The same rights of privacy apply to individuals who are proven to lack capacity. Therefore, staff should do the following:

- Establish any previously expressed views or wishes of the individual regarding privacy from family and others
- Resident behaviours should be observed to identify what the preferences may be for that individual wishing to have privacy
- Continue to follow the core principles and practices as detailed within this policy, if deemed to be in the best interests of the Resident to do so (in accordance with the Mental Capacity Act) when weighing up privacy and refer to associated policies and procedures for further guidance

6. Definitions

6.1 Privacy

- In literal terms, privacy is defined as a state in which one is not observed or disturbed by other people or the state of being free from public attention

For the purposes of health and social care, privacy is very personal and means different things to different people. Therefore, in order to respect people, privacy services need to be personalised as much as possible

6.2 Care Certificate

- The Care Certificate identifies a set of standards that social care and health workers follow. It describes the minimum standards that should be covered as part of the induction and training of new care workers

6.3 Human Rights

- Human rights are the basic rights and freedoms that belong to every person in the world, from birth until death. They apply regardless of where you are from, what you believe or how you choose to live your life. They can never be taken away, although they can sometimes be restricted; for example, if a person breaks the law, or in the interests of national security
- These basic rights are based on values like dignity, fairness, equality, respect and independence. But human rights are not just abstract concepts, they are defined and protected by law. In Britain our human rights are protected by the Human Rights Act 1998
