

Continued from page 2...

After his acquittal in the 90's, Simpson moved to Miami, Florida with his children. Simpson spent a lot of time playing golf, flashing his famous smile and waving a cigar at onlookers. He was a regular on public courses. His attempts to attain membership at private clubs were repeatedly rejected. As was his application to live in the gated, exclusive enclave of DeGarmo Estates. The 1968 Heisman Trophy winner who broke the NFL rushing record in 1973, was arrested on Sept. 16, 2007 at the Palace Station Hotel and Casino and charged with 12 felonies, including armed robbery and kidnapping, in a case involving his sports memorabilia. Simpson told the police he was trying to reclaim his stolen possessions. In October of 2017, he was released from Lovelock Correctional Facility in Nevada after serving a nine-year sentence for armed robbery. His first home after being paroled from prison was a $1.4 million mansion owned by a friend on the Red Rock Country Club golf course. He then moved on to another property at the Canyon Gate Country Club before moving to the secluded Rhodes Ranch Golf Club in Summerlin where his son, Jason, had a home. Simpson often had breakfast at Ranch House Grille, where the staff essentially afforded him privacy. The Juice, was an advocate for golf courses to remain open during the 2020 Covid 19 Pandemic/ and lock down. OJ must have been so ecstatic when he golf courses took off during the lock down, because it was one of the few outdoor activities allowed. In spite of it all; OJ remained a good father to all of his children. During his last months he appeared on both of the rappers Mase and Cameron sports talk show, It Is What It Is. OJ joined in on the show in September last year to discuss professional football over a 17-minute appearance on video call. During the chat, he expressed his support for running backs (the position he played for the Buffalo Bills) like New York Giants' Saquon Barkley and Las Vegas Raiders' Josh Jacobs, who have been in contractual disputes with their teams as organizations have been reluctant to sign people of their position to long-term deals.

Many of the sports enthusiast player's memorabilia has been sold online thru auction houses, and on eBay. Things such as old golf bags ,equipment, and signed golf tournament programs. OJ Simpson told fans he was "well" and "looking forward to getting back on the golf course" in a video posted to Twitter, formerly X, just weeks before his death. The last time his lawyer LaVergne visited; Simpson only had the strength to ask for water and to choose to watch a TV golf tournament instead of a tennis match. "Of course he chose golf," LaVergne told The Associated Press in an interview. "He was an absolute golf fanatic." It was also rumored that he enjoyed smoking Romeo y Julieta (Cuban) and Ghurka cigars. The Juice would of witnessed seeing the 2024 olympics this summer; It would of been 40 years since he was running with the Olympic Torch in Santa Monica, Ca, the summer of 1984. O.J. Simpson made his transition at his country club home southwest of the Las Vegas Strip on April 10th, 2024.

OJ carrying the Olympic Torch in 1984; Running in Santa Monica, Ca

OJ's golf bag when he was sponsored by Hertz Rental cars

Enjoying a day on the Course

OJ Simpson Autographed Riviera Country Club Nissan LA Open Genesis Invitational 1993