistan. He sent us a full sized U.S. flag which had flown over a Special Operations Compound in support of military service. To this day it is the flag

we salute at the beginning of our monthly General meetings. This soldier also sent us a beautiful plaque commemorating Operation Enduring Freedom January 2014. The plaque is proudly displayed on our Troop Support table at our monthly meetings. Angie Jaggars

Campbell's Hidden Gem: Travieso Winery

Nancy O. Whitney

There is a winery hidden in the Cristich industrial area of Campbell off of Curtner Avenue. A place where two friends share a similar vision of winemaking. They wanted to make a wine that they enjoyed, not necessarily just a popular one with the current trends. With no graphing, filtration or racking there is no manipulation of the wine. Most wineries have that process and Ray and Mats said they selfishly wanted to be making wine they would like to drink. As years went on, the process they chose became very popular with friends and family and was then opened up to the public. It shows all these years later with a Wine Tasting Room that is open on Saturdays from 11 am to 5 pm. A Wine Club was also born with over half of the membership being from Campbell having social events Wine Tasting and Wine Club dinners often. To join is easy and a great deal with only one case a wine a year and lots of good people to share it with with great and unique social events. Most clubs make you buy monthly or pay fees. Here they care about you. The challenge was to have a way of making wines without owning a vineyard. Also they wanted to keep their day jobs. They have another trait in common and are branded with a bad boy philosophy, enjoy sharing the stories that helped them label themselves and that includes the artist friend that designed the labels. Ask them to tell you about the When Pigs Fly Story! Mats Hagstrom M.D. and Ray Sliter, a marine geophysicist, started making wine in 1999. They both are bike riders and share the love of good and have very interesting paths that lead them to own a winery. Mats Showed up at Ray's house with a 1/2 ton of grapes and a used barrel from Etude. The grapes were from a patient of Mats. They made wine in Ray's living room and in 2000 included a full barrel of Sirah from Watts Vineyard in Lodi. In 2003 they began a search for custom grape opportunities and after a long long hard search found a small warehouse winery in Campbell. They shared it with another urban winery and in 2005 it became bonded as Travieso Winery. The philosophy for their winemaking is to keep tight control over the grapes in the vineyard by buying by the acre. Maintaining a close working relationship with the grower is key. They harvest physiologically ripe fruit, early or late depending on conditions. Use minimal sulite, usually an addition during crush. Then allow fermentations to take with wild yeast with times ranging from 7-18 days letting the must rest for an additional skin contact before pressing it into 20-50 % new French Oak Barrels. The standard aging regimen is 24 months and some wine has been kept for 36 months barrel aging program.

Travieso is a place full of life and good vibes. So many people gather on Saturdays to see friends that become family and enjoy the wine tasting Saturdays or belong to the sassy wine clubs. They all want to drink great wines at the quiet spot at the end building in the back of an industrial area at 166 Cristich Lane Campbell CA 95008. The wine labels are designed by Jody Brookens -a ski instructor and starving artist and another bad boy that makes the designs match the wine with a unique look to them. The theme is based around a holiday time of year Halloween with a focus on the representations of Day of the Dead seen in each label with it's own story behind it. www.traviesowinery.com or more information and learn about the Wine Club. If ordering wines, get a 15% discount if you mention this article or ad. Drop by their wine tasting room on Saturday from 11am to 5pm.

ilies, the California Dream, and the perils of unchecked ambition.” –Sid
An American Sunrise by Joy Harjo: “Joy Harjo, the first Native American poet laureate, is a master of her craft. You cannot help but feel moved and transformed reading her work, filled with complex storytelling about family, spiritual and cultural values, and rich tribal memory. This is a staple for poetry lovers and a perfect choice for those venturing into the genre!” – Lauren C.
