Siblings in Christ of Triune,

Jesus’ resurrection was an incredible moment. It transformed our lives, our world and eternity. And no one saw it.

The story we read in the Gospels every Easter tells us of the women’s arrival at the tomb on Easter at sunrise, where they find Jesus is risen. His resurrection happened sometime during the night. The women were witnesses—they saw Jesus and talked with him, so they had proof. But they weren’t witnesses to his resurrection—no one was. Everyone missed it. Because no one was there. Because no one was looking.

We, on the other hand, know Easter is coming. I’m sure you won’t miss it. At the least, stores and advertisements will make sure we are all very aware. Still, even though we won’t miss the date—or the opportunity to buy chocolate bunnies and jelly beans—we might still miss Jesus and what his resurrection means for us. Especially if we aren’t looking.

Looking is both a discipline and a skill. It’s something we can do intentionally and something we can get better at if we practice. That’s true of all kinds of looking, including looking for Jesus. One way to get better at this is to observe other things and look for him in them. Spring is the perfect time for that.

As the new life of spring erupts all around us, may it help us see the new life Christ’s resurrection brings to our world and our lives.

The Monday Discussion Group

We will resume our discussions of Disappointment with God.

New participants are always welcome!

Blessed are all who fear the Lord, who walk in his ways. You will eat the fruit of your labor;
blessings and prosperity will be yours.

Psalm 128:1-2
