On the Grey Wall John Acosta

“I work through my emotions on canvas, and though I care about the outcome, I care more about how my emotions turn out after I've completed the painting. I share my emotions in my art and titles and want others to truly acknowledge how they feel and search for ways to use the art as a way of reflecting and to be motivated in improving themselves and their community. The paintings I've selected for this exhibit tell a personal story and some are exclusive to my personal collection and not usually up for sale. For this one-month exhibition I wanted to make these works of life's struggles and blessings available to others.”
