Law Enforcement Officers lack the necessary financial education needed to be prepared for the financial and psychological impact of retirement. Education on mitigating the unexpected in an inherently risky profession is currently lacking. Law Enforcement Officers are natural risk managers on the job but are underprepared in managing personal and family risks. This course addresses common missteps, mistakes, and myths regarding investing, saving, debt management, risk management, estate planning, tax planning, and retirement planning. Upon completion, participants will be equipped to take charge of their personal financial situation and journey both during their career and after retirement.

Key Learning Objectives:

- Understand the financial impact of retirement on Law Enforcement Officers.
- Learn strategies to mitigate financial risks in both personal and professional life.
- Gain knowledge on investing, saving, debt management, and retirement planning.
- Develop skills in estate planning and tax planning.
- Equip participants to take control of their financial future.
