February's home & school discussion: CONSIDERATE

Considerate:

acting kindly toward others' feelings

Wing-Words for Soaring:

-Being kind is on my mind...

-Polite is always right...

-Sometimes I must "take flight" to stay polite!

-Flight NOT fight!

-I don't mock; I rock!

-I will be deliberate to be considerate.

Being Considerate means- acting kindly toward others' feelings. This is a great character trait to practice at home, at school and everywhere you go each and every day.

This month, take some time to think about the people in your family and ask yourself questions such as; "Am I being considerate of their feelings?" "Am I patient when they are giving me suggestions?" "Am I polite when they ask me to do something?" If you can answer "yes" to those questions, then you are being considerate at home!

School is also a great place to practice being considerate. Are you polite to the teachers? Do you obey their instructions the first time they give them to you? What about your classmates...Do you take turns playing what they want? Do you say kind words to them? What about the cafeteria...Do you keep your table and floor area clean?

As you can see, there are many chances for you to soar with your character by being considerate!
