GREENBRIDGE WELCOMES JAMES SHAW AS DIRECTOR OF CLIMATE OPPORTUNITY AND GLOBAL DEVELOPMENT

Wellington, New Zealand

Greenbridge Capital Management is pleased to announce that James Shaw will be joining the team as Director of Climate Opportunity and Global Development.

James brings with him a deep understanding of the climate challenge and the opportunities that lie within it, as well as a proven track record of delivering solutions and leading through complexity, nationally and internationally. His roles as Minister for Climate Change, Associate Minister of Finance, and Minister of Statistics, as well as his earlier roles in the commercial world with PwC and HSBC, make him well-suited to our work and a special addition to the Greenbridge team.

“I’m excited to be working with a business that at its very core is about opening up climate opportunities to investors and capital markets, which is a significant but poorly understood challenge that we continue to face, both here in New Zealand and abroad. The Greenbridge team understands that, and individually have been leaders in this field, so working together just makes sense” says Mr. Shaw.

“We’re building a different kind of investment management company with all of the diverse talent required to deliver on the opportunities we see in the markets over the long term” says Craig Weise, founder of Greenbridge. “So this is a great fit for all of us, and we are really looking forward to working together. James’ considerable capabilities, combined with his networks, passion, integrity and authenticity, make for a fantastic addition to the team.”

After first enjoying a well-deserved break, James initially will be based in Wellington and working for Greenbridge on a part-time basis. His role will focus on representing Greenbridge in the market and opportunity development, and well as acting as Chair of the firm’s impact committee.
