Oklahoma City Bombing

Truth among casualties, buried under mountain of lies

By William Cooper
Exclusive - CAJI News Service

The Albert Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City collapsed into a pile of rubble and torn bodies after explosions ripped its supports from the foundation at approximately 9:02 am, Wednesday, April 19, 1995, the second anniversary of the Waco massacre. Timothy McVeigh, a Gulf War veteran has been arrested and charged with the crime. James and Terry Nichols, brothers, have been arrested and charged with conspiracy to build explosive devices at James' farm in Michigan. McVeigh and Terry Nichols were army buddies. Casualties as of May 5th stand at 164 dead. Fifteen of them children. Seventeen remain unidentified. The total number of injured is in excess of 400. There are still 2 adults unaccounted for and it is feared that they will never be found. Assistant Firechief Hansen has announced that the clean-up of the bomb site is officially over. Rescuers wept silently at the announcement. The reason for the bombing is still unknown.

Use of the term "heartland" to describe Oklahoma is right on the mark. Oklahomans are American to the core. They are deeply religious, avid gun owners, believe in a strict moral code, and have provided more than their fair share of cannon fodder for the nation's wars. They are, for the most part, honest and hard-working people from pioneer stock. Many live on land their grandparents staked out in the great Oklahoma land rush. These people are extremely loyal to their state and to their country. Oklahomans knew all along where we were headed, and true to form, they tried to stop the march toward globalism. These traits may have sealed Oklahoma's fate on March 28, 1994 when the Oklahoma State Legislature passed a resolution which struck out at Clintons socialist world government agenda. They were the first and maybe the only state to pass such legislation.

Resolution No. 1047, "A Resolution relating to United States military forces and the United Nations; memorializing Congress to cease certain activities concerning the United Nations; and directing distribution."

erty of United States citizens and to defend out nation against insurrection or foreign invasion; and

WHEREAS, the United States is an independent sovereign nation and not a tributary of the United Nations; and

WHEREAS, there is no popular support for the establishment of a "new world order" or world sovereignty of any kind either under the United Nations or under any world body in any form of global government; and

WHEREAS, global government would mean the destruction of our Constitution and corruption of the spirit of the Declaration of Independence, our freedom, and our way of life.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE 2ND SESSION OF THE 44TH OKLAHOMA LEGISLATURE:

THAT the United States Congress is hereby memorialized to:

1. Cease the appropriation of United States funds for any military activity not authorized by Congress;
2. Cease engagement in any military activity under the authority of the United Nations or any world body;
3. Cease the rendering of aid to any activity or engagement under the jurisdiction of the United Nations or any world body; and
4. Cease any support for the establishment of a "new world order" or to any form of global government.

THAT the United States congress is hereby memorialized to refrain from taking any further steps toward the economic or political merger of the United States into a world body or any form of world government.

Clinton on '60 Minutes' Does he know the truth?

President Clinton was interviewed on the CBS program, '60 Minutes', on April 23, 1995. The nation sat, stunned, as he related his version of the opening events in Waco, Texas that led 51 days later to the infamous "Waco Massacre". After the smoke had cleared close to 90 people, mostly women and children, and 4 government agents lay dead. The truth of what happened is well documented by investigators and researchers and is contained in the record of the trial of the surviving members of the Branch Davidian Church. Does someone in this administration think we are stupid? Did Clinton lie on '60 Minutes'? Or has someone lied to the President?

Leslie Stahl: What I kept hearing from the militia men there, and I gather this is true among all these so-called "patriots", is the Waco incident. It seems to be their battle cry, it's their cause. They say that the feds went into a religious compound to take people's guns away. They say no federal official was ever punished; no one was ever brought to trial. I'm just wondering if you have any second thoughts about the way that raid was carried out?

Clinton: (raves) Let me remind you what happened at Waco and before that raid was carried out. Before that raid was carried out, those people murdered a bunch of innocent law-enforcement officials who worked for the federal government. Before there was any raid, there were dead federal law-enforcement officials on the ground. And when that raid occurred, it was the people who ran their "cult compound" at Waco who murdered their own children. Not the federal officials. They made the decision to destroy all those children that were there. And I think that to make those people heroes after what they did — killing our innocent federal officials and then killing their own children — is evidence of what is wrong... I cannot believe that any serious, patriotic American can believe that the conduct of those people at Waco justifies the kind of outrageous behavior we've seen here in Oklahoma City, or the kind of inflammatory rhetoric that we're hearing all across the country today. It's wrong.

We know what happened at Waco. President Clinton apparently does not. Either someone has lied to him, or he is lying to us. This conduct must stop and it must stop now. The American people want those responsible for the persecution and murder of the men, women, and children of the Branch Davidian Church arrested, tried, convicted, and properly punished. We will not ever forget and we will not ever rest until this is accomplished. This issue will not be ignored.

The Truth About Militias

By William Cooper and Betty Schier
CAJI News Service

Words have meaning. There is a process which we may use to determine the specific meaning of Militia both in the language and under the Law. The 1971 edition of The Compact Edition of the Oxford English Dictionary defines:

Militia - 1. A system of military discipline, organization, and tactics; manner of conducting warfare; the arts of war. 2. The control and administration of the military and naval forces of a country. 3. A military force, esp. the body of soldiers in the service of a sovereign or a state; in later use employed in more restricted sense to denote a "citizen army" or "citizens army" as distinguished from a body of mercenaries or professional soldiers. 4. U.S. "The whole body of men declared by law amenable to military service, without enlistment, whether armed and drilled or not"

Militia - To call out as militia

Militiaman - A member of a militia force.

Blacks Law Dictionary further defines these terms. Bear in mind that words have meaning. Under the law the words may not mean what you think. Also you will note in the following definition that the Militia is not subordinate to the state or any other body. The body of citizens, in fact, constitute the body of authority to which the Militia answers.

Militia - The body of citizens in a state, enrolled for discipline as a military force, but not engaged in actual service except in emergencies, as distinguished from regular troops or a standing army. State v. Dawson, 272 N.C. 535, 159 S.E.2d 1,9

Militiaman - Comprehends every temporary citizen-soldier who in time of war or emergency enters active military service of the country. Critchlow v. Monson, 102 Utah 378 131 P.2d 794, 798

The first U.S. document in law is "The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America". It sets out the reasons and justifications for our separation from England and the Revolutionary War that followed. The document places the decision and the power in the hands of the people, and was clearly meant to be enforced by the Militia, a citizens army. That army, the Continental Army of the Republic won our Independence. The Declaration of Independence clearly states:

That whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.

But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.

It becomes much clearer. Our Founding Fathers discussed the meaning and purpose of the Militia frequently. I suggest you read the whole of the Federalist Papers, No. 24 through 34. You will find a complete argument for the Militia as a "citizens army" consisting of "the whole of the people," designed to allay the public fears of a despotic central government. The following statements, among many others, may be found:

"If the representatives of the people betray their constituents, there is then no resource left but in the exertion of that original right of self-defense which is paramount to all positive forms of government." - Federalist Papers, No. 28, Section 8.

"It may safely be received as an axiom in our political system, that the state governments will, in all possible contingencies, afford complete security against the invasions of public liberty by the national authority." - Federalist Papers, No. 28, Section 8.

Media's attack on Patriots Necessary as Part of Globalist Plan

In a World Federalist pamphlet, News Reporter Walter Cronkite (CFR) writes, "As the 50th anniversary of the United Nations approaches, a great opportunity has opened for the realization of dreams of the U.N.'s founders. The [World Federalist's] Campaign for Global Change is bringing together citizens organizations all across the world in an international call to create a new United Nations—a U.N. capable of meeting the challenges not of 1945, but of 1995." Changes include: "Permanent U.N. peacekeeping forces capable of responding quickly to ruptures of the peace. A permanent international Criminal Court capable of bringing international law-breakers to justice... For decades, the World Federalist Association has led the effort to create a system of world governance capable of ensuring peace, justice and promoting a fifteen year plan for transforming the U.N. into a democratic world federation."

[EDITOR: The U.N.'s founders included 43 current or future members of the CFR, Council on Foreign Relations. A leader of the U.S. delegation and the Secretary-General of the U.N.'s founding conference in 1945 was future CFR member and secret communist Alger Hiss.]

The Constitution for the United States of America is the Supreme Law of the land. It recognizes the Militia as an already existing force outside the control of the federal government but allows for the Congress to call forth the Militia for only three very specific occurrences. The Militia cannot be called up to perform any other acts outside of the three specifically stated in the Constitution. The Militia cannot be called upon to do anything unconstitutional, illegal, or unlawful. Indeed, the commanders must refuse any unconstitutional, illegal, or unlawful order. The Constitution for the United States of America states in Article 1, Section 8:

To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions;

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the Militia, and for governing such Part of them as may be employed in the Service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively, the Appointment of the Officers, and the Authority of training the Militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress;

Still fearful of an oppressive central government, the states rejected the Constitution. They finally agreed to adopt the instrument, but only after penning further safeguards; to protect the individual and the several states, 10 amendments were added which came to be known as the Bill of Rights. The Preamble of these amendments and Article 2 are of particular note:

Preamble - The conventions of a number of the States having at the time of their adopting the Constitution, expressed a desire, in order to prevent misconstruction or abuse of its powers, that further declaratory and restrictive clauses should be added: And as extending the ground of public confidence in the Government, will best insure the beneficent ends of its institution.

Article II - A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

Because freedom, yours and mine, is ultimately dependent upon the rights guaranteed by all these words, all with specific meaning, it is imperative that we understand the meaning. A militia is an armed citizenry which, according to the American Heritage Dictionary, "is not a part of the regular armed forces but is on call for service in an emergency." The Federalist Paper #13, "On the Militia," referred to in the Second Amendment, is "the armed citizenry." It is the right of the "people," not the right of any government entity, which is protected.

"The security of a free state," clearly presupposes that the state (the citizenry) is free, and needs to secure that freedom by defending the Constitution of the United States - the guarantor of that freedom - against all enemies, foreign and domestic," the oath I took twice, when I entered the Air Force, then the Navy.

"Enemies foreign" obviously refers to entities or governments not of our country. "Enemies domestic" can only refer to an entity or government of our country, i.e. a government which would choose to make itself an enemy of the people by depriving its citizens of their Constitutionally protected natural rights. This is called tyranny. The primary

CONGRATULATIONS on Veritas, a fine newspaper covering nothing but the Truth. I was especially intrigued by your open letter, which gave a great deal of insight not only into your background, but also the tremendous challenges you have endured. Thank you so much for sending me a copy.

Veritas is "smashing" to say the least. Finally a periodical that reflects the ideal of a truly "free" press. I'm already looking forward to the second issue.

Charles J. Thomas
Avoca, Pennsylvania

I am enclosing a check for $50.00 as per our conversation regarding the Veritas subscription. If you can, please save the second issue for us! Unfortunately, we missed the first one. We are very anxious to see the paper! Our local Star and Citizen are a disgrace. They are only good for coupons, building a fire or wrapping garbage.

My husband and I listen to the radio show ("The Hour of the Time") every night. We have listened to others, but your show is the only one we like, with the exception of a 15 minute show which comes on later.

We truly admire your courage and determination to do what is right. In my opinion, there is no other path to take, even though it will always be the harder path. Don't give up...none of you...my husband and I aren't going to and others feel the same.

We are sick about all the evil going on. We have known for a long time that things were going downhill. However, we are strong believers in standing by our principles and values.

We are so mad about the states convening to discuss a proposal for an amendment to the Constitution which would allow them to destroy it! How and why was this ever allowed in the first place? And to meet on the 50th anniversary of the United Nations? Not only do they slap us in the face once...they have to slap us twice.

They should all be deported immediately to a Communist country so they can be with their comrades. And the rest of these idiots should be deported too. None of them deserve to live here.

Anyway, this proposal must be stopped! If you have any information regarding it, we would appreciate it. Although I imagine it will be discussed in your paper.

We are preparing to move to the country. Wish we were already there. Perhaps, someday, we will have the privilege of meeting all of you.

The second issue arrived to me Friday and I ate it in one bite. I am, however, still voraciously hungry for more and I may even begin to drool before the next issue arrives. Your efforts, all of you there, are appreciated greatly. If the paper continues to grow as it has from number one to number two, plus two pages each issue, nobody there will have time for food or sleep just to keep up.

I know that you are sure to be in the "sweet equity" phase of start-up and that your time is of more value than money right now. Knowing that, I will close with a wish for you all that your health remain vigorous and well during the crunch, your efforts are well worth the subscription price and probably more, and I thank you for your commitment to the truth.

All my best wishes for you all.

I would like to address the "world view" editorial. Frankly, I wasn't very impressed with it at all. I hate to be too harsh, but it seemed to read like any typical "Republican", "conservative", or plain misinformed source. I know some of it was written sort of tongue-in-cheek, but some of it just doesn't make sense.

I don't subscribe to the thinking that Russia is in "shambles", is "dangerous" to the U.S. and other crap. Just like I never subscribed to the "Cold War".

Give me a break! It is obvious that it's all a planned game. The object of the game being to make the sheople think and behave in a desired way. You, especially, Bill know these games. That's why I know the piece was just to make people think and was written somewhat tongue-in-cheek.

But some things are just suspicious and say the least, like terrorism. Maybe people are just confusing the terms, and don't know the difference between terrorism and guerrilla warfare. I don't "believe" in terrorism to a great extent. Meaning that there is absolutely NOTHING to stop a squad of about 6-12 Islamic "extremists" to march into Manhattan in the afternoon rush hour armed with a Glock 17 9mm's with 2-3 fully loaded 30-round magazines of jacketed hollow-point rounds each and produce the need for over 1000 "casualties".

That's why I don't "believe" in terrorism, because such things don't happen. I don't think anyone can insult our intelligence by saying the above scenario is not feasible.

Just like you were saying about the quality of life in Russia. I know a few dozen first generation Russians who actively do business, such as import-export. You are absolutely correct, things are VOLATILE there in terms of markets and such. But the country is not in "shambles". There are tons of opportunities there, along with the accompanying corruption and organized crime, but these things are typical and expected.

My point is that I believe now, as I have always believed, there is an ORDER that is behind it all and that drives this apparent confusion. I believed and saw this even before brave men of integrity, such as yourself, documented and brought it to light. And I still see this hidden force pulling the strings of all these supposed enemies (Russia, Islamic countries, S. Africa, U.S., N. Korea, etc.).

So, this is more of a follow-up than a critique it seems. I hope I presented my views in a way that is somehow understandable. If not, I would like the opportunity to do so. Also, let me mention that I was born in Iran, and that I very much have a finger on the pulse of Islamic thought, even though I don't follow that faith. In addition, if you care, the proper pronunciation of Iran is (ee-raun).

Before I forget (again), I've received both issues of Veritas. They are great, uplifting, and the best newspaper I've ever received. I'm even making copies to give to some of my friends (so maybe they'll want to subscribe). Anyway, keep up the good work Bill, watch your back, and God Bless.

Dear Mr. Apante,
Greetings on your new newspaper, I wish you success. I have a couple of questions. On the front page was a picture with the caption, "Abandoned farm from the Great Depression Era, along Highway 54, 'The Yellow Brick Road', in Kansas." A friend and I tried to understand the placement of the picture and couldn't. It didn't fit with Mr. Cooper's story, Lese-Majeste that we could tell. We got further with the caption. In the MKULTRA, MONARCH and MIND CONTROL PROGRAMMING (BRANDWASHING) the Wizard of Oz ("The Yellow Brick Road") story and theme is used to trigger Mind Control victims to do the things they are programmed to do. Of the many, many victims who have given information on this, O'Brien describes this very well and in detail. Is that what this picture is about? If not could you please explain the meaning of the picture AND the caption. Truly, we are puzzled.

My other question regards the initials of the Constitution Party, CP. I'm not sure if you are aware but CP in the USA (and probably all around the world) refers to the Communist Party AND HAS REFERRED TO THEM SINCE THE BEGINNING. I think it is terribly confusing and will become progressively more confusing in the minds of the public as the Constitution Party gains strength. Please note that the Communist Party claims to be recruiting people left and right, at a greater rate than ever before (see AZ Republic Newspaper 3-27-95) I wish you the best of success.

Ed,
Thank you for your letter. It is good to know that nonsubscribers are reading and responding to Veritas.

The front page picture in question does relate to the article Lese-Majeste. The creation of a privately owned central bank, the Federal Reserve Bank, stole real wealth from the people and the nation through foreclosures and controlled inflation and depressions. The picture of the abandoned house depicts the American tragedy, the death of the American dream, the destruction of a nation from within.

You made an interesting point regarding the initials "CP". Of the Constitution Party. The Constitution Party is usually depicted with the coiled snake, the caption "Don't Tread on Me" and the initials "CP". To the best of my knowledge, active and alert people have identified the initials "CP" as The Constitution Party.

I just finished reading issue #2 of Veritas... excellent job! Please sign me up for six months so I may continue to educate/terrify/nere sheep to subscribe. Also, I want to thank you for "The Hour of the Time" broadcast and your mission to "seek the truth"... thanks to you this sheep was sheared but escaped the slaughter!

Editorial

Either I am free or I am not. Which is it? Who decides?

Did my life change when I wasn't looking? Did it change BECAUSE I wasn't looking?

I sat up for a long time last night, very late, just thinking. Sitting in silence and thinking. Since Wednesday morning, the air has been full of radio broadcasts, the sounds of the scanner, the endlessly repetitive television reporting, all intruding simultaneously, 24 hours-a-day, while the phone rang at least five times an hour...

And last night, when the rest of the household was finally asleep, I got up and just sat. This was the first quiet, contemplative time I've had since the day of the explosion, and an awful lot has happened in a very short span of time.

I thought a lot about security and what that really means in terms of living a lifestyle of freedom. I thought a lot about the presence of, and freedom from, fear and how those two opposites seem to motivate everything.

In the lateness of the hour, floating through those odd perspectives of intense fatigue, my mind wandered to a time when I rode my bicycle to grade school and didn't have to have a bike lock; or walked alone to the recreational center in a city park to play; or finger-painted beautifully colorful and glopky works of art in my front yard without being near a window where my mother could keep a constant eye on me. I knew every kid on the block, and my parents knew their parents.

All of the grown-ups stewed about the dandelions growing in their front lawns, and did mortal combat against them all summer long. Neighborhood cook-outs were frequent. The ladies played bridge on Thursday afternoons, and for a while a community Garden Club was organized until everyone's interest in azaleas died down—as did the plants.

For the kids, the outdoors were exhilarating, not dangerous. The neighbors were kindly, not perverse. The weapons of our childhood wars were sticks and acorns and dust bombs. A walk down a new street was exciting, not frightening. And even though we all knew well never to take candy from strangers, I don't recall a stranger ever offering me any.

And naturally everybody went to a church of one kind or another, prayed, believed something specifically spiritual, and taught the same to their children. The code of morality taught in the prevalent religions of the day provided the structure on which we hung our freedom, and the Golden Rule was always taught as a maxim in the public schools.

It seemed like all was well. At least, we thought it was. This was my life. City life. Not supremely sophisticated, but far from being rural or small town setting. And now, somehow...I can't remember specifically when it happened...when things began to get strange. Did I change? Was it just me? I remember distinctly that time of typical adolescent rebellion, of trying to find my own wings, and feeling hopelessly weighed down by a long list of standards and expectations and social rules and practices that I considered insufferably stupid and point-less. Well...all of my friends did, too. It seemed to go with the times. That mutual teenage commiseration went a long way toward breaking the molds and cutting the proverbial ties that bind. But I never meant to be completely cut from my roots. Did I ever really know what those roots were? Did anyone ever tell me or teach me? We took liberty for granted because it never occurred to us that it could be taken away.

How in the world did any of us survive the late '60s, the '70s, the '80s, an unfriendly years of "peace and love"? Where are those old friends now? Some of them have died. Some of them ended up in jail (and rightfully so). Some of them found safe, tranquil havens in catatonic insanity where they have great enduring quietness and undisturbed inner sleep. We abused our liberty because we did not understand that there is an essential balance between responsible freedom and flagrant license. For some, that excess was fatal.

I remain. Me and mine. Who were those people? And why I should suddenly feel like a stranger to everything that has ever happened? What is it that has occurred here? I don't often think about any of those people any more. None of that stuff seems to matter these days. An old song pushes its way uninvited into my thoughts: "...don't look back, you can never look back..." It makes me shudder. There is no real pleasure or comfort in remembering because, whether good or bad, it's all gone now. I know it didn't happen in one disastrous day, but it feels like it did.

No more is there a friendly, warming sensation like a brandy-laced toddy on a cold day to accompany a pleasing hour of reminiscence. There is no leaning back with a satisfied sigh, eyes scanning an imaginary horizon as if I could see it all again just by looking and wishing it so. I don't want to see any of it anymore ever again. Times have changed. We don't LIVE in America—we just grin and bear it.

This can't be right. It ISN'T right. All I know now is how I don't want my life to be, and what I don't want to do, and how I don't want things to turn out. And I get so tired of my own human frailty...I grow so overwhelmingly weary of the evil of this world...

OK. So life sucks. DEAL with it. I can't decide if I am wallowing in self-pity, self-made and directed, or REALLY feeling something. I'm just kind of numb. Feelings are such nebulous things, and come and go with nothing more than a change of thinking. But I don't know WHAT to think anymore. Nothing is what it looks like; seeming good is evil disguised; men rise up to lead; those following are blind to their masters; good intentions are pressured and pleased into wicked works; a handsome coat of cloth in the dignity of veracity becomes a death sentence to the man who accepts it.

It is possible to always know with a certainty what "real life" is these days? Whatever it is, it's NOTHING like I

SYMBOLOLOGY

The Obelisk, Caduceus and Sun God Evolution

© Jack Shepher
Veritas

This column is for the education of the readers of Veritas. The intent is to expose the occult meanings of the symbols around us. Veritas, the Editors, and Jack Shepher, do not subscribe to these beliefs.

Note: symbolism is all around us, in our church, homes, TV, music, government, etc., and it is a language that you must study repeatedly to understand. Therefore I recommend you read each article at least once on three consecutive days and each day you will see more and save each article for future reference.

Obelisks, as ancient historian Pliny (about 50 A.D.) observed, are sacred to the sun. This is similar to all such upright ancient structures such as the pyramids, a word from the Greek "pyr", meaning fire, as with a pyre or funeral fire (or a pyromaniac or pyrography). From obelisk, we get the symbol of light, in Latin "lux", on the name Luke (or Lukes). These obelisks, the symbol of the sun's light ray, all have a small four-sided pyramid on the top called the pyramidion which symbolizes the fiery head or end of the phallus. Many early obelisk forms are found in northern Europe. These monoliths are clearly and simply giant male phalli. This form is found in many ancient cities of the Roman Empire. They are everywhere, as all upright structures in architecture are indicative of the phallus, or index-finger denoting the "Fire", the aspiring fire, against the inclination of gravity, which was the first vitalized idea, or IDOL, worshipped magically and philosophically, the godlike godhead power. The many weathercocks, steeples or other spiral forms are signs of the ancient transformation of the oldest phallic religions through a revolution or evolution of religions. The phallic spire at the base, and the weathercock called "abraxas", a name coined by Basilides, the Egyptian Gnostic, was at the top. From early Egypt, religion turned upward to the sun, the rooster is the bringer of the sun and in ancient mythology, he is pictured riding a chariot with four white horses and carrying a large gold shield. The shield reflects the rising sun's light onto the moon which is the female symbol in our sky.

The caduceus shows this transformation from a purely ancient phallic worship to a more evolved sun (and moon) worship. The center rod is the penis. There are two serpents rotating around the center rod. On the left, the dark serpent rotates 3 1/2 times counter-clockwise and is the female, or lower joining testicle (yes, do look and check, after this see "Gray's Anatomy", 1974 edition p. 1015, in print). On the right side, the white serpent rotates 3 1/2 times clockwise and is the male, or the higher testicle. The top of the caduceus shows a golden sun disc on white wings of purity.

The list of these evolved sun (son) gods started with Osiris, "The Sun of Life", "Adonis", "God Supreme", "Narajan", "Holy Living Son of God", Saint Basil was "Every uncommonly good man" was called "the Son of God"; Thor of the Scandinavians was "the first-born Son of God"; Mithra and Buddha were "Savior and Wisdom of God"; For the Gauls or Druids in the west, there was Hesus "the Son of God" (to name evolved from Hesus, also "Sun of God"). In the east was Christna "the Son of God" in Hindu India. Many hundreds of years later there was Jesus Christ "the new-born Son of God". There are many sons of God, Saviors that lived between Osiris and Hesus-Christna and Jesus Christ. Both Christna and the much later Christ were called "the true light and Son of God".

A list regarding the striking analogies of the ancient Indian Christna "Son of God" and the much later Christian "Son of God":

- 1) The advent of each savior was foretold by the prophets
- 2) Both came for the necessity of atoning for the sins of the world.
- 3) Both were sent in the form of a man.
- 4) Each is shown as the second person of the trinity (there are hundreds of different trinities in mythology).
- 5) Both were incarnated and born of a woman - a both Virgin of immaculate conception.
- 6) Both mothers, "Mary" and "Maia" were pious women.
- 7) Both mother's names, like the Hebrew "mem", mean water. Just as the name on all old world maps for ocean is "mar" (Latin) or "mer" (French).
- 8) Each had an adopted earthly father who was a copy center, but God was their real father.
- 9) Both were of royal descent and had rejoicing of earth and heaven at birth.
- 10) Both were born in a cave or barn on Dec. 25th, and were visited by three wise men from the east that had followed a guiding star.
- 11) Both were warned by an angel of impending danger from an incumbent ruler. All male babies were killed while both infant saviors escaped.
- 12) Both wanted to save all, and were called

The end of the article posed the following questions: "If all of the above is true, then what are you? And what are you doing?" In this article, the citations will be explained for their legal meaning and weight, and the questions posed will be answered.

The meaning of the citations noted above is simply that in the tax laws, the original legal definition of a natural person, flesh and blood human being, participating as a citizen in a State of the Union whose creator-endowed, unalienable rights are protected from infringement by the government in the Constitution for the United States of America and the Bill of Rights, has been changed to what is now called a "nonresident alien" to the federal government of the District of Columbia and its territories and possessions. This is the general, well agreed explanation of the citations noted, boiling it down to a level that can generally be understood.

Over the years, along with the legal definition of the everyday individual, the structure of the legal system and the structure of the government have also been altered. Taken together, the 14th Article in Amendment of the Constitution for the United States of America, the national state of emergency declared in 1933, the legal results of the 1938 decision in the case Eric Railroad Co. v. Tompkins, the Buck Act, and the use of a social security number as defined in Title 26 USC, Chapter 79, Section 7701(c)(4)(1) and Title 26 USC, Subtitle F, Chapter 61B, Section 6109, are all the tip of the iceberg of a process that has combined to coerce the individual natural person into "voluntary compliance" with a new jurisdiction and form of citizenship that was created, and that was born out of application of Article I, Section 8, Paragraphs 17-18 of the Constitution.

So, if you live on land not owned by the federal or state government in one of the 50 States of the Union, then you are technically, by way of the title codes, statute laws and regulations regarding taxes - a nonresident alien individual. That's the answer to the question about what you are, and that's where you start looking in the tax laws.

Then, by the provision of common law where individuals hold unalienable rights to unlimited contract, protected by Article I, Section 10, Paragraph 1 of the Constitution, "most individuals have contracted themselves into this jurisdiction, with their social security number being their identifying number. By doing so, they have traded in their creator-endowed unalienable rights for government issued and defined "civil rights," and have placed themselves in contractual relationship with the Internal Revenue Service, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and dozens of other such agencies and instrumentalities who are linked by a spider web of contractual obligations, most, if not all, of those organizations created by Acts of Congress. That's the answer to the question about what you are doing, and your solution is known as "personal sovereignty."

So then, in reading and understanding the tax laws, and in coordination with a program of personal sovereignty, one must proceed to look for provisions for the nonresident alien, and when one does this, the understanding of the reality of the change in legal definition becomes clearer. However, in your research, one of the areas in which you should avoid getting trapped is Title 26 USC, Subtitle A, Chapter 3A, Section 1441. Please note the contents of Section 1441(e) ("This is again symbology in action).

Oklahoma City Bombing

- ◆ That copies of this resolution be distributed to the Clerk of the United States House of Representatives, the Secretary of the United States Senate, and to each member of the Oklahoma Congressional Delegation.
- ◆ Adopted by the House of Representatives on the 28th day of March, 1994.

The resolution passed by the Oklahoma State Legislature had the support of all the citizens of Oklahoma. It was a slap in the face to the Clinton administration and all those who promote the Socialist Internationale. Those murdered at Ruby Creek and Waco cried out for justice. Americans echoed those cries. Everyone knew that something was terribly wrong. A police state was emerging before our eyes. Militias were forming. The Democrats suffered the worst defeat in their history at the polls in November. The hidden agenda of the communist/socialist Internationale was being exposed to the public through talk radio and a thriving underground autobahn of information.

This story really began on February 26, 1993 when the World Trade Center was bombed in New York City. I had predicted terrorists would detonate a bomb in New York City since 1989. It is on record, on video tape, and in my book. I predicted that it would be blamed upon Islamic fundamentalists but that the real perpetrators would be the U.S. Intelligence Community and specifically the Central Intelligence Agency. I did not know or venture to guess the target.

Those arrested were linked directly to the CIA and the FBI was implicated in the bombing. The perpetrators used two megabombs carried in a yellow Ryder rental van. The bombs exploded in the parking garage of the World Trade Center, prematurely, before being properly placed. The result was substantial damage. Five people were killed and over 1,000 were wounded. If the bombs had been placed in position next to the main structural supports the result would have been exactly what we see in Oklahoma City only much worse.

Fragments of the yellow van were quickly found in the rubble. A paper trail traced the vehicle to an outlet in New Jersey where it was rented four days before the explosion. "A lucky breakthrough" led federal agents to arrest a suspect, 26 year old Mohammed Salameh, at the Jersey City rental agency at which he attempted to reclaim a $400 deposit on the van.

In a surprise revelation Tony Lang, a staff columnist for 'The Cincinnati Enquirer' (Gannett chain) in Cincinnati, Ohio, has uncovered court documents to support direct involvement of the FBI in the World Trade Center bombing. The papers, filed in May, disclose that a government informer, an employee of the FBI, accompanied the accused bomber, Mohammed Salameh, to a New Jersey apartment they used as a bomb factory - and proceeded to INSTRUCT Salameh in how to drive the famous van two days before the explosion!

In another surprise development, reported by Louis Beam in the 'Jubilee', tapes made secretly by an FBI informant to support direct involvement of the FBI in the World Trade Center bombing. The tapes, filed in May, disclose that a government informer, an employee of the FBI, accompanied the accused bomber, Mohammed Salameh, to a New Jersey apartment they used as a bomb factory - and proceeded to INSTRUCT Salameh in how to drive the famous van two days before the explosion!

The tapes which have been published by the New York Times reveal that Salem warned his FBI bosses that the World Trade Center was soon to be bombed and urged them to prevent it. Speculation is now rampant in political circles that certain factions within the government may have desired the bombing in order to speed passage of new "anti-crime legislation". This suspicion was further fueled by the startling revelation that the FBI denied Salem's request to use phony explosives in the bomb he was helping to build under FBI supervision - the bomb ultimately used in the World Trade Center explosion.

Former Watergate associate prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste warned that these tapes pose "an absolute nightmare for federal prosecutors." One high-ranking law enforcement officer who insisted on secrecy said that in less than a year's time the FBI has been linked to criminal abuse of power and the mishandling of cases in three different instances. "First we had Weaver, where an HRT member shot a mother with a baby in her arms, then Waco, where mishandling led to the deaths of a hun-

In a Free Country We Cannot Be Our "Brothers' Keepers"

Saturday Evening Post, January 1960

A common fallacy about man's duty to man was repeated recently by a prominent layman at a religious conference. As an expression of our social responsibilities he suggested, "We are our brother's keepers."

Although this interpretation of a scriptural sentence is widely accepted, it is without foundation in ethics and can lead to more quarrels than benefits. It derives from a misreading of the passage in the fourth chapter of Genesis about the murder of Abel by his brother Cain. When the two brothers were in a field, Cain rose up against Abel and slew him. Afterward the Lord said to Cain, "Where is Abel thy brother?" Not having the benefit of our modern enlightenment, he did not take the Fifth Amendment. He simply told a lie, "I know not." And then he countered with an evasive question, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

This was altogether irrelevant. The Lord was not demanding that he be his brother's keeper, but only that he shouldn't be his brother's murderer.

In our bill of responsibilities, the first is not, as urged by sociological bodies, that we shall be our brother's keepers, standing watch over them and poking our noses into their private concerns. The first responsibility is that we shall not shed their blood or do any other wrong against our fellow men.

If all the world's people were our brothers, and we were our brother's keepers, they would be also our keepers. We would be among the kept. In the slave societies of totalitarianism, from the Baltic Sea to the sad coasts of Siberia and China, everybody is required to be his brother's keeper - to maintain a sharp watch on him and to blow the whistle the minute he deviates from the obedient line of conduct which a way of life for America is not advocated by well-meaning people who tell us that our duty is to be our brothers' keepers. Generous as they are in spirit, they have failed to draw clear distinctions between proper help and perpetual meddling. We have a duty to help the sick, the incapacitated, the very weak. But what our neighbors in general need is a large amount of being let alone.

This year that meetings were held among federal law enforcement agencies for the purpose of planning a move against the militia in April. Most ignored these rumors. On February 18th spoke at a Constitution Party rally in Ferndale, Michigan. A federal agent in the audience held his badge and identification up to the crowd stating clearly that the federal government had held meetings among several agencies for the purpose of making an all out assault against patriots and the militias in April. His statement was videotaped and is on record. I verified his credentials. Such an attack would be political suicide unless some great tragedy turned the public against the militias.

It was shortly after Michigan that we obtained a copy of the "Omnibus Counter Terrorism Act of 1995" introduced on February 10th by Joe Biden in the Senate (S-390) and Charles Schumer in the House (HR-896). I remembered the random shooting that always occurred just before anti-gun legislation came up for a vote. I predicted a wave of terrorism directed against the United States would begin in the near future. I had already made this prediction in my book "Behold a Pale Horse" and during many lectures. It is all recorded. I knew this would happen if all other attempts to destroy patriotism and disarm the American people failed. I stated in the book that patriots would be labeled terrorists.

A warning was contained in a memo issued by the U.S. Marshals Service on March 15th. The memo expressed fear that "the terrorist attacks would be designed to attract worldwide press attention to an Islamic religious vendetta through the mass murder of innocent victims." The warning stated that Middle Eastern terrorists were planning to launch suicide attacks against federal courthouses and government installations throughout the United States. The memo was sent to federal facilities nationwide. Authorities reviewed the security at Oklahoma City's Alfred P. Murrah federal building, nothing was changed, and one guard was left to patrol a four-building complex. Representative James Saxton (R), a senior member of the House Task Force on Terrorism, said his group had alerted law enforcement and intelligence personnel on February 27th that there was an increased threat of terrorism.

Another rumor flew through the grapevine. This one alleged that the federal government would make an all out attack upon patriots and the militias on March 24th and 25th. The rumor they still don't know the difference. Rumors began circulating in January

HEALTH AND NUTRITION

The Basics of Minerals and Your Health

By Ann Heusted, R.N.
Veritas

"And the Lord formed man of the dust of the ground." This is the account of the creation of man as given in the Holy Bible. Whatever you believe about the origin of man, you must realize that your body is comprised of the same minerals that are in the soil of the earth. Your physical body needs a constant source of minerals to replenish the minerals it uses each day. Your body will be missing some vital building blocks for good health if the minerals aren't in the food you eat.

Ann Heusted, R.N.

Minerals are the fundamental building blocks of all the earth, and life on the planet is made from the atoms of these minerals. Minerals are naturally occurring elements. Rock formations are made up of mineral salts. As rock and stone are broken down into tiny fragments these form the basis of soil which are crystals of mineral salts. Besides the tiny crystals of mineral salts, the soil is teeming with microbes that utilize them and make minerals easy for plants to assimilate. The minerals are then passed from the soil to plants, which are then eaten by you.

What happens once a mineral salt is eaten? Once a mineral is absorbed by the digestive system, it must be carried by the blood to the cells and then transported across the cell membrane in a form that can be utilized by the cell. After the mineral enters the body, it must compete with other minerals for absorption; therefore, minerals should always be taken in balanced amounts. For example, too much zinc can deplete the body of copper and an excessive calcium intake can affect magnesium absorption. As you obtain these minerals from your food, your organs (brain, heart, sexual organs, etc.) are replenished each day with the minerals they need to do their work.

Now, think about how organs and body tissues begin to degenerate as the ratios of incoming minerals get out of balance. Mineral deficiencies in your food. Visualize the breakdown occurring in some organs of the body. According to the mineral assimilation, the deterioration may be worse in certain organs than in others.

The brain is the most important organ because it coordinates all functions of the body. It is essential that the brain receives the proper amounts of oxygen and potassium. Brain function is impaired if these are not available. Some foods that are brimming with potassium are bananas, oranges, tomatoes, cabbage, celery, carrots, grapefruit, apples and beans. Your heart works harder than any other organ. It has special needs and requires two important trace elements; iodine and arsenic.

Seafood, such as kelp powder, haddock, cod, halibut, herring, mackerel, sardines, bluefish and sea bass are good sources of iodine. Eating a serving of asparagus each week can give you the amount of arsenic that your heart needs to function well.

The health of the next generation is dependent on the optimum functioning of the reproductive organs. For peak performance, the reproductive organs require a proper amount of phosphate of manganese. This is the element of life. Without it, the glands cannot be maintained at a high level of wellness. If these minerals are in adequate supply in your food, then you will have healthy organs. Phosphate of manganese is usually available in seeds such as sunflower seeds, pumpkin seeds, peas, beans, corn and pomegranates.

It is best to obtain the minerals you need from food. Much of our food is lacking in minerals because the soil has been drained of nutrients. This is due to continuous plantings and the use of commercial synthetic fertilizers. If the minerals are not in the soil, they won't be in the foods that are planted in it. Synthetic fertilizers usually only provide nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium. These elements have the largest impact on plant growth. With continuous use of commercial fertilizers, which replaced only three elements, the soil becomes depleted of other minerals which are important for good nutrition.

These mineral poor foods are taken to a factory for processing. To add insult to injury, commercial practices necessitate the picking of fruits while they are green, before they have been nutritionally fully developed. Processing and refining foods inevitably removes most of the remaining minerals. For example, when wheat grain is refined to make white wheat flour for baking of bread, approximately 100 nutrients are removed from the wheat. The wheat grain arrives at the factory ever thought it would be.

I walked through the Target store early this morning, developing "shopper's stare" from the sensory overload, brilliantly executed by highly paid marketing strategists. While pushing my little red cart between housewares and sporting goods, the undesired thought came: This could be the last second of life.

Is THIS what it all boils down to?

Will I now, in every place, at all times, WONDER... "Am I going to be killed today by my government?"

And to what extremes will that go?... if not for me, for others? What will it take to make all persons live in perpetual fear for their lives at all times? Only in the absolute and total absence of personal privacy or in the depths of mental illness could a person be ever and always afraid. I know that those conditions could be manufactured, either way, by the powers that hate self-reliance and freedom of will.

But I don't have a death fear. It's not the END of life that is fearsome. It's the getting there that bothers me.

Mortality is a given. Life begins. Life ends. Contemplating the end of life is a matter of individual spiritual belief. But what are the conditions in between the beginning and end? If mortality is a given, what then is "security"? Under that premise, security has little to do with fear of death—the fear of being put to death—in much the same way that real peace has little to do with the mere absence of conflict.

Should I "feel safe" that I have plenty of groceries in the cupboard, even though the ingredients in some of those foods might contribute to the onset of degenerative illness?

Should I "feel safe" on the day that I finally have ten thousand honestly-earned dollars in the bank, if the moment I withdraw them I could be unjustly accused of handling drug profits?

Should I "feel safe" studying scripture, praying in my home, or teaching my child why I hold certain beliefs, when doing so has become a definition of "child abuse"?

Should I "feel safe" loving my country when demonstrative patriotism has become a recognized mental illness?

Should I "feel safe" knowing that my government will guarantee me freedom from death by terrorism, when, in exchange, I paid for that empty impossible promise with every other freedom I ever had?

Is that what security is? Is that what people are clamoring for? Is that what they really want? Do they know what they are asking?

A "guarantee of security" simply does not exist in the world of practical, senses reality. It cannot be legislated by government. It cannot even be mandated by a dictator. It cannot be promised, contracted, or reliably delivered by anyone to anyone else at any time. I will have security to the extent that I take the responsibility to make sure that I do. And it is not necessary to tread on the toes of anyone else while bearing that responsibility.

To believe that I will be secure if I just give up a little privacy, or give up the right to private property, or give up my sovereignty, or give up my gun is almost a form of idolatry.

The leaders of my country are saying to me: "Ye shall not surely die." It's the same lie, the same deception, the same trickery that has ever been. There really IS nothing new under the sun. They promise to be my sufficiency if I will only blindly worship and accept that they are so wise and know so much better than I how my needs of life should be met. How can they know? Are we not all individuals, different and beautifully unique in one another, with talents and qualities, and personalities of every conceivable combination? Are we not wonderfully and awesomely made?

There is a strange and painful void in my chest that is just as real and tangible as it would be if my heart had been physically ripped out in mid-beat. I have seen with my eyes the final breath and heard with my ears the death rattle of all that ever made this life joyous and satisfying. I don't think I'll ever hurt like this again, no matter what comes. And if there are any regrets, it would be only that I didn't really know or understand what it was that made life an exquisite expression of individuality until just before it was too late.

Have I been a deluded idealist? A foolish dreamer rushing after some fantastical impression of a kind of self-determinism that exists only in books? If that is the case, then I am no more deluded and no more guilty than those who commit unspeakable acts of violence and terrorism in the name of utopian world peace.

No, I cannot change.

It's not a matter of being too old, or of being too set in my ways, or of being inflexible and unable to handle the alterations of life brought about by advancing technology. It is nothing more than simply refusing to renounce the old-fashioned idea that some things that are just RIGHT, and some things are just WRONG, and then living my life in Japan - Shoko Asahara, founder of the Aum Shinrikyo (Aum Supreme Truth) Buddhist group that has been accused of a nerve gas bombing in a Tokyo subway, stated in his book Disaster Approaches the Land of the Rising Sun, published this year, that the United States is ruled by Freemasons. Washington - President Clinton asked Congress on Saturday to protect a short list of key legislation from the welter of ideas being generated by the Republican majority on Capitol Hill.

Clinton said he assigned the highest priority to welfare reform, targeted tax cuts and a crime bill that preserves the assault-style weapons ban.

First, Clinton said, he wants a welfare-reform plan that avoids "proposals that punish children for their parents' mistakes."

Tax reductions must be targeted to the middle class, be fully paid for by spending cuts and include the highest priority to welfare reform, targeted tax cuts and a crime bill that preserves the assault-style weapons ban.

"The third thing I want to be to build on last year's crime bill, not tear it down," Clinton said. And he said that he is open to proposals for tougher penalties, but that "they must not be a cover for cutting back our commitment for 100,000 new police officers on the street or for repealing the assault weapons ban."

Semovodsk, Russia - In the secessionist Chechen republic of Samashki, a Red Cross official said he had seen 20 dead civilians, and quoted residents saying Russian troops killed 200 people in an assault April 8-9. According to refugees, Russian troops had thrown grenades into homes and gunned down elderly men. Akkha Alpatova, 32, said her father and aunt were killed by a grenade hurled by troops when taking cover in their cellar.

Washington - Rep. Robert Torricelli (D-9th Dist.) charged last month that a Guatemala army colonel on the CIA payroll ordered the killing of an American inkeeper in 1990 and the murder of a CIA contractor, the latter married to an American in 1992. Torricelli is on the House Intelligence Committee which has oversight of the CIA and U.S. intelligence operations and has access to top secret information. House Speaker Newt Gingrich called on Torricelli to resign from the panel, calling his disclosures about the CIA activities "totally unacceptable." Torricelli has defended the disclosures, "There is no national security question involved here. The only reason to keep this information secret is to protect the CIA from embarrassment or legal exposure." He added, "I have no regrets. There is no obligation of members of Congress to conceal criminal activity by the U.S. government." The acting CIA Director William O. Studeman later acknowledged serious errors in the controversial murder cases committed by the agency. The acting CIA director told the Senate Intelligence Committee that the CIA failed to inform Congress of information regarding the Guatemala officer who was on the CIA payroll.

Washington - "The door swings in two directions. You've got this Frankenstein-type weapon on one hand, and it can deal with problems of the human condition on the other," said Kyle Olson, Chemical and Biological Arms Control Institute. According to defense officials and scientific analysts, future battles may be waged using genetically engineered organisms, such as rats, with minds controlled by computer chips fused with living brain cells. This scenario may become possible within the next 15 years using the research conducted at the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington. The research grows live neurons on computer chips, said William Tolles, the retired retired associate director of research at the N.R.L. "Once this technology is proved, you could control a living species," Tolles said.

Tobayhanna, PA - U.S. Army Capt. Howard Blomberg will be presenting a plan to schools in the Pocono Mountain region for soldiers to supplement existing school staffs. If the Army's plan succeeds, men and women in camouflage fatigues may become tutors, substitute teachers, chaperones, assistant coaches and gun safety instructors. The principal of Stroudsburg High School, Bridget Kelly, welcomed the help from the Army.

The Pentagon sees a future with "non-lethal" warfare. Numerous weapons are being developed by the Defense Department. Such programs include a weapon that fills a room with soap suds, incapacitating foam that hardens on contact like taffy, and a riot gun that fires tiny bean bags to stun the target. At the Los Alamos National Laboratory, laser rifles have been tested which blind human combatants and optical sensors. High-energy acoustic and electromagnetic pulse weapons that deliver an impact similar to being hit with a baseball bat; deafening noise generators; and sedative drugs that can be sprayed on a battlefield are also potential weapons. Also being developed is the use of embrittling agents, microbes and super-charged acids that accelerate metal fatigue, as well as various methods of introducing computer viruses.

The existence of "weapons systems that operate on the power of the human mind and whose lethal capacity has already been demonstrated," was claimed by Dr. John Alexander, head of special technologies at Los Alamos in an article for US Military Review in 1980.

Lahore, Pakistan - Swarms of police armed with assault rifles rushed over a court when charges were dismissed against a 14-year-old Christian boy who was sentenced to hang. The boy, Salam Mash and Rehmat Mash, his uncle, were convicted of writing anti-Islamic graffiti on the wall of an Islamic Mosque, a crime that carries a mandatory death penalty in Pakistan. Outside the court, hundreds of Muslims railed against the decision. Traffic signals were destroyed and some tried to blockade the road. A few vowed to kill the defendants, judges and lawyers in the case.

San Francisco - In a landmark decision, a judge ruled that survivors of eight people killed in an office attack can sue the manufacturer of the weapons used in the attack. On July 1, 1993, Gian Luigi Ferri strode into a towering office building at California and Market streets armed with three guns - two of them semiautomatics - and hundreds of rounds of ammunition.

Superior Court Judge James Warren ruled last Monday that Navagar Inc., the Florida manufacturer of two TEC-DC9 semiautomatic pistols that Ferri carried, could be negligent and liable if it had made and promoted a gun that the company could have anticipated would be used for a massacre.

London - There is growing evidence that Barings bank may have violated Britain's banking rules when it moved $1.3 billion to Singapore. The transfer was made in the two weeks before the bank's crash. It also appears that Barings was aware of trader Nick Leeson's risky dealings, ignored warnings of a possible disaster and may have deluded the Bank of England.

Prize Waterhouse accountants in Singapore said $890 million was transferred from Barings' London head office to Leeson's futures trading. A special account in the Cayman Islands, a Caribbean tax haven, was opened to cover dealings Leeson was involved with in the

The words "suicide bomb" are often used to describe portable explosive charges. Retired Sgt. Joe R. Garner, a veteran of the Army's elite Special Forces, claims that he was among nuclear "suicide bombs" 35 years ago. He says he was trained to set detonators and timers on SADM's (Special Atomic Demolition Munition). The SADM weighed about 45 pounds and was about 18 inches long and a foot wide. In 1960, while at Ft. Bragg, N.C., he volunteered to strap a SADM on his back and perform a parachute jump to illustrate how these explosive could be delivered by paratroopers.

Garner says that in 1974, he participated in a Special Forces training exercise and placed a SADM on a North Carolina hydroelectric dam. "We wanted to prove that American targets were vulnerable to enemy sabotage," he says. "I was a piece of cake."

Less than half indicated that they had achieved their cost-cutting projections by restructuring. Only 7 percent of the executives believed that corporate restructuring would decrease in the future.

... you're likely to get a vote next year on whether to scrap the Internal Revenue Service and the system it enforces.

That's because Congress and presidential candidates in 1996 almost certainly will trigger a serious debate about whether the current variable tax rate should go.

The leading candidate to replace it is a single tax rate with generous exemptions and limited or no deductions. Another alternative under consideration would stop taxing income entirely and substitute a national sales tax to raise the money needed to run the federal government.

Declaration of Independence

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When in the Course of human events it becomes necessary for one People to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation. We hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world. He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good. He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them. He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only. He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures. He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people. He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within. He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners, refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands. He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers. He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries. He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance. He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures. He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power. He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation: For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States: For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world: For imposing taxes on us without our Consent: For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury: For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offenses: For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies: For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments: For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever. He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us. He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people. He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation. He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executors of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands. He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions. In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people. Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.

Constitution for the United States of America

We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Article I

Section 1. All legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Section 2. The House of Representatives shall be composed of Members chosen every second Year by the People of the several States, and the Electors in each State shall have the Qualifications requisite for Electors of the most numerous Branch of the State Legislature.

No Person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the Age of twenty five Years, and been seven Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

Representatives and direct Taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective Numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole Number of free Persons, including those bound to Service for a Term of Years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other Persons. The actual Enumeration shall be made within three Years after the first Meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent Term of ten Years, in such Manner as they shall by Law direct. The Number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty Thousand, but each State shall have at Least one Representative; and until such Enumeration shall be made, the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose three, Massachusetts eight, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations one, Connecticut five, New York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware one, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, South Carolina five, and Georgia three.

When vacancies happen in the Representation from any State, the Executive Authority thereof shall issue Writs of Election to fill such Vacancies.

The House of Representatives shall choose their speaker and other Officers; and shall have the sole Power of Impeachment.

Section 3. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof, for six Years; and each Senator shall have one Vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled in Consequence of the first Election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three Classes. The Seats of the Senators of the first Class shall be vacated at the Expiration of the second Year, of the second Class at the Expiration of the fourth Year, and of the third Class at the Expiration of the sixth Year, so that one third may be chosen every second Year; and if Vacancies happen by Resignation, or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary Appointments until the next Meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such Vacancies.

No Person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty Years, and been nine Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no Vote, unless they be equally divided.

The Senate shall choose their other Officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the Absence of the Vice President, or when he shall exercise the Office of President of the United States.

The Senate shall have the sole Power to try all Impeachments. When sitting for that Purpose, they shall be on Oath or Affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two thirds of the Members present.

Judgment in Cases of Impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from Office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any Office of honor, Trust or Profit under the United States; but the Party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to Indictment, Trial, Judgment and Punishment, according to law.

Section 4. The Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by Law make or alter such Regulations, except as to the Places of choosing Senators.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every Year, and such Meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by Law appoint a different Day.

Section 5. Each House shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members, and a Majority of each shall constitute a Quorum to do Business, but a smaller Number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the Attendance of absent Members, in such Manner, and under such Penalties as each House may provide.

Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behaviour, and, with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member.

Each House shall keep a Journal of its Proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such Parts as may in their Judgment require Secrecy; and the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.

Neither House, during the Session of Congress, shall, without the Consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

Section 6. The Senators and Representatives shall receive a Compensation for their Services, to be ascertained by Law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all Cases, except Treason, Felony and Breach of the Peace, be privileged from Arrest during their Attendance at the Session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any Speech or Debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other Place.

No Senator or Representative shall, during the Time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil Office under the Authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the Emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no Person holding any Office under the United States, shall be a Member of either House during his Continuance in Office.

Section 7. All Bills for raising Revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with Amendments as on the other Bills.

Every Bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a Law, be presented to the President of the United States; If he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the Objections at large on their Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such Reconsideration two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the Bill, it shall be sent, together with the Objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a Law. But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by Yeas and Nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the Same shall be a Law, in like Manner as if he had signed it unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return, in which Case it shall not be Law.

Every Order, Resolution, or Vote to which the Concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of Adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the Same shall take Effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the Rules and Limitations prescribed in the Case of a Bill.

To make all Laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into Execution the foregoing Powers, and all other Powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any Department or Officer thereof.

Section 9. The Migration or Importation of such Persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the Year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a Tax or duty may be imposed on such Importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each Person.

Article II

Section 1. The executive Power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his Office during the Term of four Years, and, together with the Vice President, chosen for the same term, be elected, as follows.

Each State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, equal to the whole Number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress: but no Senator or Representative, or Person holding an Office of Trust or Profit under the United States, shall be appointed an Elector.

The Electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by Ballot for two Persons, of whom one at least shall not be an Inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a List of all the Persons voted for, and of the Number of Votes for each; which List they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the Seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the Presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the Certificates, and the Votes shall then be counted. The Person having the greatest Number of Votes shall be the President, if such number be a Majority of the whole Number of Electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such Majority, and have an equal Number of Votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately chuse by Ballot one of them for President: and if no Person have a Majority, then from the five highest on the List the said House shall in like manner chuse the President. But in chusing the President, the Votes shall be taken by States, the Representation from each State having one Vote; A quorum for this Purpose shall consist of a Member or Members from two thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a Choice. In every Case, after the Choice of the President, the Person having the greatest Number of Votes of the Electors shall be the Vice President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal Votes, the Senate shall chuse from them, by Ballot the Vice President.

The Congress may determine the Time of chusing the Electors, and the Day on which they shall give their Votes which Day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No Person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any Per-

In Case of the Removal of the President from Office, or of his Death, Resignation, or Inability to discharge the Powers and Duties of the said Office, the Same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by Law provide for the Case of Removal, Death, Resignation or Inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what Officer shall then act as President, and such Officer shall act accordingly, until the Disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.

The President shall have Power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of their next Session.

Section 3. He shall from time to time give to the Congress Information of the State of the Union, and recommend to their Consideration such Measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary Occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in Case of Disagreement between them, with Respect to the Time of Adjournment, he may adjourn them to such Time as he shall think proper; he shall receive Ambassadors and other public Ministers; he shall take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed, and shall Commission all the Officers of the United States.

THE CONSTITUTION PARTY

Advocating State Rights and State Citizenship

We, the founders of the Constitution Party, hold that our federal government has consistently violated the Constitution for the United States of America. The Founding Fathers designed the U.S. government to serve us - the people. It was not designed so that we the people would serve government. We no longer wish to see Americans dependent upon or enslaved by government. Generations of Republican and Democratic administrations have made it abundantly clear that they are incapable of managing the nation's affairs competently, justly or lawfully. The CP is dedicated to ensuring the unalienable right of every American to Life, Liberty, Property and the Pursuit of Happiness by defending the Constitution for the United States of America and making certain that it stays the law of the land.

The right to own one's life is a natural right. It requires the rights to freedom and property ownership in order to sustain that life. Therefore, the CP holds that no one has the right to dictate to anyone else how to live. It further maintains that no one holds a higher moral authority to compel anyone else to behave in a particular way. The CP maintains that each individual has the right to behave according to his or her self-determined moral principles, provided the pursuit of these principles causes no physical harm to any other person or his property. The CP believes that if there is no victim there is no crime. The CP believes that any violation, including a majority of voters or citizens, may take away or violate the rights of an individual.

Accordingly, the CP calls for a reordering of national priorities. We aim to restore the right of every individual American to be a sovereign citizen, as well as the provision that all 50 states be free from unlawful federal interference so they can self-govern. Our goal is to create a truly free country where all people will learn to be responsible for their own welfare. Upon achieving this goal, enterprise will flourish, thereby creating an atmosphere of prosperity, abundance, tolerance and compassion.

Therefore, the CP offers the following platform to ensure our rights and those of our children:

1. Under no circumstance does the federal government have the power to violate the Constitutionally guaranteed rights of an individual.
2. Under no circumstance does the federal government have the power to violate the sovereignty of the states as defined in the 10th Amendment to the Constitution.
3. Each individual should be free to do whatever he chooses with his own person or property, provided he does not physically harm the person or property of another. People who harm others are to be forcibly segregated from the rest of society by government. It is society, not the criminal, that should be shown leniency.
4. The CP supports full private property rights. We reject the idea that federal government may dictate use of private property or confiscate property without full and just compensation pursuant to the limits of the Constitution.
5. Each individual adult has the right to keep and bear arms, providing the owner has never been convicted of a violent crime involving the use of a weapon.

6. The CP advocates the maintenance of the strongest national defense force in the world. The CP does not advocate military interference in the affairs of other nations. The CP further believes that the U.S. should protect its sovereignty by maintaining full control over its own defense systems and not turning them over the United Nations.

7. The CP advocates full financial freedom. The CP believes that individuals have the right to keep all money or property they have lawfully earned, to provide for themselves and their families. The CP believes it is not government's business to know how much money you earn, where your money or property is kept, or to require you to keep records on its behalf. Accordingly, it believes that government has no right to use any of its agencies to intimidate people into revealing how much money they have or earn, with threats of jail terms and property seizures.

Government has no right to force an individual to report how much money he or she deposits or withdraws from a bank. It also has no right to force an individual to report how much money he or she takes into or out of the country. These laws force Americans to spy and report on each other.

This stance requires the elimination of the Internal Revenue Service and the income tax code, the elimination of all gift and estate taxes, as well as any other direct tax not authorized under the Constitution for the United States of America. To the extent revenue is needed to support the federal government, within the limits of the Constitution, excise taxes (i.e. a national sales tax) are authorized in Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution.

The elimination of these unlawful taxes would cause business to skyrocket, create millions of jobs, and significantly reduce unemployment and welfare lines. It would also reduce crime.

The CP calls for repeal of the 16th Amendment or formal recognition by the government that it was never ratified by the states and is therefore illegal.

8. The CP calls for the restitution of sound money, preferably a hard dollar backed by gold.
9. The CP insists upon the elimination of the budget deficit by a rigorous program of downsizing federal government and eliminating entitlement programs. The CP also calls for the elimination of burdensome interest payments on the national debt by ridding the American people of this debt once and for all.

10. The CP advocates the elimination of entitlement programs. Just as no individual has the right to steal from you, the government has no right to steal from you on behalf of other individuals, that is, to redistribute your wealth. The money you earn belongs to you and no one else. How can you properly support yourself and your family while you are constantly being robbed? The price of personal freedom is individual responsibility. Consequently, it is not government's job to "save" people from poor choices, calamities, or the vicissitudes of life. At the same time, the CP encourages everyone, individuals and private institutions alike, in the strongest possible terms, to give to the charities of their choice, to care for the homeless, the helpless, and the needy. Charity is traditionally the work of religious organizations, individuals, private institutions and foundations. In contrast, giveaway programs run by the federal government rob individuals of the ability and desire to be charitable.

The CP further believes that the elimination of giveaway programs will greatly alleviate the nation's immigration problem. The CP believes in phasing out the Social Security program after current obligations to the elderly are met. We believe retirement programs are best handled by the private sector.

11. The CP believes that federal government has no lawful or moral authority in health care. The CP believes that government involvement in health care will adversely affect the health of the majority of Americans.

The CP believes that federal government has no right to limit our choice of doctors, or medicines they prescribe, whether they be "alternative" or American Medical Association certified. Government also has no right to dictate what vitamins ought to be available.

The CP opposes the proposed national health card. This card will ultimately be used as nothing less than a national tracking device that will result in the further loss of personal freedom.

12. The CP endorses full economic freedom. The CP believes that government should not set prices, set quotas, or create laws concerning hiring, firing, rents, wages, unionization, or any aspect of non-coercive private commercial behavior. Economic freedom would be a boon to both small and large business.

13. Government does not have the right to legislate morality. Adult consensual behavior ("victimless crimes") are a matter of individual adult morality and not a matter of lawful statute. The traditional organizations for discussion and persuasion regarding moral issues include churches, synagogues, youth clubs, chambers of commerce, and other local social organizations.

14. The CP advocates a strong local police presence for violent crime. By eliminating laws against victimless crimes, police will be able to focus on violent crimes, making police more effective and public safety a reality. The prison system will then have ample space to house violent criminals for the full course of their prison terms. The streets will be safe, the country's legal and prison systems will unclog, and vast amounts of money that add to the budget deficit will be saved.

Nevertheless, a government that must break the law in order to enforce the law is not a government worth having. Therefore, law enforcement officers and agencies must be above reproach with regard to due process of law, personal privacy, freedom from unreasonable search and seizures, and all the other fundamental constitutional guarantees. The CP believes that any government agent or employee who does not abide by, or who violates the Constitution should face mandatory criminal penalties.

15. The CP believes that all judges must be directed to inform every jury of its lawful sovereignty under the Constitution in that it may find any defendant not guilty if it judges the law, even law upheld by the Supreme Court, to be defective, unwarranted, unconstitutional, or wrongly applied.

The CP believes that we are at the beginning of a movement, a movement toward individual freedoms, as our Forefathers planned. We believe that people have had enough of the taxes and the intimidating tactics of an out-of-control, unaccountable government which has lost sight of its role as our servant. We believe it is time again to make the government accountable to us - the American people - and to restore our personal freedoms which have been slowly but systematically taken from us. We believe that if we as a people fail to act, the course on which the ship of state is currently set is clear: an accelerating bankrupt socialist police state.

To all Americans who want to keep their rights: whether it be the right to speak your mind, the right to keep the money you earn, the right to use your property as you wish, the right to bear arms for the defense of your family from any threat including government, the right to engage in noncoercive behavior, the right to not wear a seatbelt or a motorcycle helmet, the right to choose a doctor or the medicine of your choice, the right to end your life, or the right to begin a life - these are your personal choices, not the government's.

To all Americans who feel alienated from the politics of our system and are tired of being treated like juveniles: we understand your frustration and your desire for change. Come join us! No matter who you are or what you do, come join us. It's not whether you are on the left or the right, liberal or conservative, it's your individual rights that matter.

LITERATURE

Crossing the Rubicon

Adapted from James Baldwin

In Roman days the Rubicon, a stream in north-central Italy, marked the boundary between Italy and Gaul. By law, Roman magistrates could bring armies into Italy only by permission of the Senate. By marching his legions across the Rubicon in 49 B.C., Julius Caesar committed himself to a showdown with Rome itself.

Rome was the most powerful city in the world. The Romans had conquered all the countries on the north side of the Mediterranean Sea and most of those on the south side. They also occupied the islands of the sea and all that part of Asia that now belongs to Turkey.

Julius Caesar had become the hero of Rome. He had led a large army into Gaul, that part of Europe which today includes France, Belgium and Switzerland, and turned it into a Roman province. He had crossed the Rhine and subdued a part of Germany. Caesar's army even went into Britain, a wild and remote country to the Romans, and established colonies there.

For nine years Caesar and his army had served Rome loyally and well. But Caesar had many enemies at home, people who feared his ambitions and envied his accomplishments, people who cringed everytime they heard Caesar called a great hero.

One of these persons was Pompey, who had long been the most powerful man in Rome. Like Caesar, he was the commander of a great army, but his troops had done very little to win the applause of the people. Pompey saw that, unless something occurred to prevent it, Caesar would in time be his master. He therefore began to lay plans to destroy him.

In another year the time of Caesar's service in Gaul would end. It was understood that he would then return home and be elected consul, or ruler, of the mighty Roman republic. He would then be the most powerful man in the world.

Pompey and other enemies of Caesar were determined to prevent this. They induced the Roman Senate to send a command to Caesar to leave his army in Gaul and come at once to Rome. "If you do not obey this command," said the Senate, "you shall be considered an enemy of the republic."

Caesar knew what that meant. If he went to Rome alone, his enemies would make false accusations against him. They would try him for treason, and keep him from being elected consul.

He called the soldiers of his favorite legion together and told them about the plot that had been made for his ruin. The veterans who had followed him through so many perils, and had helped him win so many victories, declared they would not leave him. They would go with him to Rome and see that he received his due rewards. They would serve without pay, and even share the expenses of the long march.

The troops started toward Italy with flags flying. The soldiers were even more enthusiastic than Caesar himself. They climbed mountains, waded rivers, endured fatigue, faced all kinds of dangers for the sake of their leader. At last they came to a little river called the Rubicon. It was the boundary line of Caesar's province of Gaul; on the other side lay Italy. Caesar paused a moment on the bank.

He knew that to cross the stream would be to declare war against Pompey and the Roman Senate. It might involve all Rome in a fearful strife, the end of which no man could foresee.

"We could still go back," he told himself. "Behind us lies safety. But once we cross the Rubicon into Italy, turning around is impossible. I must make the choice here."

He did not hesitate long. He gave the word, and rode boldly across the shallow stream.

"We have crossed the Rubicon!" he cried as he reached the far shore. "There is no turning back."

The news was shouted along the roads and byways leading to Rome: Caesar had crossed the Rubicon! People from every town and village turned out to welcome the returning hero as he marched through the countryside. The closer he drew to Rome, the wilder people celebrated his arrival. Finally Caesar and his army reached the gates of the city. No troops came out to challenge them, and there was no resistance when Caesar marched into the city itself. Pompey and his allies had fled.

For more than two thousand years, men and women facing daring decisions have thought of Caesar at the edge of the stream before they too crossed their Rubicons.

Federal Authorities Israel's (Hidden) History Discipled over Randy Weaver Incident

CAJI News Service

WASHINGTON - Deputy Attorney General Jamie S. Gorelick, the Justice Department's No. 2 official, blamed the FBI, the U.S. Marshals Service and the U.S. attorney's office in Idaho for events that led to the murder of Vicki Weaver by an FBI sniper.

The senior FBI official involved in the incident at Ruby Ridge, ID, was to be disciplined. For his punishment, Acting Deputy Director Larry A. Potts received - a letter of censure. Deputy Atty. Gen. Gorelick headed the recommendation of FBI Director Louis J. Freeh to restrict the punishment to a letter of censure.

The Weaver incident began in August 1992 when U.S. Marshals shot and killed Randy Weaver's 14-year-old son, Sammy. The U.S. Marshals claimed they were attempting to arrest Weaver on weapons charges.

Lon Horuchi, the FBI sniper from the Hostage Rescue Team, shot and killed Vicki Weaver with a head shot while she was standing in the open doorway, holding her 10-month-old baby. Horuchi also wounded Randy Weaver and his friend Kevin Harris.

If politics makes strange bedfellows, then a certain parley of 1941 may qualify as political pornography. In a shoot-out last year, a clandestine meeting took place between a Zionist representative and two emissaries of Adolf Hitler. Stern's agent, Naftali Lubenshik, had a shocking proposal for the two Nazis.

The written proposal began by establishing Stern's ideological kinship with Nazism and his sympathy for Hitler as a Jew-free Europe. It also praised the German Reich government for its support of Zionist activity inside Germany and efforts towards Zionist "emigration plans."

Then, the proposal stated that the establishment of the historical Jewish state on a national and totalitarian basis, and bound by a treaty with the German Reich, would be in the interest of a maintained and strengthened future German position of power in the Near East. Proceeding from these considerations, the NMTA (i.e. The Stern Gang) in Palestine, under the condition that the above-mentioned national aspirations of the Israeli freedom movement are recognized on the side of the German Reich, offers to actively take part in the war on Germany's side.

Amazingly, the Stern organization, then fighting against British control of Palestine and for the establishment of a Jewish state was prepared to ally itself with Hitler, against their common enemy Britain. Of course, Stern's sympathy for Hitler's goal of a Jew-free Europe was based on his assumption that these Jews would end up in the newly-formed state of Israel, rather than the barracks of a concentration camp. Nevertheless, as an ardent Christopher Hitchens points out, "It is important to note here that the (Stern) approach was not based, like that of some Indian nationalists, simply on a rejection of Britain as the colonial enemy. The proposal clearly affirmed that the Stern Gang was 'closely related to the totalitarian movements of Europe in its ideology and structure'."

Gang Warfare

Of course, not all Zionists were pro-Nazi. In fact, at the outbreak of World War II, Zev Jabotinsky, the leader of the far right-wing Zionist organization in Palestine, agreed to support military operations against the British and was even willing to cooperate with them against Germany if the need arose.

Jabotinsky's position caused a rift with fellow Zionist Avraham Stern, who broke with Jabotinsky and founded the Stern Gang, later known as LEHI (a Hebrew acronym for Fighters for the Freedom of Israel). When Stern was killed by the British in a shoot-out last year, leadership of the group was assumed by the British lieutenant Yitzhak Yezenskiy, today known as Yitzhak Shamir, the former Israeli Prime Minister.

According to Hitchens, Shamir never renounced his association with LEHI even after LEHI members murdered Count Folke Bernadotte, the United Nations mediator in Palestine, who had earlier helped rescue the Jews of occupied Hungary from Hitler's Final Solution.

Hitchens reports that, in July of 1986, Shamir's past led Professor Yeshayahu Leibovitz, former editor of the Encyclopaedia Hebraica, to warn, "Within three months, we will have a Prime Minister who was a leader in an organization which offered its services to Hitler. Leibovitz then compared Shamir and Stern with former UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, saying that Waldheim was at least drafted into Hitler's army, while LEHI volunteered."

Fans of Mussolini, Too

Zionist links to fascism did not begin with the Beirut meeting of 1941. In the 1930's, even the relatively moderate Zev Jabotinsky expressed admiration for Mussolini's Italian regime. (Indeed, many American politicians did likewise.) In fact, Jabotinsky's and later Stern's gunmen even received training in Italy, and repaid Mussolini by participating in terrorist strikes against his enemies. In addition, Avraham Stern had been sending signals to the Axis as early as the fall of 1940. At that time, with Britain alone standing in opposition to the Nazis, Stern met with one of Mussolini's agents in Jerusalem, but the discussions apparently had no concrete results.

One wonders why such cases of uncompromising Zionist pragmatism, the subject of spirited and informed debate in Israel itself, are rarely acknowledged in America's "free press." Then again, maybe these examples are not all that shocking. Rather, they may be among the many historical examples of an old Middle Eastern proverb: The enemy of my enemy is my friend.

in a mineral depleted condition because of deficient soil, then 64% of the calcium and 73%-80% of the iron, magnesium, phosphorus, potassium, zinc and copper is removed from the wheat when refined.¹⁹ After being refined the manufacturer places 3 synthetic nutrients to take the place of the 100 natural nutrients that were removed in the refining process. The manufacturer then calls the white wheat flour "enriched wheat flour". You may want to call the white wheat flour "magnesium, chromium, selenium and iodine." The best mineral supplements are available in chelated form, which means that the minerals are attached to a protein molecule which enhances absorption into the bloodstream.

There are many books written about the proper amount of minerals to take in supplement form. Your personal need for minerals must be determined individually. Future articles will discuss individual minerals in more depth. It is virtually impossible to state here the correct amount of minerals that you need because the needs of your body are so specific. The best way to determine the type and amount of minerals that you need is to have a nutritional test performed.

Hopefully, you now have a more thorough understanding of your body's need for mineral rich food and mineral supplements to feed your organs. Consciously choose foods that are highly nutritious and mineral rich. Eat more minerals everyday and you will get more out of life each year.

considering everything that can cause minerals to be missing from your food, you may want to consider the need for taking mineral supplements. Mineral supplements are available in liquid, capsule, powders, or tablet forms. Minerals are divided into two groups: macro minerals which are needed in large amounts, and trace minerals which are needed in small amounts. Minerals needed in large amounts include calcium, magnesium, sodium, potassium, and phosphorus. Trace minerals include zinc, iron, copper, manganese, chromium, selenium, and iodine.¹¹ The best mineral supplements are available in chelated form, which means that the minerals are attached to a protein molecule which enhances absorption into the bloodstream.

came from many sources and was published in "Strategic Investment" lending credibility to the story.

Strategic investment/March 22, 1995, behind the lines, by Jack Wheeler - The slaughter of dozens of women and children in Waco by government stormtroopers under the command of Field Marshall Reno may pale in comparison to what has been planned for late March: a nationwide BATH/FBI assault on private militias as the prelude to a possible declaration of martial law throughout the United States. All leaves and vacations have been canceled for BATH/FBI personnel, and for various State Police and national Guards such as California's. The Army's infamous Joint Task Force Six (which did the training for Waco) has been training BATH jackbooters with Bradley Assault Vehicles at Ft. Bliss, Texas. Government agent provocateurs are set to plant fully automatic and heavy weapons like rocket launchers, on the property of militia leaders. Every militia in the country - and there are dozens, many of which are well-armed and well-led by former or even active-duty officers - is on a state of Red Alert. Should Reno be stupid enough to actually attack them militarily, there is going to be a lot of blood. The establishment media is programmed to immediately thereafter thunderously bellow for nationwide gun confiscation and even martial law. The Senate Armed Forces Committee has been alerted and is questioning key Defense and Justice people behind closed doors. Hopefully, Reno's Waco 2 can be stopped in time. But that it was plotted in the first place should be a sobering lesson as to what a horrifying extent liberalism, the political philosophy of the administration and the Democratic Party, has been converted into a close cousin of fascism.

Three Congressmen believed these stories to be true and wrote letters to Janet Reno asking for an explanation. They cited federal law enforcement sources. No answer was forthcoming. Nothing could happen unless something were to occur that would turn the public against the militia. I put out feelers through our people across the nation and the answer came back the same. We could not identify any patriot or militia organization that would do anything of the nature that would be required to justify an all out assault upon patriots and the militia. We knew only that the March dates were bogus. April approached. I had no hard evidence that anything would occur in April, only reports from many credible sources, and fearing this could be an attempt to discredit the Intelligence Service, the "Hour of the Time" and "Jerusalem", we maintained silence. Ordo Ab Chao...

On Monday, April 17th the Orange County Register reported that the FBI will open an international police training academy in Budapest. In an incredible admission of the socialist agenda Clinton announced that American law-enforcement agencies are rapidly expanding overseas, deploying agents to dozens of countries in scores of joint investigations. This followed on the heels of the recent announcement that the FBI had opened an office in Moscow and what used to be the KGB had opened an office in the United States. These facts herald the formation of a nucleus for a world police/investigative body. David Johnston of the New York Times reported, "Last year, Fresh opened an FBI office in Moscow, one of an overseas network of 24 such offices, forward command posts for an increasingly global detective agency. He has also been a driving force behind the Budapest training academy."

My worst fears became reality on Wednesday morning, April 19, 1995. One of our agents woke me from a sound sleep shortly after 7 am, Arizona Standard Time, to report that a bomb had gone off at the federal building in Oklahoma City. I ran to the phone and began to contact our agents. Responsibility for the on-scene supervision of the investigation was assigned to our Oklahoma Station Chief. Information began to flow.

It became obvious within hours that what had happened and what was being reported by the media were two, completely different, events. The event reported by the news networks must have taken place in China because it sure didn't happen in Oklahoma City. The official investigation of the Intelligence Service and CAJ News Service produced the following:

1. Witnesses reported hearing two distinct explosions, seconds apart, from the ominous rumbling of the building falling in upon itself.

2. Survivors who were in the building near the front wall reported being hurled out of the front of the federal building through cinder block walls into the street.

3. The front of the federal building was thrown out, away from the federal building, and into the building across the street.

4. A large crater was blown into the street immediately in front and slightly to the left of center when facing what had been the front of the federal building.

5. The first video tape of the disaster shows two large columns of black smoke, one rising from the crater area in the street, and the other rising from the center of the federal building.

6. Undetonated plastic explosives were found on the scene by the first rescue workers. A rocket launcher was also found. This was reported then later denied. Witnesses stick to the original story.

7. Officials reported that a second bomb had been found and police began an immediate evacuation of the entire downtown area. Radio buffs and Intelligence Service agents monitoring scanners confirmed that radio traffic indicated that a second bomb had been found. Explosives experts were called in along with a bomb disposal truck. This was seen on television and those monitoring

"Shepherd", "Son of God", "Lord of Lords", "the Savior of Man", "the Messiah" and "Creator of the World."

13) Both did fasting.

14) Both were represented as "the seed of the woman bruising the serpents head" (remember the obelisk as the erected serpent, the deliverer of the seed of all life).

15) One was "the Lion of the Tribe of Judah" and the other was "the Lion of the Tribe of Saki."

16) Both were "the Beginning and the End", "the Alpha and the Omega."

17) Both said, "I am the resurrection."

18) Both existed prior to human birth and existed in both heaven and earth at once.

19) Both were without sin and came to destroy the devil and his works.

20) Both were omniscient, omnipotent and omnipresent.

21) Both performed many miracles. Each curing a leper and "all manner of diseases".

22) Both rose the dead, could read thoughts and control death.

23) Both had 12 apostles (like our Sun has 12 zodiacal apostles).

24) Both denounced riches and rich men.

25) Both were celibate and remained unmarried.

26) Both were crucified with two thieves (as symbolized on the caduceus and phallus).

27) Both had last suppers.

28) Both forgave his enemies.

29) Both descended into hell, was resurrected from the dead and then ascended to heaven.

30) Many people reported seeing these ascensions.

31) Both promised they would return on a white horse (as did Buddha).

32) Both of their heads were anointed with oil (as is the rod or phallus around the world in all ancient religions).

33) Both were 33 years old.

The doctrines and the holy scriptures of both Krishna and the much later Christ are nearly identical.

Well, I promised to tell you the direct connection between the most famous obelisk in the New World, landing on the moon, the first close-up photos of Mars and the death of Vincent Foster. The answer is "July 20th" and in the next issue, I will give you the details.

Mead's books, as the most praise worthy and very reliable, as they fell in place with other subjects and core subjects I had to take at seminary. My biggest surprise when at seminary was the double standard, one for the church goers who must have the esoteric and the those who went to seminary have the esoteric (hidden) teachings and we were pledged to keep all this secret."

Either I am free or I am not. Which is it? Who decides?

a manner that demonstrates a conscious personal choice between the two.

A man may tell me that I am free, but words are funny things these days. Maybe he really means that I'm free to choose between wearing my shackles on my ankles or on my wrists, and can select at will between the two locations. What kind of freedom is that? Is it the freedom I'm free or I'm not. Which is it? Who decides?

I've been told by philosophers and the practitioners of world wisdom that there are no absolutes; that everything is a matter of perspective; that all perspectives have equal validity. What this means is that nothing can ever be wrong as long as someone else thinks it is right. How can this be possible? What happens if MY perspective is that freedom is the opposite of bondage, and YOURS is that the acceptance of bondage guarantees freedom? Then what? What is the practical application in this circumstance?

Do I willingly give up my freedom so that YOU can have bondage? Where is the logic in that? It is not possible for freedom to be forced on anyone unwilling to accept it, because the maintenance of freedom requires some effort and conscientious attention. Bondage requires nothing. It doesn't even require that you live. It won't matter if you don't. Under those conditions, how with the put-level drive and belief in righteous justice that the objective was to kill any ATF agents no matter what? Had the burning desire for vengeance grown so excessive that it no longer mattered how else might die in an assassination attempt as long as somebody from the ATF paid the price for Janet Reno's iniquity? Was this really a demonstration of the level of mentality and planning ability of the militia? And what is it that directs murderous anger toward the servants when it is the master who gives the commands?

There is NOTHING other than pure insanity which looks like an argument favoring a militia perpetrator with a Waco motive. Yes, I admit people can be stupid, unthinking, reactionary jerks. But that list of characteristics is inconsistent with the type of planning, expertise, patience, and attention to detail which would have been required to successfully execute this disaster.

On the other hand, I consider: Is there any conceivable way that the bombing of the Murrah Federal Building might fulfill any of the objectives of those who would enslave us? If this event did not reduce us to begging for slavery in exchange for freedom from a similar end, it is possible that some hot-headed patriot radical could be provoked to seek revenge? Could such a response provide the justification needed to proclaim that all lovers of Constitutional Liberty are purveyors of senseless violent death and thus are worthy of the same? If no vengeful act could be provoked, would the event be sufficient to inspire fear in the hearts of patriots and thereby silence the opposition or, at the very least, drive it farther underground? And if none of these objectives could be achieved, would it not still serve as a tremendous training opportunity? Could there possibly be a more accurate method of assessing "troop readiness"?

I am tired. So very tired and emotionally drained. These thoughts and questions and observations have swirled around in my head until I'm sick at their unrelenting persistence. If ever there was an appropriate time to draw on inner reserves of strength and resolve it is now.

William Cooper has always said: "Whoever fires the first shot loses the war." Was it not fired Wednesday morning? If we crumble in response, then we will give up the dead who stilled resistance and deserve whatever comes. If we over-react, then we are forced into active conflict from a defensive stance, and there are no strategic advantages to exploit in that posture. This is a VERY intense situation and may be of long duration. It looks like it's going to take a cool head and a keen eye to accurately read the situation and respond appropriately. I pray God puts ice packs and spectacles on us all.

ing telephone was answered a thousand possible scenarios flash through the mind. Do we not even have the freedom to die with some semblance of dignity? Must we be slaughtered like laboratory mice in the Great Experiment gone awry? Have we so accepted and so believed the victim mentality that it is becoming a manifested reality on a monstrous scale?

This is intolerable. This is unconscionable. This is murder of the most heinous and sickening sort. There are two very obvious sides to this guilt and innocence coin. It seems that only listeners to "The Hour of the Time" have the slightest awareness that a coin even exists.

The government and press contend that the motive for this insane act was an unresolved anger over the Waco Massacre. In response, I must ask: Has anyone at all resolved this anger about Waco? Has anyone? If not, why haven't there been numerous attempts at retribution? Why has it taken two years to finally strike for vengeance? And why choose a response which achieves nothing toward that end? Consider that all 15 of the ATF agents employed in the Murrah Federal Building were unharmed by the explosion. Of those 15, were any of them specifically involved in the planning, execution, or aftermath of the murders of the Branch Davidians? Were any of them active figures of authority in the incident? Have the militias so lost touch with their put-level drive and belief in righteous justice that the objective was to kill any ATF agents no matter what? Had the burning desire for vengeance grown so excessive that it no longer mattered how else might die in an assassination attempt as long as somebody from the ATF paid the price for Janet Reno's iniquity? ing scanners confirmed that the disarming of the bombs was in progress. The following was intercepted by scanner and reported by 3 different people. We did not hear it and we have not been able to obtain a tape. The experiment gone awry? Except for minor differences all 3 people reported exactly the same conversation. First voice - "Boy, you're not gonna believe this!" Second voice - "Believe what?" First voice - "I can't believe it... this is a military bomb!" After several hours the bomb disposal truck left and the report of a second bomb was denied.

8. Two people identifying themselves as firemen, but refusing to give their names, reported that the second bomb was in fact several bombs, olive drab colored cans of fulminate of mercury, clearly labeled as such, with MilSpec numbers, which were found intact on separate floors next to the elevator shaft. Officials denied these allegations. The following day an elderly gentleman who identified himself as the father of one of the firemen called to confirm that his son had reported the same findings to him. He refused to give his name.

9. Initial examination of the bomb scene revealed that a minimum of two bombs were used to inflict the damage that penetrated the steel reinforced concrete pillars that held up the building were sheered off at ground level clear back to the third pillar throughout the building. The experts have confirmed that this is impossible with the one bomb scenario being presented by the government and the media. The reports of the survivors who were blown out of the front of the building into the street and the front of the building blown outward across the street support their findings. A Retired General who had spent over 25 years in explosives research and ultimately commanded the explosives research facility for a branch of the military informed me that the pillars could only be taken down at ground level by satchel charges or shaped charges placed upon each pillar. His mathematics are impressive. We do not have the expertise to understand what he is talking about with his credentials someone had better listen.

After the brief but painful accusations against the Islamic community and the arrest of several people of mid-eastern descent, including one traveler at London's Heathrow Airport, the accusations swung right around as I had predicted to patriots and the media. The most incredible hate campaign in the history of the world was directed toward Islamics, Christians, whites, males, patriots, militias, anyone using diesel fuel, anyone using fertilizer, anyone from the state of Michigan, all who support the Constitution for the United States of America, and people who live in Arizona, especially tall radio hosts.

The New York Post dubbed me a "white supremacist". Jesse Jackson in the Los Angeles Times called me a "white supremacist". My wife is Chinese and I am part American Indian. My daughter is half Chinese, part American Indian, English, Scotch and Irish.

The standard Ryder rental truck reared its ugly head and within hours the FBI not only had enough parts to identify the type of truck but had already traced it to the rental agency. (Incredible)

The FBI quickly produced what appeared to be drawings of near photograph quality of two suspects. When I contacted, during my broadcast, upon the photographic quality of the drawings, the FBI issued a new drawing of John Doe #2 the following morning which looked more like a drawing. Since McVeigh had already been captured they left his alone.

The man who is accused of bombing the federal building was caught speeding in a car, his own, without license plates. He was arrested, without resistance, for carrying a concealed weapon and jail. (How convenient.) A CBS feed on the KU satellite band reported that the initial report that the concealed weapon was a gun was in error. The commentator (a woman) reported that the concealed weapon for which McVeigh was jailed was a knife. This report was never used to our knowledge.

The FBI and the media reported that McVeigh lived in Kingman, Arizona at Canyon West Trailer Park. He was described as having lived in trailer #19, under the name of his girlfriend. They reported that he was evicted after a stormy nine months in which the man played loud music, left piles of beer cans and a wrecked car by the trailer and belligerently refused to obey camp rules. It was also reported that McVeigh fired automatic weapons frequently into the desert. When our agents questioned these same people they stated that McVeigh had lived in trailer #11 from June 1993 until early September 1993. They described Tim McVeigh as a nice man, quiet and neat. "He was a nice guy, a model tenant". The pawn-shop owner, William Stump, killed in Texas by the same John Doe #2 on April 19th in a white government van traveling south on highway 44 at 5:15 pm. She called the FBI on the morning of the 21st and reported what she saw. She was told an agent would contact her for an interview. No one showed. She called again on Monday the 24th. The person who answered the phone said and agent would come out and interview her. She is still waiting.

Members of the St. Lucie-based second regiment of the Florida State Militia reported that Timothy McVeigh attended a local militia rally last year as a bodyguard for Mark Koernke. Koernke denies any knowledge of McVeigh.

On April 21st our Station Chief obtained the seismograph report from Oklahoma University which can be found in this issue. Dr. Luza informed us that it shows two unmistakable "events" that happened in the Oklahoma City area, the first at 9:02 am followed by the second 10 seconds later. Both are surface events similar in signature to a quarry blast, both of approximately the same duration and magnitude. No other disturbance occurred the morning of the 19th of April in the Oklahoma City area.

The seismograph confirms witness reports of two explosions. In our interview Dr. Luza said the second event could not have been an echo or bounce back because the seismograph would have shown a distinctly separate pattern if it had been either of those two things, and geologists are easily able to recognize the secondary pattern when such an echo or bounce-back occurs. When asked if the second event could have been caused by the crashing of the building as it collapsed, Dr. Luza said no, and explained that had the seismograph recorded the collapse of the building, the second markings would have been of a much lesser magnitude, and it did not take the building ten seconds after the explosion to begin to collapse. In his closing remarks, Dr. Luza stated that the two events were of identical magnitude, as if the same bomb had gone off twice, and that if the second event had been caused by an echo or anything else, the seismograph record would not have shown such perfect consistency between the two events. His conclusion was that there were definitely two separate explosions in the Oklahoma City area separated by only 10 seconds.

The official interpretation of the seismograph record from the Oklahoma Geological Survey Seismograph Station in Norman, Oklahoma is that they recorded a large surface-wave "mini" at 9:02:13 a.m. (140213 UTC) shortly after the explosion at the Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. The seismometer is located approximately four miles north of Norman and sixteen miles from downtown Oklahoma City. A second large surface-wave was recorded at 9:02:23 a.m. (140223 UTC). The location and source of the second surface-wave recording is unknown. The record is read from top to bottom and from left to right. The small vertical offsets of the horizontal lines are minute marks. Hour marks are twice as long as the minute marks.

We obtained a second seismographic reading from the Oklahoma City Omniplex. The station is very close to the federal building and the seismograph reflects that fact. The two explosions are registered on this graph as blank spaces where the needle literally jumped off the sheet. The events are separated by a 10 seconds of ink. No experts exist at the Omniplex station. The employee who gave us our copy said it was miraculous that the Omniplex had any record at all because the seismograph had not been working up until 40 minutes prior to the explosions. The Omniplex is located at the Kirkpatrick Center, at 50th and Martin Luther King Blvd. The FBI seized the original seismographic record. Our copy is a copy of a copy made before the seizure by an employee.

One of the federal agents who died in the blast was the former head of President Clinton's Secret Service team of bodyguards. How many does that make?

Oklahoma Governor Frank Keating is an ex-FBI agent.

Anti-terrorism bill is now on the fast track. In a "Bulleted Poll" conducted by KTBS-TV Channel 3, Shreveport, Louisiana and reported on April 28th the following question was asked - "Would you be willing to give up some of your freedom for a little security?" 74% reportedly fell into the category bracketed by "some-not-all".

On April 28th the tape of James Nichols bearing was released by court order and it was blank. Nothing whatsoever could be heard on the tape. It was the only record of the proceedings. Office workers state that almost all of the FBI and BATF agents and an unbelievable number of supervisory personnel did not arrive at work at their usual time on Wednesday, April 19, 1995 and were not in the building when the bomb went off.

A card was sent to the hospital for the survivors by a 3rd grade boy. It reads: "Hello, I hope you feel better from the explosion in Oklahoma. I wish it never had happened. I felt sad when it happened. I felt bad for the people who died and the people who got hurt. That's only the beginning of what's going to happen to America. Hope you feel better, Jonathan Roden"

There are many militias. The first is, and always will be, the Militia of the "whole of the people", armed to protect themselves from betrayal by their representatives, and from a government that might become, or has become, a tyrant. The second, third, and fourth is the militia of the state, the national guard, state guard, and the unorganized militia of the several states of the union. The fifth, sixth, and seventh is the United States militia, the National Guard, Naval militia, and the unorganized militia of the federal government, its possessions, territories, and trusts.

Thomas Jefferson, in a letter to James Madison, said that "a bill of rights is what the people are entitled to against every government on earth, general and particular..." Again, in his First Inaugural Address, he included among the "essential principals of our government" ... a well-disciplined militia ... (and) the supremacy of the civil over the military authority ... and should we wander from (these principals) in moments of error and alarm, let us hasten to retrace our steps and to regain the road which alone leads to peace, liberty, and safety.

◆ 18 USCS, Section 1385 - Use of Army and Air Force as posse comitatus - Whoever, except in cases and under circumstances expressly authorized by the constitution or Act of Congress, willfully uses any part of the Army or the Air Force as a posse comitatus or otherwise to execute the laws shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than two years, or both. (added Aug. 10, 1956, ch 1041, Section 18(a), 70 A Stat. 626; June 25, 1959, P.L. 86-70, Section 17(d), 73 Stat. 144.)

We the people, the citizenry, have both a right and a responsibility, a duty, individually and collectively, to keep and bear arms, in order to defend ourselves against all enemies of our Constitution, and the rights and freedoms thereby guaranteed. What kind of arms? Any kind it takes! Obviously, arms must be kept and borne in a responsible manner in order to serve the Constitutionally stated need and purpose.

The Second Amendment is not concerned, as some absurdly would suggest, with hunting and sporting rights, albeit these rights exist, along with the right to defend our lives and property. The intent of the Second Amendment is to arm the citizenry to defend itself against "every government on earth," foreign or domestic, which would make itself an enemy of the people by violating their Constitutionally protected rights.

Government is the servant of an armed citizenry; it is the tyrant over an unarmed citizenry. (Witness the many tragic illustrations of this deplorable state around the world today.) No government by the people and for the people, need fear the arms of the people; only a government against the people and their rights needs fear their arms. To lay down our arms is to transfer all power, all control, from the people to the government, thereby destroying, not securing, our freedom, for which once men were willing to die. The price of liberty, as Thomas Jefferson and others have warned, is eternal vigilance.

This is not to be construed as an indictment against our present government. But vigilance requires that we be ever aware that tyrannies have arisen, both from within and from without, throughout history, that history, indeed, often repeats itself, and that it can happen here!

Arise from indifference, take a stand, unite, form militias, and advise your congressmen of your resolve. Remind them that their duty is to serve the people as provided by our Constitution, and that any action which would violate our Constitutionally protected rights will not be tolerated. And don't neglect to thank those congressmen who support and defend our rights, that is, if you can find one.

On September 15, 1994, President Clinton, in his speech, praised the patriots of the American Revolution for having taken up arms against a tyrannical government. I wonder if he even knew what it was that he said. I wonder if he knows that he is dangerously close to being another tyrant. These days, I wonder if he knows anything at all.

Where does this leave us? The Report of the Subcommittee on the Constitution of the Committee on the Judiciary, United States Senate, 97th Congress, 2nd Session, February 1982, page 11 states:

◆ The "militia" refers to a concept of a universally armed people, not to any specifically organized unit. When the framers referred to the equivalent of our National Guard, they uniformly used the term "select militia" and distinguished this from "militia". Debates over the Constitution constantly referred to organized militia units as a threat to freedom comparable to that of a standing army, and stressed that such organized units did not constitute and indeed were philosophically opposed to, the concept of a militia. That the National Guard is not the "militia" referred to in the Second Amendment is even clearer today. Congress has organized the National Guard under its power to "raise and support armies" and not its power to "provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia". (H.R. Report No. 141, 73rd Congress, 1st session 2-5-53). This Congress chose to do in the interests of organizing reserve military units which were not limited in deployment by the strictures of our power over the constitutional militia, which can be called forth only "to execute the laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections, and repel invasions." The modern National Guard was specifically intended to avoid status as the constitutional militia, a distinction recognized by Title 10 U.S.C. Section 311 (a).

A militiaman is simply any citizen in his capacity as a defender of the community, who is obliged to do so within his or her ability. Militiamanhood is a role which citizens may play as the situation requires. It is not a permanent condition. But just as each citizen has a duty to defend the community he also has the duty to prepare himself to play that role effectively, and to join with others in his community to train and to function as organized forces, and the elected officials of his community have the duty to facilitate that organization and training. If those officials fail in their duty the militiaman must carry on without their participation.

The militia can only be called up by the federal government for those things specifically outlined in Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution for the United States of America. Militiamen cannot answer a call from the federal government for any other purpose. The militia may be called up by a state governor for many reasons other than those cited in the U.S. Constitution. No militiaman can ever answer any call which would involve him or his militia unit in anything that is illegal, unlawful, or un-Constitutional. No militia unit or militiaman can ever accept or carry out any order which is illegal, unlawful, or un-Constitutional. If the federal or state government ignores the restraints put upon them by their Constitutions and Constitutional Laws the Militia is obligated, it is their duty, to march upon that government and enforce the laws of the state and of the federal government and restore those Constitutions as the Supreme Law of the land.

A nation or world of people who will not use their intelligence are no better than animals who have no intelligence. Such people are beasts of burden and steaks on the table by choice and consent.
