We're excited to introduce you to the always interesting and insightful London Miller. We hope you'll enjoy our conversation with London below.

Alright, London thanks for taking the time to share your stories and insights with us today. Let's start with the story of your mission. What should we know?

I started from being inspired by others to start my own business. I fought to prove I can do anything. And with me having adhd it was hard but not impossible

London, love having you share your insights with us. Before we ask you more questions, maybe you can take a moment to introduce yourself to our readers who might have missed our earlier conversations?

My name is London I am 12 and I started my business when I was 9. I saw kids at a young entrepreneur event and I thought about starting a business of my own. The name of my business is Londonade. I sell lemonade of different flavors. I think that my purpose makes me different from others. I strive to motivate and inspire others. I'm happy that I got this far especially since I have adhd bc it was hard for me. I want more people to know my purpose and my story.

We'd love to hear a story of resilience from your journey.

When I was diagnosed with adhd I was seen differently. For example, I was going to be kicked off the cheer squad because they didn't believe I could strive. I proved them wrong. I started a Business, Wrote a book, and now I have a song. I've pushed through the negative energy and made the best out of the bad times. This illustrates my resilience.

Can you tell us about a time you've had to pivot?

When I get to meet very important people at the even i go to, I find it very rewarding. It's an experience that most don't get to have, I can't exactly name a specific time because I have a lot of times when I felt accomplished. It's a life changing experience that doesn't happen every day.
