

Love Heals

By Rebecca Smith

When no one sees me...

I've been cast away and misunderstood.
Never to feel what all children should.
As the days pass and turn into years
I have no one around to wipe away tears.
If there's a God out there, I beg of you
Bring me home for a different view.

As a small child they said no one else could hurt me
But the strangers were mean so I ran seeking safety.
I saw things only nightmares consist of
My world is empty, not an ounce of love.
If there's a God out there, hear my plea
Take away the pain and set me free.

A childhood spent locked away, doing time
Suffering consequences for my parents' crime.
Feeling hopeless and lost with nowhere to go
An emptiness that only the foster kids know
If there's a God out there, why can't you see
The pain that dwells deep within me?

There's no family that wants a broken teen
Labeled as trouble, a past that's obscene.
Forgotten by this world that doesn't care
Given a life that just isn't fair
If there's a God out there, I need you now
I'll give you my heart, that's my vow.

Someone Sees Me...

An answer to my prayer is finally revealed
With hope that my wounds might be healed
A grown up I trust, giving me love
Says I'm a blessing sent from above.
God gave me light to chase away pain
The darkness fades with the love I gain.

There's no greater feeling than when you belong
Loving you despite what you've done wrong.
A gentleness like I've never known
Encouragement that no one has shown.
God heard my plea and gave me hope
Removed the grip of the rope.

You found me when I was ready to quit
Showed me mercy when I was throwing a fit
You gave me guidance to expose my abilities
And gave me grace through my hostilities
God, you see me and know my heart
All things are possible with You in my cart!

Believing in me when all hope was lost
Ready to catch me regardless of cost
I've never known a love like you share
An unwavering devotion lined with care
God sends us angels when we are willing to see
Transformative love that sets you free
