2021 Summer Camp Directory

The Family Support Program at the School of Social Work at the University of North Carolina is pleased to provide you with the updated 2021 Summer Camp Directory: A Free Resource Guide for Families with Children who have Special Needs. COVID-19 has impacted every area of life, including the ability for children to be able to enjoy summer camp.

As the state of the country is constantly evolving each summer camps will make a decision on what is best for the camp and children on whether to continue camp in person, virtually, or to cancel. This directory was completed with the information that was provided at the end of 2020 and is likely to change in the coming months. Please reach out to individual camps you are interested in to confirm if and how they will be doing camp Summer 2021. You may also access the 2021 Summer Camp Directory.pdf at our website. Please share this information with families and colleagues.

Did you know?

March is National Social Work Month which recognizes the empathy and dedication social workers across America deliver. National Social Work Month was first organized in March of 1963. Learn more about the field of social work at: www.naswnc.org
