Vocabulary tips! Just like you can take a bus somewhere, you can take a boat, take a ferry, take a plane, take a train, take a taxi, or take a subway somewhere. If you get there too late, you can miss all of these things. If you get there just in time, you catch it. "When I get to school" means the same as "when I arrive at school." Other ways of getting somewhere include on foot, by car, or on your bike. Then, you can say that you walk there, drive there, or bike there.

Imperatives

Stop talking and get to work.

Imperatives are used to give people advice, for invitations, or to tell them what to do. They look like the basic form of the verb. Come to our house for dinner. Please wait here for your turn. Stop talking and get to work.	Negative imperatives begin with do not, don't or never . Don't talk so fast. Never drink and drive. Don't forget to finish your work.	Imperatives are often used for giving instructions, such as for recipes, exercises and how to get somewhere. Mix eggs and milk together. Find the errors in these sentences. Turn left at the traffic light.
