Eastern Equine Encephalitis - EEE Transmission Cycle

Eastern Equine Encephalitis Transmission

The Eastern equine encephalitis virus (EEE) spreads from mosquitoes to birds. The Culiseta melanura mosquito, which primarily bites birds, is responsible for spreading the virus among birds. The virus then multiplies in the birds' bloodstreams.

People and other animals, like horses, become infected with the virus when mosquito species that feed on many birds (such as Culiseta melanura) and those that bite people (such as Aedes) are attracted to dead-end hosts because of their blood. They can then transmit the virus to their bloodstreams and carry it to another biting mosquito.

EDC

West Nile Virus - WNV Transmission Cycle

West Nile Virus Transmission Cycle

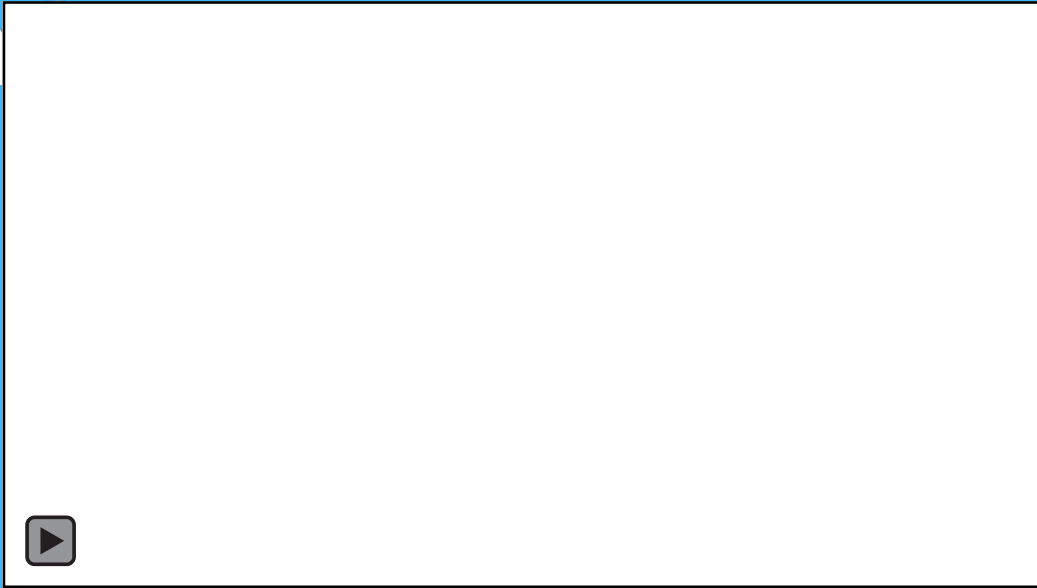

In nature, West Nile virus cycles between mosquitoes (especially Culiseta species) and birds. Some infected birds, like starlings, have high levels of the virus in their bloodstreams and mosquitoes can become infected by biting these birds. After about a week, infected mosquitoes can pass the virus to more birds when they bite.

Occasionally, West Nile virus also kills and infects people, horses and other mammals. However, horses, horses and other mammals are dead-end hosts. This means that they do not develop high levels of virus in their bloodstreams, and cannot pass the virus on to other biting mosquitoes.
